Vol. 25 No. 1

DRAYTON VALLEY, ALBERTA, TUESDAY, JANUARY 3, 1989

Price .35

$100,000 won by local man

Don Baumann is a lottery bowl winner.

No, he's not a football player - Don and his wife, Cindy, are lottery players who keep track of their WCLC on-line tickets by saving them in a household bowl until after the draw dates. Once or twice a month, one of them goes through the tickets with a copy of Luck magazine checking for winning numbers.

"Total disbelief"

That's what the Drayton Valley resident was doing when he came across a The Plus number, near the bottom of the bowl, whose digits matched all six digits of The Plus number drawn Nov. 19. The match made him a $100,000 lottery bowl winner.

At first, he couldn't believe it. "My reaction was total disbelief," he said.

Though all four family members are excited about the winnings, Baumann says they're not rushing into anything. "The windfall will take a lot of planning - nothing's been decided."

Eddie the Eagle?

An unidentified skier leaps in the air after taking off from a makeshift jump at the Drayton Valley ski hill. The hill opened up two weeks ago. Last week area skiers were treated to some freshly-made snow courtesy of the ski club's recently acquired snowmaking machines.

New supermail system survives Christmas rush

Drayton Valley's new mail system survived its first Christmas without a single complaint of misguided mail.

"It was a big test," said Postmaster Le-Roy Robinson, "because we only started (the supermailbox program) in November."

He said employees worked two hours overtime per day to re-address and deliver packages and envelopes to their new mailing addresses.

"I knew it would be a lot of work but we were ready for it," he said.

Robinson said he used to hire temporary staff to alleviate the extra workload but he decided against it this year because of the supermailboxes.

"We felt it would work better to use existing employees because they're familiar with the system," he explained.

The post office did encounter minor problems, however, with supermailbox locks that froze up after a bout of sleet in the area.

"We just asked people to get de-icer," he said.

He said the angle of the padlocks on the old mailboxes prevented freezing but the new locks are more susceptible since they're not sheltered.

"It was a minor thing, though. The sun eventually came around."

Mill ownership changes hands

By Steve Fletcher

Forest-products giant Weyerhaeuser Canada Ltd. has become the majority owner of Pelican Spruce Mills.

Al Owen, sole owner of Pelican for 20 years, told The Western Review last week discussions are continuing as to the total share transaction.

"When, what and how much is still being negotiated," said Owen.

But he added that Weyerhaeuser, a minority shareholder since 1987, will hold the majority of the Alberta company's shares by the end of the week.

Owen will remain Pelican's chief executive officer for a period of time that has yet to be determined.

The change in ownership will have no effect on the Drayton Valley plant, said Owen, who added that "no personnel changes are planned." In total, 900 workers are employed at Pelican operations throughout the province.

Al Owen

'still negotiating'

Owen would not disclose the sale price nor would he divulge the reason for the sale.

But he said he chose Weyerhaeuser because he believes it's well suited to control Pelican.

"I suppose it comes the closest to my philosophy about dealing with people," said Owen. "It's as fair as it can be to its employees."

Drayton Valley MLA Shirley Cripps said the Weyerhaeuser purchase will be a benefit to the Drayton Valley plant because of the company's "access to good markets and good market connections."

Cripps added the government is not concerned about the sale.

She said Pelican was offered a loan guarantee when it was building its Drayton Valley mill, "but I don't think he (Owen) ever needed it."

"We don't owe the government five cents,"

Owen said. "Not one nickel (of provincial money)... went to build the mill."

He confirmed the province had offered a loan guarantee, but it was never required.

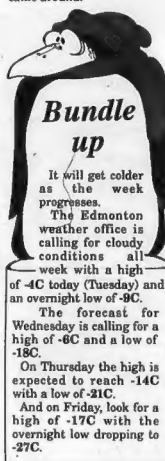

Town Councillor Tom McGee said he was surprised by the Pelican purchase.

"I wasn't anticipating this for another six or seven years. It will be interesting to see if any changes take place."

McGee said the new ownership's greatest test locally may be on the environmental front.

"One of my biggest concerns is that I hope they look after the environment better," he said, pointing out he continues to get complaints from residents about fly ash and noise from the plant.

Weyerhaeuser Canada is a subsidiary to a multinational company based in the United States.

Bundle up

It will get colder as the week progresses.

The Edmonton weather office is calling for cloudy conditions all week with a high of -4C today (Tuesday) and an overnight low of -9C.

The forecast for Wednesday is calling for a high of -6C and a low of -18C.

On Thursday the high is expected to reach -14C with a low of -21C.

And on Friday, look for a high of -17C with the overnight low dropping to -27C.

Local News Briefs

Yellowhead MP Joe Clark spent $45,162 on travel last year, according to Public Accounts figures. In all, federal cabinet ministers spent $1.2 million on travel for departmental business during the 1987-88 fiscal year.

The minister with the largest travel expenses was Benoit Bouchard, who spent $156,501 in the fiscal year which ended March 31.

Prime Minister Brian Mulroney recorded a modest $16,469.

Frances Law of Evansburg won $10,000 in the 12 Days of Christmas lottery.

Andy Dornan, former executive director of the Drayton Valley Association for the Developmentally Handicapped, is the administrator at Extendicare, a private nursing home in Mayerthorpe.

Dornan continues to make his home in Drayton Valley.

Recreation director Paul Nielsen says drinking problems at the Drayton Sports Centre have been resolved. However, he is aware of comments that claim the town's recent stand on teams and individuals drinking in the facility are too tough.

Henry Rodeau, reeve for the MD of Brazeau, isn't expecting a provincial election much before the municipal election in the fall.

He doesn't see the premier calling one in the spring as the constituencies have apparently been given until April to get all their people in place.

Minor hockey executive are scheduled to meet tomorrow (Wednesday) night to discuss plans for Minor Hockey Week Jan. 14-21.

Cold weather last week allowed the town to flood the snowbank rink at MacKenzie Park.

Candidates seek election to first-ever board

The following is an introduction to most of the 18 candidates running in the Jan. 11 Twin Rivers board of trustees election:

Ward One

Vi Helm - A former chairman of the County of Parkland board of education, Helm also served as vice chairman for three years and chairman of the finance committee for two years.

Helm says this wide experience is her biggest asset and adds that her interest lies in being a part of a new district and serving the area's schools.

Helm has lived in Drayton Valley for 27 years and was a member of the Twin Rivers advisory board.

Tom Hutton - Vice principal of H.W. Pickup school for 17 years before retiring in 1986, Hutton spent 37 years as a teacher and administrator in the educational system. "I want to see the kids here get the best possible education," is his response when asked why he's running.

Hutton has lived for 22 years in Drayton Valley, including four years as a teacher at Frank Maddock high school.

Nancy Jacobs - "I'm very interested in education and I believe if you're going to live in a community, we should all do our part...this is a chance to do my part," says Jacobs, a resident of Drayton Valley for 26 years.

A mother of three, Jacobs has worked as a bookkeeper in family-owned businesses and has also been involved with the chamber of commerce, the retail merchants' association and for 12 years - treasurer of the high school board.

Ward Two

Colleen Andersen - Andersen says concerns about the future education of the area's children led her to throw her name in the ring.

"I'm concerned about junior high kids not having textbooks, I'm concerned about overcrowded buses and I'm concerned about teaching standards that are not all they should be," says the mother of three.

Andersen has been involved in a volunteer capacity for a number of years with several Drayton Valley schools: she runs the H.W. Pickup hot-lunch program and helps with similar programs at Eljorado and Evergreen schools.

Henry Rodeau - Currently reeve of the Brazeau municipal district, Rodeau is running in what he calls an "extremely important election."

The former County of Parkland councillor says the first priority of the new school division will be to set up a business office and establish a budget that may exceed $10 million.

He adds that his experience will come in handy when the new board sets about to develop policies that will be crucial to the welfare of area students.

"They predict that in the next 12 years society will change more than it has in the past 88 years," says Rodeau. "The board will have to assist teachers in preparing children for the changes ahead."

Jo-Anne Schultz - Asked to run for the school board by a number of people in the area, Schultz says being a trustee would provide the opportunity for "getting in on the ground level" of a new school system.

Schultz adds that this is her first foray into local politics, but has been a parent volunteer in the school system for many years.

One of her main objectives if elected would be to ensure that "tax dollars are used to the fullest."

A homemaker with two children attending area schools, Schultz has lived most of her life in the Drayton Valley region.

Colene Davie - Most of her life has been reached for comment.

Ward Three

Bonnie Hunter - With five children in every school in town, Hunter says winning a seat on the school board would ensure "a mother's input" in the educational system.

She says she's been involved in the schools for seven years and would "like to see them run more efficiently and to the benefit of the students."

Hunter adds there's "room for improvement" not only in this area but throughout the province.

James Reid - Reid says he's "willing and able" to devote the energy needed to establish the policies and programs of the new school division. He said trustees will have to work hard in order to ensure the division "is set up properly and competently managed so that our children end up with the best educational system possible."

The ERCB area supervisor says the existence of the new division and the recent introduction of a new School Act will make it an exciting time to be a trustee.

Ward Four

Bruce Cropley - Cropley, who spent 14 years as councillor and school trustee with the County of Leduc, says concerns about enrolment "east of the river" was the incentive behind his decision to seek election in Ward Four.

He says he's always been interested in education and hopes to see the old attendance boundaries preserved.

"There's nothing better for young people than (being educated) in small schools," says the Lindsdale-area retiree.

Evelyn Haight - "I've been at this so long that I'd like to continue," says Haight, who's been involved with various pro-MD lobby groups since the 1970s.

The community-minded former accountant is "thoroughly familiar" with the area, having lived here all her life except for a five-year stint in Calgary.

"I'm intensely interested in education...and I feel I am quite capable of being a good representative."

Delores Olson - Ensuring the survival of Lindsdale school is the main reason behind Olson's quest for a trustee seat.

She says the small, rural school, which teaches children from kindergarten to Grade 9 has been "threatened (with closure) a few times" over the years.

"It's an ongoing thing. (We've been informed) it won't close down this year for sure."

Olson, a part-time battery operator, was born and raised in the area.

Ursula Springer - A teacher for 10 years, Springer has a background in education that will provide her with a sound perspective as a trustee.

"I'll be knowledgeable about both sides of the issue - I can relate from a teaching standpoint and a parent standpoint."

The Lindsdale school issue is a worrisome subject. Springer says rumors about the school's demise may be a factor behind the large number of candidates running in Ward Four.

"Probably most of what we hear is gossip or hearsay...but you never know; where there's smoke, there's fire," says Springer, who has two children attending Lindsdale school.

Mae Tryon - Maintaining a solid educational system in the area is a prime issue for candidate Tryon.

"I'd like to see that good educational standards are maintained with minimum bus times and good teachers," she says.

Tryon is currently president of the Lindsdale school parents association and has been active with the Lindsdale Hall Board Association for 10 years.

She's also concerned about Lindsdale's survival.

"We were assured that it will remain open until the end of the year. After that, it's up to the new school division and parent involvement."

"If they want their school they're going to have to fight for it."

Ward Five

Frances Ekstrom - Ekstrom is a parent and former school teacher who acknowledges she's well aware of many of the problems facing educators.

A strong supporter of small schools, Ekstrom says they should be maintained even at a higher-per-pupil cost. Upgrading Breton and Lindsdale schools is a "very important priority," adds Ekstrom, who considers education a partnership between community and educators.

Virginia Huber - A mother of two children, Huber says she wants to be a trustee because she "would like to see someone in there with children so that both views - parent and student - are represented."

Huber sees the maintenance and improvement of schools in the area as a top priority.

"I don't believe in centralization," she adds.

A volunteer helper in the school system for 10 years, Huber says she'd foster an understanding for the feeling of the community "if elected a trustee."

Carolyn Strand - Strand says she "thoroughly enjoyed" being a member of the Twin Rivers advisory board and wants to continue where she left off by becoming an elected trustee.

"I've reached the time in my life in which I feel I want to do more service to the community," says the Breton municipal administrator.

Her six-point electoral platform includes the modernization of smaller schools, the maximizing the use of tax dollars and ensuring students are challenged and motivated by the school environment.

A former research technologist at the University of Alberta, Strand has a bachelor of science degree and a certificate in local government administration.

Lynn Oberle - Could not be reached for comment.

Enforce the law on sidewalks

The town has a lot of bylaws to enforce. Last summer local residents saw the bylaw enforcement officer take a 'get-tough' policy with nuisance cleanup. That approach seemed to be very successful.

Now it's time to take that same 'get-tough' attitude with property owners who never clean their sidewalks.

Yes, believe it or not, there are property owners in the downtown core who never clean their walks in the winter time.

If they find it such a hardship to clean off the snow, they might consider a little sand.

A lot of people, especially our senior citizens walk downtown because it's handy. But they just tread lightly and cautiously because of the snowy and icy conditions of the walks.

Where is the bylaw enforcement officer now?

If property owners refuse to clean their walks (some may live out of town), it would be an ideal job for some of the clients at the Beehive Workshop. There are also others in town who specialize in cleaning away the snow and ice.

And there are also junior and senior high school students who are capable of such a job.

And, if this doesn't work, the town could have the walks cleaned and the bill could be added to the owners' property taxes, with an affixed deadline for payment.

If cleaning off the snow and spreading a little sand to combat the ice was done quickly, it likely wouldn't seem like such a big job.

These are not just a lot of words. Snowy and icy walks are a problem in town and the issue should be addressed NOW.

Loss of arm's use an unpleasant experience

Most people have suffered through the loss of an arm or leg for a short time.

So when I tell you it's very inconvenient, you'll understand. Especially when it happens 10 days before Christmas and you're looking at the end of January before things could be back to normal.

That has been my situation.

And you don't have to bend my arm (especially the right that's already in a sling) to get me to confess that it's been more than a bit uncomfortable. Especially when you're right handed.

There have been times during the past three weeks that I stopped to wonder how Terry Fox, Steve Fonyo and Rick Hansen were able to manage in our world of high technology and computers.

Speaking of computers, I have a brand-spanking new one installed in my office, but the banded-up arm has put any puttering around on hold.

Frankly Speaking

By Frank Ryan

The loss of my right arm has also caused some other problems. It has thrown a lot of pressure on my wife - something she didn't really need around the Christmas/New Year holiday.

It's also kept me from driving. That has meant giving into my wife, who doesn't usually drive when I'm in the same vehicle with two workable arms.

Believe me dear, I never doubted your driving. But, do you have to get so close to parked cars and trucks?

The lack of my dependable right arm may have saved me a couple of ounces over the holiday. I just couldn't shovel it in as fast as usual.

As you read this column, there's still a possibility surgery will be needed to correct the fracture. I'm keeping my fingers crossed that doesn't happen.

Before we get away from Christmas altogether... a note about our song books.

We still have about 300 at the office. If any schools, church groups or others would like some to stuff away for next year, stop into The Western Review.

Please, no calls asking us to save some. Drop into the office for yours.

County police future is still up in the air

The future of the county police is still very much up in the air.

The new Police Act saw members of the county police stripped of their hand guns

Dec. 31. The word 'police' is scheduled to be dropped from their title on April 1.

Wayne Gent, a member of the county police commission says a decision will likely be made this month as to whether the county police will be allowed to carry shotguns or rifles. That decision has to come from the solicitor general.

Gent says the Tomahawk Ratepayers Association is still hoping that something can be worked out, whereby the county police will be able to assist fish and wildlife officers in the area.

A lot of the issues are expected to be sorted out at a Jan. 4 police commission meeting.

Library opening soon

The new library is expected to open in mid-January.

That's the word from librarian Lois Peterson who says the move into their new quarters in the town's administration building went quite smoothly.

The book return chute at the new library is now operational for anyone who wants to return books. It would be appreciated if these books could be properly bagged at home.

Light-up campaign successful

The Drayton Valley Association for the Developmentally Handicapped has raised over $1,900 with its first Christmas tree light-up campaign.

"There were a lot of small donations. That shows the community is behind us," said Bruce Nicholls, Behive Workshop's executive director.

Boxes have been placed at numerous locations with the promise that a bulb will be lit on the town hall Christmas tree for every $10 donation.

"We'll collect all the boxes Jan. 1 and then we'll know exactly how much was raised," Nicholls said.

Though still $200,000 short in funds for a new building, Nicholls is optimistic the group will receive the capital in a grant from the provincial government.

"It could be as early as May," he said.

"It looks promising," he said, "just by the fact that (the government) hasn't turned us down yet," he added.

'Still reading the pamphlets'

The employees of the Drayton Sports Centre are still tackling the transition from the old arena to the new $1.5-million facility.

"We're still reading the pamphlets," said recreation director Paul Nielsen.

"(The arena) is fairly complex from an electrical aspect," he said.

Nielsen explained that employees who had only a fire alarm to worry about now maintain a sprinkler system, door alarms and other advanced equipment.

"Initially, it was intimidating but it's pretty basic once you get used to it," he said.

He said four full-time and one part-time facility operators act as "trouble shooters," handling each problem as it arises.

"Today we had a frozen pipe. We're not sure if we fixed it or not but we'll find out," he said.

Once employees are used to the new equipment, he said the arena will "basically run on its own like the old arena did."

Cleaning the facility, however, will permanently require more personnel and longer hours for current staff.

"The hours have increased because there's more work involved in trying to keep the building clean," said Sandy Lukach, facility operator.

"The dressing rooms are bigger, the lobby is bigger, washrooms are bigger," she explained.

She said two people now work evenings, instead of one, and a fourth full-time employee was hired under the Priority Employment Program (PEP) to alleviate the extra workload.

The PEP employee is sponsored by the provincial government for a four-month period, but Neilson says they will definitely require someone else on a permanent full-time basis.

"That's a budget item and we won't know what will happen until the new budget is approved," Neilson said.

Police step up search for thieves

Two major break-ins in Drayton Valley within the last two weeks have led the RCMP to step up their investigations.

RCMP believe that break-ins at Rex's Radio and Acklands Limited - in which a total of about $17,000 worth of merchandise was stolen - are the work of the same culprits.

A third break-in at VJ Disposals appeared similar in style to the two others but nothing has yet been discovered missing.

Rex's Radio was broken into early on the morning of Dec. 16. Const. Greg Feder says entry was gained by smashing the glass window on the front door.

The locking mechanism on the door required the thieves crawl through the window to enter the store.

It was a "smash and grab" burglary, said Feder. "They broke the glass shelving and display cases - they obviously didn't want to take their time."

Evidence at the scene reveals more than one person was involved, he added.

Once inside, the thieves quickly removed about $7,000 worth of equipment, including Toshiba and Electrohome VCRs, radar detectors, component stereos, compact disc players, video movies and compact discs.

The thieves "didn't take any cash," noted

Feder. "We're looking at people who know what they were looking for."

The break-in at Acklands was similar in terms of method, say investigating officers Feder and Const. Mark Fleming.

The Acklands theft took place sometime between midnight and 7:45 p.m. on Dec. 29. An early estimate is that $10,000 worth of equipment, including a pressure washer and various power tools, were removed during the night.

"All the places were entered the same way," said Fleming. "By breaking the plate glass window in the front door."

Thieves then used a wheelbarrow and a flat-bed dolly to remove the equipment.

Fleming said RCMP are hoping for the public's assistance in apprehending the criminals.

He said someone might have seen the thieves' vehicle parked at the southside of Acklands early Dec. 29.

Feder said that people concerned about innocently acquiring merchandise stolen from Rex's should phone the RCMP where a list of the serial numbers is available.

Anyone with information regarding these crimes should contact Drayton Valley RCMP or phone Crime Stoppers at 1-800-922-TIPS.

Painting of centre line will wait until spring

Painting the centre line on the Poplar Ridge road will have to wait until the spring.

That's the latest word from MD manager John Eriksson. Eriksson says the experts were called in for their advice, and they said this was a bad time of the year to even consider the project.

Two winter sports given full medal status for 1992 Olympics

By Alister Thomas
Alberta Sport Council
Two new events - women's biathlon and mogul skiing - will be full status medal sports at the 1992 Olympic Winter Games.

That's good news for Alberta athletes since many are world-class. For example, Yvonne Visser of Calgary and Jane Isakson of Thorsby are top-flight biathletes, while Pat Henry of Red Deer finished fourth in mogul competition at the 1988 Calgary Olympics where his sport was a demonstration event.

One year after those Games and now only three before the next ones in Albertville, France means other elite Alberta athletes are getting ready by competing in events all over the world. Alpine skier Karen Percy of Banff, an Olympic double bronze medalist, is in fine form as is figure skater Kurt Browning of Rocky Mountain House, who was ranked 15th before the 1988 Olympics and eighth after them.

Other alpine skiers to watch for are Camilla Burks of Canmore, Andrea Marchand of Calgary and Ed Podivinsky of Edmonton. Up-and-coming figure skaters are Michael Slipchuk of Edmonton, Angie Folk and Margot Bien, both of Calgary, as well as Joelle Tustin of St. Albert and Judith Tartal of Lethbridge. Carol Givson of Canmore is back to head up the cross-country ski contingent and with her are Peter Scouler of Banff and Keltie Van Binsbergen of Hinton.

In speed skating Patrick Anderson of Medicine Hat and Geoff Williams of Sherwood Park are hoping to make the national team, as is Calgary's Beth Taber, who also competed in cycling during the Summer Olympics.

High-flying ski jumpers to watch for are Banff's Colin Capel and Kirk Allen.

All in all, this winter will be action-packed at many Olympic sites as well as for our Alberta Olympians. For more information contact Alberta Sport Council, 963-9258.

Parkland Elks win bantam division final by default

The Parkland Elks won the 'D' division final at a bantam hockey tournament in Rimbey last week.

And, they didn't even have to lace on their skates. The Elks were awarded the 'D' division title by default after Hobbema failed to show up.

In earlier games the Elks dropped a 10-0 decision to Sundre and a 14-9 decision to Rimbey.

Ice Capades performer watching from sideline

Doug Pankiewicz is watching the Ice Capades from the sidelines.

The 24-year-old Drayton Valley man who has been with Ice Capades for the past six years, is currently nursing a cracked vertebra injury. It could be another month before Pankiewicz is back on his skates.

He was been skating with the central Ice Capades company, who have been performing in the United States this year. Next year he is scheduled to join the eastern group and two years down the road, will be a member of the western company.

Rangers break even

The Pile Base Rangers finished with a two-and-two record at the 13th annual Red Deer Legion Christmas pee wee hockey tournament.

Calgary Properties scored at the 41-second mark of the third overtime for a 6-5 win over the Rangers in their opening game. Robin Smashnuk and Bryson Kuzek had two-goal efforts for the Rangers.

Smashnuk came right back with a two-goal effort in a 5-4 win over Red Deer Fas Gas. Trevor DePatie had three goals and Greg Thompson added a pair in a 10-3 win over Innisfail.

And in their final game, the Rangers dropped an 8-2 decision to Sherwood Park. The loss came in the semi-finals of the consolation round.

Lariettes lose

The Whitecourt Hot Shots narrowly swept into first place Dec. 29 in girls hockey action against the Lariettes.

Whitecourt landed a 2-1 score with Lariettes' Rachelle Bills as the only local scorer.

Christmas still ahead for some Ukrainians

By Belinda Atkinson
Christmas is still to come for a group of Drayton Valley residents who see the world from a slightly different slant.

Approximately 10 families in the area will celebrate the birth of Christ Jan. 7 in reverence to an ancient calendar devised by Julius Caesar in 46 B.C.

"I don't really have anything against the new calendar (the Gregorian) but according to my dad the old calendar (the Julian) is supposed to be the true one," said Bohdan Urchshyn, a local resident who immigrated to Canada in 1930.

Unlike many Ukrainians, Greeks and Roman Catholics who follow the Julian calendar only during religious holidays, Urchshyn and his wife, Marnella, live every day by it.

"I'm not in a business where it really affects me," he said. "I was a farmer and now I manage a trailer court so I've always been able to come and go as I please."

The Julian calendar was removed from active use in 1603 by Pope Gregory XIII.

According to history books, Caesar's calendar had overestimated the length of a year by 11 minutes 14 seconds, and had, over time, shifted the seasons out of

The differences were minimal - the Julian adds three days every 400 years - but academics demanded its reform for 383 years before the Gregorian finally came into effect.

Julius Caesar had originally devised the Julian calendar to correct similar problems with a Roman republic calendar that had separated the calendar equinox and astronomical equinox by three months.

To the Urchshyns, mathematical details have little effect on the holiday or their lives.

The Julian calendar is simply a way of preserving their past and maintaining a lifestyle similar to their forefathers.

"It's worked in harmony from day one," he said, denying any discrimination over the family's beliefs.

"Like the neighbors just north of us, they invite us over for their Christmas and we invite them over for ours," he said.

When his children were in school, he said students liked the idea of a Ukrainian Christmas.

"The friends would all invite each other over," he said.

"A lot of Roman Catholics are swinging more toward the English calendar but I think we're quite happy," he said.

Stephen Herold, 38 and his stepson, Donald Kuehl, 20, died at about 2:30 a.m. when their car collided with another vehicle at a curve on Highway 39, five km northwest of Thorsby.

The crash also killed Michelle Magnan and Leona Gillie, both 17, of Thorsby. They were returning home from a hockey game.

According to the RCMP, both vehicles burst into flames upon impact.

Medical examiner officials had to use dental work to identify all of the victims.

The cause of the accident has not been determined.

'Cute' letters to Santa increased this year

The local post office received 300 letters to Santa Claus this Christmas, just slightly higher than last year's 280.
"We started getting them in September or October," said Postmaster Le-Roy Robinson. "They always start pouring in when the Sears catalogue comes out."

Ten staff members then began their annual letter reply program, each donating spare time to ensure anxious children received an answer from old Saint Nick.

"(The letters) were all so cute," he said.

The reply program has run locally for about 10 years and is an annual tradition in most outlets across Canada.

"It makes it kind of nice to help out that way," he said.

Robinson said most children ask similar questions like, "How many reindeer do you have?" or "Is Rudolph helping out this year?"

Occasionally, he said, a child asks for world peace but most simply list toys they'd like.

Petition 'very vague'

A lot of questions are being asked about the province's Community Facility Enhancement program.

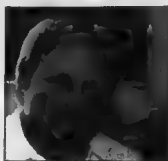

The Jasper school district, which also handles recreation needs in that mountain community, has circulated a petition (letter) to eight communities in west-central Alberta.

While Drayton Valley town council hasn't made any decision on the petition, recreation director Paul Nielsen indicates there's bound to be some questions asked.

"It's very vague," Nielsen admitted last week, while waiting for some clarification from MLA Shirley Cripps.

The recreation director says the communities in west-central Alberta that want some answers, are not alone. At a recent recreation meeting that included people from around the province, Nielsen says the matter came up, and several areas indicated their concerns.

"I read about the grants and it left me scratching my head," Nielsen said.

Paul Nielsen

It is the intention of the Jasper group to send the petition to Ken Kowalski, criticizing the distribution processes under the program.

"Our main concern is the fact that it is purely an MLA political decision that will inevitably cause friction and dissention, not only between communities, but also within communities," the petition says in part.

John Eriksson, manager of the MD of Brazeau, says that while they haven't applied for any funds, they have encouraged the golf and ski clubs to make application.

Capacity crowd attends Alder Flats Christmas concert

By Bernice Johnson
Alder Flats Covenant Church presented a musical concert entitled "Oh My Stars...It's Christmas!" on Dec. 11.

It was directed by Georgia Harrison with assistance from Debra Bossert, musical accompaniment by Barbara Beller. Costumes were designed by Brenda Hoffin and Ella Simon.

Alder Flats

The large attendance thoroughly enjoyed the performance. A delicious supper was enjoyed after the program.

The evening was also a farewell to the Harrisons who are moving to Calgary to pastor a. Covenant Church.

On Dec. 18, 1938 Eleanor Sheridan and Alex Danyluk pledged their vows. And on Dec. 4, 1988 they celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in the Alder Flats Community Centre with 125 people in attendance. They were the first couple to be married in the newly-built church.

Disease affects 350,000 Canadians

This is Alzheimer Awareness Month.

The society, formed in 1977, has chapters throughout Canada.

Studies indicate one out of every three families will lose a member to Alzheimer disease.

Next to cancer Alzheimer disease is the most prevalent disease known today. Affecting an estimated 350,000 Canadians alone, there is as yet no cure or any way to arrest the insidious three-stage progression of the disease until terminated by death.

Prior to its discovery in 1906 by Dr. Alois Alzheimer the disease had been thought to have been merely a senile deterioration which was common in older people. However, Dr. Alzheimer's studies demonstrated the condition affected much younger persons whose mental faculties commenced to deteriorate around the age of 40 and gradually progressed over a 20-year span.

To date, research has isolated three possible causes. These are a virus, chemical imbalance and a genetic factor.

It is essential the public become increasingly aware of the dreaded threat to all of us. With this awareness people can be confident the public and government agencies will rally to the support of the researchers, not only for greatly increased funding, but more importantly to the need for early diagnosis by neurologists and the essential equipment of loving care of the afflicted ones.

In the early stages the victims themselves are painfully aware of their predicament and need understanding from their family and neighbors.

Sekura benefit dance planned

A benefit dance will be held Saturday, Jan. 14 for Tim and Colleen Sekura.

Their home was gutted by fire last month. First Choice Entertainment of Drayton Valley has donated the music. Ladies will be preparing the food for a midnight supper.

The dance gets underway at 8 p.m. in the Rocky Rapids Hall.

All proceeds will be given to the Sekuras.

Technical complex planned for Whitecourt

The Pembina Education Consortium could be part of a high technical vocational education complex being planned for Whitecourt.

As a result of joint discussions between the Whitecourt public and separate school districts, the two have agreed in principle to proceed with the development of a sophisticated joint high technical/vocational education complex. The complex would offer a wide array of industrial and vocational training and locally developed high technology courses.

To ensure the most up-to-date courses which will accommodate both high school students and adults in a centre that will offer apprenticeship time for courses taken, a third education partner with a recognized adult education mandate will be invited to participate.

Joe MacLellan, executive director of the consortium who was in Whitecourt for the official announcement, says he is most definitely interested in being the third partner.

He plans to meet with representatives of the two school districts in the next week to 10 days.

"It's very encouraging. I'm pleased to see they realize the advantages of pooling our resources," MacLellan stated. Although no price tag was attached to the announcement MacLellan says there won't be anything like it in the province.

No definite plans have been made as to when construction would start. "If we hit the proper funding cycles it could be two years away," MacLellan figures.

The consortium, with their head office in Drayton Valley, has been offering programs in the Whitecourt area for the past four years. It's one of the areas the consortium has shown tremendous growth in the past year.

Oldsmobile stolen Christmas Eve

A cold-hearted criminal stole a vehicle Christmas Eve only to leave it discarded and damaged less than 30 minutes later.

The vehicle, a brown Oldsmobile, was parked in front of a residence on 46th Street. The owner had started the car, then left it running with the keys in the ignition in order for it to warm up.

When he returned he discovered it missing.

The Olds was located nearby by RCMP a half-hour later. The car suffered minor damage when it hit a tree on 46th Street.

Immunization clinic dates set

Four dates have been set for well child/adult immunisation clinics in Drayton Valley.

They will be held at the health unit office, located in the provincial building, from 9 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. and 1 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. on Jan. 4, 11, 18 and 25.

Ng petition surpasses target

The local petition calling for the extradition of accused U.S. mass murderer Charles Ng has already surpassed its 5,000-signature target, says organizer Don Regenwetter.

He said the petition, which is now being circulated as far away as Whitecourt, won't be mailed to the federal government for a few more weeks to give more people a chance to sign it.

"I haven't heard of anybody who hasn't signed it," noted Regenwetter. "Some want to sign it twice."

He added that Yellowhead MP Joe Clark's new duties as interim justice minister is good news for petition supporters.

"He can't shirk the responsibility now," said Regenwetter. Regenwetter will be sending copies of the signed petition to Clark, who, as justice minister, has the extradition of suspected criminals under his jurisdiction.

A recent Queen's Bench decision to extradite Ng, who is serving a prison sentence in Calgary, is currently being appealed.

Ng faces 11 murder charges in California. A total of 66 businesses and retail outlets in Drayton Valley carry copies of the petition.

Hamper recipients down

The number of families receiving help from Santas Anonymous was down last month from the previous year. Hampers were prepared for 87 families, well below the 110 assisted in 1987.

Danny Thompson praised all the volunteers who came out. "Everything went very smoothly," Thompson told The Western Review.

While toy, food and financial donations were slow coming in, Thompson says things picked up during the final week.

Light-up contest winners

The three judges who were faced with the task of selecting winners in this year's chamber Christmas light-up contest report a difficult task indeed.

When their work was done Garry Capaniuk, who lives at 4822-49 St., took first place in the residential category. They placed second last year after winning the title in 1986.

William Hook, 4844-43 St., part of the block-long 'Snowman Lane' was second and last year's winner, Brian Rennison, 5423-49B St. was third.

For the third straight year the Ken Mulyk residence captured first place in the rural residential competition.

IGA located in the Dodson Mall won the commercial category followed by the Black Gold and Woodland Chrysler.

All the first place winners received $50.

Elmira and Garry Capaniuk won first place in the residential category.

Snowman Lane's William Hook placed second.

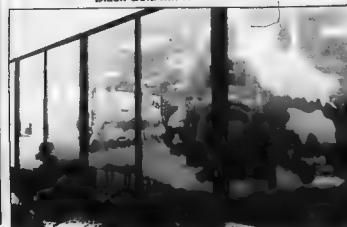

IGA won first in the commercial category.

Black Gold Inn took second.

Chosen for third place was Brian Rennison's house.

Woodland Chrysler came in third.

OORP holding poster contest

By Shell Carson
Students and staff at Breton high school were honored Dec. 20 with a visit from Margaret K. Nelson, national leader of the Order of the Royal Purple.

Nelson, a member of the OORP since 1963, also has 32 years teaching experience.

The purpose of the visit was to explain to students the Elks/Royal Purple annual literary and poster contest. The contest will be divided into three categories: senior, intermediate and junior.

In seniors and intermediates (grades 7-12), contestants are given five topics from which to choose. They are then required to write an essay (800 words for grades 10-12 and 500 words for grades 7-9). Juniors (grades 4, 5 and 6) have two themes from which to create a 12-inch by 24-inch poster. All entries must be in by the end of January.

National awards are a $2,000 scholarship in category 1, with monetary prizes in the other categories. Awards are also presented at local and provincial levels. The Breton lodge will offer prizes of $25, $15 and $10 for winners in this area. Local winning entries will then be submitted at the provincial level, then the national level. Rules governing the contest will be posted at the schools.

Breton

Nelson gave a brief history of the order and some of the charitable works the OORP contributes to. The Purple Cross Fund, first established in 1956, provides programs to assist children under 19 years of age "for any purpose whatsoever that would aid in that child's welfare, betterment of education or social standing," (such as braces, crutches, medicine, hearing aids/auditory trainers, education, books). The Purple Cross Fund recently donated $74,000 to the University of Alberta's Stuttering Institute. The fund will also aid in providing transportation for children who need to be treated at special Canadian centres (e.g. Toronto Sick Children's Hospital).

Another part of this fund is the deaf detection and development program. Both a speech pathologist and audiologist are advisors to the Purple Cross Fund.

Any person may make application to the fund by applying to the nearest Elks Lodge or OORP.

In other news, get well wishes are extended to Erna Biever and Victor Saunders.

Congratulations to Karen and John Townsend on the birth of their son, Kyle Douglas, Dec. 17 at the Breton General Hospital.

ELECTION Twin Rivers School Division No. 65 Division 2 Trustee My name is Jo-Anne Schultz

I am running for school trustee in Division 2. I have lived in Drayton Valley most of my life and I now have 2 children attending the public school system. For the past 12 years I have done volunteer work with the schools. I have also done volunteer work through the community. There are many concerns I have regarding our new school division and our school tax monies. Having the time and energy to devote to this position, I believe I would make a good representative to the people of Division 2.

Resolve to set some goals

By Bev Brooks
District Home Economist

Happy New Year! We've all heard these words spoken many times over the last couple of weeks.

The new year brings with it many positive feelings: a chance to reflect on the events already gone by and to imagine what the next year will bring. We make many resolutions and promises to ourselves this will be the best year yet.

In short, we are setting a goal or goals. Often these goals deal with lifestyle and financial matters. Taking a look at what we want to accomplish is an important first step in financial planning. We have to make choices based on our wants and available resources, that will ultimately bring us the most satisfaction.

A goal is simply an objective to work towards, stated in specific terms. For example, while "saving" as a goal may not mean much, "saving $5,000 to remodel the kitchen within two years" means something very definite.

Goals can and will compete. Farm or business goals may need to be balanced with family goals. With only a fixed amount of money available it's important you, as a family, establish priorities so you can achieve what you want.

Writing goals down on paper is an effective way of determining how goals compete with or complement each other. Have family members each develop a list of farm/business and family goals. Compare the list and work out a set of goals toward which all family members can work. The more the entire family becomes involved in the planning process, the more cooperation you can expect.

On an ongoing basis, monitor the progress you are making toward reaching your goals. Circumstances (and minds) change, so review your plans regularly.

The goals you set will depend upon your values and expectations, but they have to be tempered by a knowledge of the facts. A personal net worth statement is the first place to begin looking for those facts.

A net worth statement shows what you own (assets) and what you owe (liabilities). Your net worth is called "owner's equity."

Owner's equity = assets - liabilities.

It's a very good idea to determine your personal net worth every year. That way you'll know whether it's increasing, decreasing or remaining the same. With that, you will be able to plan accordingly.

Once you've set goals and prepared a personal net worth statement, you know where you are and where you want to go. Resolve to set some personal, family and business goals for 1989 as well as determine your net worth. It may seem like a large order, but consider that it took time and effort to earn your money, so it's worth taking time and effort to do some financial planning to manage it.

Hockey holiday

What could be better than two weeks off school, a couple of hockey nets and an icy street? There were just two of the many children outside last week enjoying their holidays.

Stress is affecting children, not just adults anymore

By Val Boyko

Stress, once considered an adult phenomenon, now affects children from a very young age.

Research has shown a dramatic increase in the number and severity of childhood stresses in the past few years. Today's children have become victims of overwhelming stress. They face rapid social change, as well as constantly rising expectations.

David Elind (1981) describes today's generation of children as "hurried children," children who are growing up too fast and too soon. Because so much of children's existence involves continual change, classification of values and forced choices, stress becomes an important issue (Youngs 1985).

Stress is a natural part of life, an important part of growing up and learning to survive in the real world. It is not out there in the environment but is within the individual.

Whether a situation is stressful for a child varies with his or her developmental level. This explains why some children become ill under a particular stressful condition while others do not.

No individual is ever free from stress; a certain

Interagency presents...

amount of stress is essential to well being.

Two types of stress have been identified. Eustress, or positive stress, is a healthy stimulus that drives one to achieve. It motivates and primes one for peak performance.

Distress, or negative stress, is stress that ceases to be a healthy stimulus, creating a burden for the individual.
Distress is felt by children in the process of growing up, and these stresses are compounded by the pressures to grow up too quickly - to take on adult behaviors and responsibilities.

Our culture is providing fewer opportunities for children to experience childhood. Prior to the 16th century, the idea of childhood hardly existed. Children were viewed as miniature adults, in their dress, games, labor and language.

Later, human development was recognized as a series of stages with childhood as a bridge between infancy and adulthood.

Today, we are witnessing yet another transformation - the erasing of the dividing lines between childhood and adulthood. Many facets of life once regarded for adults only are no longer off-limits to children. Children are exposed to divorce, homosexuality, incest and corruption, they use the language of adults and commit crimes once attributed to adults only. They are in turn faced with the stresses associated with them.

There are two environments in which young children spend most of their time. Specifically, children spend about two-thirds of their waking hours in the home and the remaining one-third in the school environment.

CARTT deadline approaching quickly

Time is quickly ticking toward the Jan. 20 deadline for Canada/Alberta agreement on soil, water and cropping research for technology transfer (CARTT) applications for spring and summer projects.

Two types of projects are eligible for CARTT funding: demonstration, and awareness and technology transfer.

Demonstration projects include any conservation farming practices that better protect soil from erosion and/or degradation.

Awareness and technology transfer projects could include soil conservation meetings, conferences and/or tours.

All projects must support
CARTT's mandate to develop and transfer appropriate conservation tillage and cropping technology to minimize soil degradation and sustain economic crop production.

Application forms for both types of projects, as well as questions about project proposals, can be directed to the area coordinators in the province. Area A coordinator is Les Wetter, 948-8511 (Airdrie); Area B coordinator is Carol Bettac at 679-1210 (Camrose).

Keep on rolling

Ever since the new bridge opened at Devon a lot of the big tanks, such as this one, have been scarce in the Drayton Valley area. Three trucks similar to the one above were seen recently chugging up the North Saskatchewan hill - a rare sight.

Won't run in next election, Cripps says

Shirley Cripps has made a lot of major decisions during her 10 years in provincial politics.

But none of them were any harder than last week's announcement that she would not be seeking the Progressive Conservative nomination for the Drayton Valley constituency in the next provincial election.

"I have enjoyed every minute of the last 10 years, but have decided that it's time for someone else to carry on," she says.

Cripps, who was first elected in 1979 and again in 1982 and 1986 plans to finish her term as MLA. "I'll try and get some loose ends tied up," she stated.

Cripps plans to spend more time with her family and do some catching up.

"It will be fun to do some of the things I haven't done for 10 years," she explained.

Her decision not to seek re-election came as a shock to her staff, executive and friends.

"No one was happy," she said.

"In some ways I hate to leave. It's been great working with the premier," she admitted.

Looking back, Cripps says some of her major accomplishments included the new Drayton Valley hospital, establishment of the Pembina Education Consortium, new senior citizens' self-contained units in Breton and Drayton Valley, community-based social services delivery, the $25-million stard-wood plant in Drayton Valley, 16 water and sewer projects, improved educational facilities and programming, access to government by oil well service industry, toll-free government access, secondary access roads paved in Breton, Winfield, Buck Lake, Drayton Valley (60th Street), paved access to Rocky Rapids and Buck Creek, agricultural assistance programs and the Drayton Valley area municipal feasibility study.

Some of the projects she would like to see completed include the Shangri-La Lodge expansion, Buck Lake Park, Breton and Drayton, extended care units and the Lodgepole road paved.

MLA Shirley Cripps

"I have enjoyed every minute of the last 10 years, but have decided that it's time for someone else to carry on."

Bloody gloves key evidence

A pair of blood-covered gloves may lead investigators to the poacher who killed two elk in the Brazeau area early in the new year.

Fish and wildlife officer Fred Kreiser says he'll know this week whether the blood found on the gloves - as well as on two saws and a set of chains - came from the elk, which were shot out-of-season.

The items were discovered in a trapper's cabin and seized so the blood can be analyzed, said Kreiser.

The owner of the cabin acknowledged the items are his, but claims the blood is not from elk.

Kreiser said one of the elks was shot and killed near the Wolf Lake Road north of the Amoco gas plant. Evidence indicates the animal was dragged away by either a snowmobile or an ATV trike. The second elk was shot 15 kms away. It was gutted at the scene and then dragged away.

Kreiser believes the shootings took place sometime between New Year's Eve and the early morning of New Year's Day.

Kreiser said he and RCMP officer Cpl. Tim Vatanianuk scoured the area by snowmobile last Tuesday in search of the elks' remains or other evidence, but to no avail.

Heat wave?

For today (Tuesday) the Edmonton weather office is calling for a high of -9 C and an overnight low of -24 C.

On Wednesday the temperature will be around -5 C and drop to -18 C overnight.

It will be almost like a chinook on Thursday when the high reaches -2 C and dropping at night to -14 C.

The temperature will be much the same Friday with a high of -4 C and a low of -12 C.

Fiery send-off to festive season

The Lions Club's first annual Christmas tree burn at West Valley Park Sunday proved to be a success despite the -30 C temperature. The afternoon of family entertainment included sleigh rides, free skating at the indoor and outdoor rinks and free hot chocolate and hot dogs. Chief organizer Shelton Fuson says the burn was a cooperative effort between the Lions Club, the town's recreation department and the Drayton Valley fire fighters' association. Fuson said the turnout was impressive considering the cold weather. "At 11 a.m., it was still 'do we, or don't we?'" he said. Fuson added that he was also pleased by the number of people who brought their trees down for the big burn late in the afternoon. The Lions Club decided to organize the event because the club wanted a "major winter event."

Local News Briefs

The Drayton Valley player had 20 goals and 31 points with the Crusaders at the Christmas break.

The Crusaders ended the Christmas break with eight consecutive wins, a superb 27-7-3 record and a seven-point lead over the Fort Saskatchewan Traders in the AJHL north division.

The sale of Pelican Spruce Mills to Weyerhaeuser Canada will not affect their hopes of linking up with the Japanese market.

The Japanese are expected to make a decision next month on doing business with the Alberta firm.

Assault charges are still pending against a 14-year-old girl as a result of incident late last year at a Drayton Valley school.

The RCMP are continuing their investigation of last January's sexual assault involving a 19-year-old Drayton Valley girl.

The unidentified woman was abducted at gun point in the Dodson Mall parking lot.

For the first time in several years the Drayton Valley fire department didn't have any calls during the Christmas/New Year's holiday.

The medical examiner's office reported last Wednesday that alcohol was a factor in a Dec. 24 crash near Thorsby that killed four people, including two men from Drayton Valley.

The RCMP at Thorsby, who investigated the accident, wouldn't comment on the information.

The Drayton Valley ski club has asked the RCMP to patrol its downhill facility after a recent vandalism spree.

Happy New Year, baby!

There were a number of contenders but a little boy, eight pounds eight ounces, became Drayton Valley's first born Jan. 2 at 10:45 a.m. Mother Kelly Starling received a layette filled with gifts from the Oilwell Chapter of RNA. Oilwell president Jean Stewart (left), Jeanette Kuzio, the chapter's secretary (middle) and Miriam Roberts, clinical nurse, presented gifts last week.

Real work begins for trustees after Twin Rivers election

The real work begins after the election for the six trustees who will make up the Twin Rivers school board once the votes have been counted on Jan. 11.

"It will be challenging for the trustees as well as administrators," said school superintendent George Bevan.

He pointed out that one of the toughest tasks greeting the new board will be to guide the school system in the right educational direction.

"Most boards inherit a set of policies," said Bevan, "but this board will have to start from scratch."

The new board, nonetheless, will be in the unique position of having an extended term to fulfill its mandate.

Bevan said the trustees won't face another election until October 1992, giving the first-ever Twin Rivers board a prolonged tenure of three years and nine months.

"That will give them a longer period than normal to accomplish their goals," noted Bevan.

One of their goals will include successfully contending with controversial issues that have dogged established boards in the past.

French immersion is one.

Bevan said he's not familiar with the area, but recalled that "Drayton Valley didn't figure prominently" in the planning of the County of Parkland's French program.

He doesn't foresee it becoming a major stumbling block for the new trustees.

Special education, however, is one issue that will have to be studied extensively.

"Finding an overall plan for Breton, Lindale and Drayton Valley is one of the things that will be addressed in the early part of the board's term," Bevan speculated.

Twin Rivers has requested assistance from Alberta Education in setting up a program for students with special needs.

Bevan said the department's regional office in Edmonton will be conducting a study on special needs later this year.

The Twin Rivers board of trustees will meet for the first time Jan. 17 at Evergreen school. The public will be invited to attend along with special guests.

It will be an "historic occasion," Bevan said. "There's something special about being a trustee on the very first board."

Candidates seek election to board

Below is the last in a series of profiles on the candidates running in the Jan. 11 Twin Rivers board of trustees election.

Ward Two

Colene Davie - Davie says that as a parent of four children, she has a natural concern about the level of education in the new school division.

Trained as an x-ray technician, Davie has been a parent volunteer at local schools for the last 12 years and a 4-H leader for 11 years.

Davie says that, with her children all going to school, she has the time to focus her attention on the duties of the board.

Ward Five

Lynn Oberle - a teacher for 20 years, Oberle is now a Breton-area farmer/stockman who believes the "we all have the responsibility to take an active part in politics."

It is time to "get involved and make a contribution," said Oberle, a father of four and the possessor of two university degrees.

Oberle says part of his platform includes upgrading Breton school, a deferred-salary-leave plan for teachers and meaningful student-teacher ratios.

Oberle is a former executive with the Rural Electrification Association and a current executive with the Breton Agricultural Society.

MD reeve eager to tackle position on new board

Henry Rondeau says his workload with the Brazeau municipal district won't interfere with any role he may have on the new Twin Rivers board of trustees.

Rondeau, elected reeve of the newly-created MD last July, said a position on the board wouldn't place an undue burden on himself and wouldn't affect his job performance.

"I've been doing it (as a member of the) advisory board anyway," added Rondeau.

Rondeau is running in the Jan. 11 school-board election as a candidate in Ward Two.

He said his experience with the issues would serve as a benefit to the neophyte board.

"On many occasions I've been asked for special advice" regarding the establishment of the the school division, said Rondeau.

The division has coterminous boundaries with the municipal district but is a completely independent body.

Although he hasn't noted any concerns from the public about his plans to undertake another political challenge, Rondeau admitted he's "heard one of the candidates is using it as an issue."

With the recent addition of two councillors on the Brazeau council (Jim Coombes and Wes Tweedle), Rondeau stressed that his duties with the MD won't be as time consuming as they had been over the first six months.

"We've accomplished a lot (since last July)," he said.

RCMP car struck at accident scene

An RCMP patrol car suffered about $1,800 damage when it was hit by another vehicle while at an accident scene.

The cruiser, driven by Const. Yves Robitaille, was parked behind the last vehicle involved in a minor four-vehicle mishap Dec. 30 when it was hit by a Dodge Aries that was unable to stop due to the poor road conditions.

The patrol car was struck in the rear driver's side.

RCMP have laid charges against the driver of the Aries.

In carrying out these general activities we have gradually expanded the scope of our involvement in the local business community and now include among our various programs and activities: Hire-A-Student, the Annual Fall Trade Fair, yearly operation of the Tourist Booth, retail merchants new car giveaway program, co-ordination of other retail programs, sponsoring speakers and conducting of various business seminars, Employee of the Month, Citizen of the Year and Farm Family of the Year, Christmas Light-Up Contest, various Town brochures and promotional materials, Annual Golf Tournament and lobbying of various Provincial Government Departments.

These Programs and the community involvement of our Chamber have expanded to reflect our growing membership base. But to maintain and expand our existing programs and to increase the leadership role of the Chamber of Commerce, we must continue to broaden our membership. We accordingly encourage those of you (business and individuals) who are not yet members of this organization to consider throwing your support behind us by obtaining a 1989 Membership through our Chamber office, managed by Karen Kirkwood.

Opinions

Vote tomorrow

Tomorrow (Wednesday) is a very important day. It's election day for the Twin Rivers school district - their first since assuming the education responsibilities in this area from the County of Parkland.

What's so encouraging about this initial election, that could have a definite impact on our education system for years to come, is that 18 people have let their names stand for office.

Unfortunately, only six can be elected.

These 18 people have shown they care about our children's education.

Now, those who are eligible to vote can do their part by getting out and voting.

Excellent location

It would appear that the eight-year lease signed between the Town of Drayton Valley and the Pembina Education Consortium was done in the nick of time.

If that lease hadn't been signed and the consortium was still continuing its search for better facilities, they may have considered a move to Whitecourt.

That possibility came to light recently when the Whitecourt public and separate school districts announced plans to build a technical-vocational education complex. But before they proceed, attempts will be made to find a third partner.

That third partner could quite easily be the consortium, that has been providing programs in Whitecourt for the past four years.

Despite those types of temptations, the eight-year lease will hopefully see the consortium remain in Drayton Valley for years to come. Actually, this is an excellent location for the consortium to establish its headquarters, as it can adequately serve both Whitecourt and Rocky Mountain House.

All the animals ain't in the zoo, they went shopping

Were you one of the fortunate or misfortunate, whatever your point of view is) to get caught in the Boxing Day craze?

West Edmonton Mall reports crowds of 200,000 on that one day. In some instances, security had to be called in to handle the crowds. While it was also reported that some people waited up to three hours just to get into a store.

On the local scene, we understand some of the local stores also enjoyed a busy day.

One out-of-town shopper who drove 40 miles to take advantage of Home Hardware's special on outdoor Christmas lights, almost lost them after he figured they were safe in his shopping cart.

Frankly Speaking

By Frank Ryan

Just when he turned his back to check out some other deals, another shopper thought he would inspect the lights sitting in the shopping cart that didn't seem to have an owner. But he turned back just in time to save his lights.

All in all, it appears that most of the shoppers, maybe with the exception of those who stood in line for three hours (if you can imagine that) got their fill of shopping on Boxing Day.

A big 'bouquet' to those responsible for organizing Snowman Lane and Candy Cane Lane. It certainly added to the excitement of touring the town to see the Christmas lights.

And, a big 'thank you' to everyone who supported or worked with Santas Anonymous this Christmas. Organizer Linda Thompson says the support this year was their best ever.

Support growing for restructuring of county police, says writer

Dear Editor,

While it is appreciated that pros and cons exist with our county police, some opinions have not been expressed.

We as residents of the west end of the county often face problems unrelated to areas closer to urban centres.

I live in an area in which it generally takes from 20 minutes to an hour to get an ambulance. I live in an area in which our provincial government, in its wisdom, allows hunters to virtually have the run of the place. I live in an otherwise peaceful area which requires little high priority police involvement.

With these concerns in mind and the opportunity to take a new, fresh look at our force, support is growing for a restructuring of the county police.

In my humble opinion, I'd much prefer maintaining the force as a redefined unit that is superior in training and capabilities in areas other than police duties while still retaining bylaw enforcement and traffic control.

Several residents who have now joined the new municipal district (Brazeau) have said they grudgingly miss the county police. Incidents of indiscriminate speeding and stop sign violations are more apparent.

We would hope to see the force directed to complete first-responder medical certification. As county police patrol anyways, it would be a comfort to rural residents to have good personnel available in case of an emergency. It would remove jurisdictional jealousy between the county police and our excellent RCMP.

Our patrol would be appreciated at serious traffic accidents for immediate and qualified treatment until or in conjunction with ambulance personnel.

If our force saved one life in a decade or perhaps saved injured limbs, it would be worth any effort.

We, the residents of hunters' bullets directed at our yards from as near as one city block, will need increased protection.

Since the patrol will be on the roads anyways, it would be sensible to have them become ancillary game wardens. This would benefit both residents and wildlife alike. Additional patrols on our western roads would help curtail rampant road hunting, pit lamping and blatant trespassing. No less than five domestic animals alone were shot within 15 miles of my farm.

While I previously mentioned a noticeable increase in bad-manner driving in the new MD, it would be ludicrous to state that such developments would not occur on Sec. Rd. 624, 627, 759 or the Genesee highway.

Our county patrol would assist in curtailing speed and its related accident possibilities.

Another function that could be performed would be closer cooperation with the fire departments.

Having thus provided an overview of some west-end concerns, I'd like to summarize.

The county patrol is a viable entity; not perhaps as it presently exists and not in competition with the RCMP as some perceive.

It performs supplemental policing admirably. Let it perform other crucial duties as part of its mandate. Let the new county patrol become a familiar figure on our byways respected for what the personnel CAN DO.

It is time to think of making the most of a good thing rather than debating its existence or present function.

I would prefer to read of county patrol accomplishments rather than hearing a continued debate.

I prefer more bang for the buck and I hope these suggestions will be taken by county residents and administrators to count me in as wanting a rural patrol with rounded expertise.

Support for Santas Anonymous phenomenal this year - writer

Dear Editor,

As we look ahead to the new year it means another Christmas has just past. Now it's time to look through the wrapping paper and ponder over all the goodies received.

Christmas, the time of year for love, family, joy, giving and receiving. For some it can be a sad time. Once again there will be families whose financial situation will not allow the extras of giving and receiving.

That is why it gives Santas Anonymous great pleasure to help the less fortunate in the giving and receiving. Thanks to all the caring of a wonderful community called Drayton Valley, these things are made possible. That sad little girl will be able to open that pretty little doll and maybe her brother will have tears when he sees that bright red fire engine as they await the prize supper their mom prepares.

The support this year was phenomenal. Many, many thanks to those who have touched their purse or donated time by delivering, sorting, packing, buying. Your help was greatly appreciated by all involved in Santas Anonymous and we look forward to your continued support in helping others enjoy that much looked forward to Christmas morning.

God Bless.

Santas Anonymous

Only one driver charged in Christmas check stops

The local Christmas-season check stop program resulted in only one charge of impaired driving, says RCMP Sgt. Tom Turner.

In all, 267 vehicles were stopped at 12 check stops between Dec. 20 and Jan. 2.

Turner said the impaired-driving charge was handed out on Dec. 28 at the junction of 50th Street and Highway 22.

Three warnings were also issued during the two-week campaign.

Drayton Valley Chamber of Commerce supports Howes Pass construction

By Belinda Atkinson
The Drayton Valley Chamber of Commerce will step up support for the proposed road through Howes Pass, says Grant Monsour, chamber president.

"We were not very involved last year," he said. "Rocky Mountain House and Red Deer spearheaded it (the lobby efforts) while our support was just in words."

Monsour said the chamber will write letters to key figures in Ottawa where, he said, there is resistance to extending Hwy 11 over the Continental Divide to the Trans Canada near Golden.

"The Alberta caucus is behind it," he said. "The real stumbling block is Ottawa." But he said "everything is sort of on hold" until Lucien Bouchard, federal minister of environment, settles in to his position.

The Red Deer Chamber of Commerce, which has been most vocal in support of the alternate route through the Rockies, will prepare a video and study supporting its lobby efforts.

The chamber suggests the highway might reduce harm being caused by traffic on the Trans Canada while environmental groups disagree.

The Canadian Parks and Wilderness Society is organizing a national campaign condemning the proposal for damage it may inflict on one of the "few remaining untouched watersheds in the Rockies," according to the Red Deer Advocate.

The Red Deer River Naturalist League and Alberta League for Environmentally Responsible Tourism share the national organization's views and plan additional lobby efforts.

Monsour said no local groups have approached him concerning the pass, but he guesses, as the issue heats, there'll be a few individuals "rearing their heads."

In the first of what will likely be many debates in the region, Myrna Pearman, president of Red Deer River naturalists, will go head to head Feb. 9 against Pat Henry, manager of the Red Deer chamber.

Monsour said the Drayton Valley chamber will show its support by sending a director to the event.

"It should be interesting," he said.

Legion installs board

Vern Bartlett has officially been installed as president of the Drayton Valley Legion.

The installation of the new executive took place last Tuesday night.

Wally Franks, the district commander from Edmonton and Frank Stefaniuk of Evansburg, the zone commander were in attendance for the brief ceremony that followed the Legion's regular meeting.

Bartlett, who has been a member of the Drayton Valley Legion for the past eight years is the first associate member to be elected president.

He takes over from Betty McGee who was executive as past-president. McGee is the first vice-president.

After taking office Bartlett commended McGee for all her help and said he was looking forward to working with her and second vice-president Bob Metcalfe.

Franks also commended McGee for all the work she has done with the Legion. "Your experience will be a big assistance to the incoming president," Franks stated.

The six directors who were sworn in last week include Grant Wallbank, Bill Grant, Jo Grayson, Dave Johnson, Russell Ramano and Tom Hutton.

Dear Constituents,

This is a very difficult letter to write, thinking back over the last 10 years - the hopes, the fears, the excitement, the challenge, the disappointments and, above all, the achievements. The best part has been the people, I'll never forget the friends I've made, the constituents who have called, and all those voters who showed their confidence in my ability to serve them. It is with some regret that I have decided not to seek the Progressive Conservative nomination for the Drayton Valley Constituency. I have enjoyed every minute of the last 10 years, but have decided that it's time for someone else to carry on.

I considered doing less; it's not my nature. For 10 years the family has been working around my timetable as an M.L.A. I want to say a special thanks to my family, especially Lorne, for their commitment which allowed our private lives to revolve around the obligations I had on behalf of my constituency and government responsibilities.

I've particularly enjoyed the people I've met, being able to help individuals in some small way, and the successful completion of major projects. Graduations and wedding anniversaries were my favorite occasions. Sharing the joy and pride with families and friends was a special honour I'll always cherish.

I have had the privilege of working with outstanding Conservative caucuses where the Premiers gave real meaning to collective discussion and decision-making. It's a privilege to be in the Cabinet of Premier Getty, who totally and absolutely understands the concerns of average Albertans - their hopes, their aspirations, their worries - and is willing to say the individual is important, families are important, communities are important. My regrets will be leaving the Cabinet with the leadership of a boss who is so humanistic and yet has a vision of Alberta buoyant, busy, and fulfilling its great potential as a Province.

During the 1980 75th Anniversaries I had a chance to visit almost every community to participate in their anniversary projects. Sharing the pride with the communities on the completion of a volunteer project is one of the highlights of being a M.L.A.

It's been great to be part of the changes that have taken place over the past 10 years and, particularly, part of the rebuilding that has taken place in Alberta since that day in October 1980 when the Liberals brought in the National Energy Program as part of their budget. The Drayton Valley Constituency was savaged by that Liberal/N.D.P. supported budget and that was the worst time to be an M.L.A. Then, just as they were recovering nicely, oil prices dropped. The determination of the Province and of the Drayton Valley Constituency to overcome those obstacles, unfair as they were, made me proud to be an M.L.A. and an Albertan.

Then there were the uneasy months leading up to the announcement of the Pelican Plant, especially following the Mahood proposal which had very little, if any, substance but great salesmanship. I died a thousand deaths during the Pelican negotiations - one minute it would look like it would go, then we would be faced with what appeared to be impossible odds, particularly during a leadership review when few major decisions were being made. The Pelican Plant meant that Drayton Valley would now have a third major industry which, together with its oil and agriculture, gave it long-term stability.

In 1986, we welcomed the communities of Thorsby, Calmar, Devon, Ma-Me-O, Mulhurst, Falun, and surrounding areas to our constituency. I'm glad I had the opportunity to serve these old friends in the expanded Drayton Valley-Devon Constituency.

It was a real honour in 1986 to be the first woman appointed in any agriculture portfolio in Canada, as Associate Minister. It has been a very difficult time to be a Minister of Agriculture - inflationary land values followed by a drastic drop in real estate prices, the worst drought since the '30's, low commodity prices. I have a firm commitment to building a production and income safety net for agriculture through crop insurance and tripartite programs.

I believe that the most important assurance of a viable agriculture industry is to ensure marketing opportunities, both in primary and secondary processed products. The agricultural sector is on the verge of new technology, developing agricultural food processing, and penetrating worldwide markets. I have been proud to play a small role in this new thrust.

Working in the Constituency with municipal governments and volunteer organizations to improve services for the residents, to broaden economic opportunities, improve education opportunities and create healthy, vibrant and happy communities has been a real privilege. I am particularly happy to see improved people services such as the new Drayton Valley Hospital and the Consortium.

A new municipality for the west end of the County of Parkland was a central issue in the 1979 election, as it had been the two elections before. It has smouldered throughout the last nine years, until January 1, 1988 when the people of the Drayton Valley area achieved local government. Best wishes to the new M.D. of Brazeau No. 77 and to the Twin Rivers School Division. The newly-elected councils and boards have a large challenge and a great opportunity.

I am not anticipating an election, but I do believe it's important for the Progressive Conservative Party to nominate its next candidate. I intend to carry out my responsibilities as your M.L.A. and as Associate Minister of Agriculture with the same diligence and sincere effort that I have in the past. I have some goals to see accomplished before 1990.

I would like to thank each and every one of you for your past support and hope that you will continue to work with me to achieve the goals of the Drayton Valley-Devon Constituency. May your life be filled with health, happiness, peace, and contentment.

Legal work causing curling rink delay

Legal red tape is causing some sleepless nights for curling club president Bruce Clemmer.

The curling club had hoped to be working on their $800,000 six-sheet rink to be built in conjunction with the new sports centre in West Valley Park.

However, some legal work has caused a delay.

Now, the curling club executive have been wrestling with the prospects of starting work now or waiting until March or April.

Besides the concerns of having to delay the start of construction, Clemmer says the club is about $300,000 short of what is needed to complete the project.

Clemmer says the executive will be working hard in the months ahead to raise that money. They would like to have at least another $200,000 before starting. "We don't want to go on and borrow a lot of money and throw a lot of pressure on the users," Clemmer says.

The curling club expects to get at least $15,000 from the province's new Community Facility Enhancement program.

While the curlers don't have to be out of their current building until June of 1990, the boxers who will utilize the recreation area are eyeing the new space. The chamber will also want to use the curling rink in conjunction with the sports centre for their trade fair in September.

Clemmer would also like to see the new rink completed in time for next year's 25th edition of the Oilmen's bonspiel. Exactly when work will start now depends on the weatherman.

Inter-club bonspiel ready for 14th year

The inter-club curling bonspiel will be held Jan. 20-21.

The event was started in 1974 with Bob Simon, Bruce Cable and Bohdan Urchysyn coming up with the idea.

Once a year all the service clubs in Drayton Valley get together. The idea is to foster friendship and community spirit between the Legion, Elks, Lions, Kinmen and Knights of Columbus.

New curlers are always welcome for this funspiel.

If you are a member of any of these clubs, along with son, daughter or spouse, you are urged to sign up with your club today.

For more information call Danny Thompson (Legion) at 542-6446, Bohdan Urchysyn (Elks) 542-4539, Bert Siegers (Kinmen) 542-3518, Don Anderson (Knights) 542-2470 or Stan Kurylo (Lions) 542-5116.

Pick me

An unlikely mixture of youngsters gather to play some shinny hockey at the outdoor rink at the Drayton Valley arena. The last week of Christmas holidays was crammed with as much activity as possible before heading back to the classrooms Monday, Jan. 9.

Curling title up for grabs

Defending champion Doug Baird will return this weekend to defend his Oilmen's curling title.

Baird's foursome that defeated Bruce Clemmer 10-7 in last year's championship final is one of the 48 rinks entered in the weekend spiel that gets underway Friday night and ends Sunday.

That's entertainment!

The pediatrics ward at the Drayton Valley Health Complex was recently the recipient of some Christmas cheer from a local business. The ward now has a Teddy Ruxpin animated talking toy centre at its disposal to make a child's stay at the hospital "a less intimidating experience," says Eleanor Spittler (above right), the coordinator for acute care. Also pictured are Lance Gardiner, donor of the toy and children Christine and Brittany Watson.

Chamber launches awareness drive

The Drayton Valley Chamber of Commerce hopes to increase the community's involvement and awareness in 1989 through a year-long campaign.

"I'm not sure of the full scope of the campaign yet, but the initial thrust will be a full-page advertisement in the newspaper," said Grant Monsour, chamber president.

Monsour said by clarifying the chamber's role and past achievements, the general public might step forward more often with ideas for improving the community.

"Sometimes you can tap all sorts of sources for ideas," he said.

The chamber moves in to 1989 with involvement from a cross-section of local oil, forestry and retail businesses and Monsour sees this diverse group as a definite asset to the coming year.

"Last year we got bogged down because only a few people were doing all the work but we've got more volunteers this year," he said.

Seventeen directors have been assigned to eight committees for 1989. Two volunteers will also lend support without decision-making power.

Grant Monsour again

assumes the president position. John Mulligan will serve as vice president, Neil Harskamp, second vice president; Doug Nelson, treasurer; and Ann Krawchuk will act as secretary for the 1989 term.

Couples Night 'rousing success'

The Kinsmen's recent New Year's Eve party has been called a rousing success. Organizer Rod Schultz says the event drew 465 people to the event held at the Rec Plex.

Schultz was extremely pleased with the demand for tickets (with over 100 on a waiting list), the food, the entertainment and the effort turned in by the sponsoring Kinsmen and Kinettes. "Some of them were still at the Rec Plex until 4:30 a.m.," Schultz says.

The Kinsmen were also pleased with the effort of the Frank Maddock high school grad class that provided rides home. Twelve students provided rides from 10:30 p.m. to 4 a.m.

However, not everyone who attended the New Year's Eve party were that happy.

While the party went on, RCMP handed out five parking violations and two fire hydrant tickets.

Besides the tickets, the RCMP set up a check stop. Thirty-five vehicles were checked, however, no tickets were issued.

Fined $1,000

A Drayton Valley resident was fined $1,000 after he pleaded guilty to a charge of drunken driving last week in provincial court.

John William Godwin, 39, was charged with driving over the .08 mg blood alcohol limit.

Realtors optimistic about '89

By Steve Fletcher
Drayton Valley's realtors are predicting continued good times for their industry in 1989.

A survey of local real estate companies found that most agents believe the new year will carry on where 1988 left off.

"It will be another strong year," said Chad Nichols, co-owner of NRS Nichols Realty Service.

"...it has been getting a little stronger and steadier over the last two or three years."

Nichols added that the market in Drayton Valley out-performed other communities in the NRS chain.

"We had 40 or 50 (housing) starts" last year, he noted.

Century 21's Lorne Pinkoski says his company's figures point to a slight increase in prices between 1987 and 1988.

Statistics show the average number of dollars spent per property increased by 1.4 per cent, he said.

Pinkoski noted this figure has risen consistently over the last four years.

"There's a lot of optimism," he pointed out. "Rumor has it that the next two years should be strong."

Ron Sekura, owner of Farmers and Ranchers Real Estate, says his company is also greeting the new year with optimism.

"Business has been 'quite steady and growing,'" he said.

He noted, however, that there remains a shortage of good homes in the mid-price range.

These houses are the most affordable and tend to re-sell quickly, said Sekura.

He also said there's "a lot more activity" developing within the farming sector.

Sekura said a drop in farm and ranch prices has made it a more attractive purchasing item for interested buyers.

Meier Real Estate's Ron Meier says there will probably be enough demand for houses to push up prices this year by three to five per cent.

"There's not a lot of houses listed right now," said Meier. "When that happens demand naturally goes up."

He added that the large number of recently announced mega-projects bodes well for his industry both in the area and across the province.

Venture Realty owner Rod Schultz says a "very strong" autumn in the real estate market is partly to blame for a 60-per-cent decline in listed properties.

He said the onus will be on local realtors to build up their inventories as the market is beginning to heat up once again.

Schultz forecasted housing construction will equal 1988 with continued growth.

Re-sales will rise in price in 1989 mainly because of "increased construction costs," said Schultz.

And "watch interest rates," he warned, noting that if they continue to rise it could make house-buying an unaffordable proposition.

Three injured in collision

Three people were injured in a head-on collision last Wednesday on 60th Street.

Both drivers and a passenger in one of the vehicles were taken to the Drayton Valley hospital.

The accident occurred near Sekura Auctions.

Ridge decision soon

Plans to re-structure Poplar Ridge should receive third and final reading at the next meeting of the Brasseau MD council, says Reeve Henry Rondau.

Council had earlier requested modifications to a proposal subdividing areas in Poplar Ridge for industrial/commercial property.

Rondau said council wanted changes in the plan to ensure the Poplar Ridge trailer court was maintained for as long as economically feasible.

The next meeting of council takes place Jan. 19.

Pentecostal pastor arrives Wolf Cubs busy

By Wendy Carruthers

A new pastor at the Pentecostal Assembly Church in Drayton Valley has arrived from Kelowna, B.C.

Jim Martens and family have spent the last month getting to know the people and attitude of the community.

Martens, entering his sixth year in the church, says he has finally familiarized himself with the geography of Drayton and doesn't get lost anymore.

His wife June and two children, Nicholas and Valerie, have adapted well to the area and his young son has already made friends with the kids on his block.

"The weather is crisp, but not too cold - so far," Martens says.

He was an assistant pastor in Kelowna and already considers himself an Albertan after spending the Christmas holidays visiting members of the congregation.

Martens says his decision to move from the Okanagan to what is commonly called "Dreadful Valley" was the will of God.

When he visited Drayton in November he says "we sensed the presence of God in our service and felt His leadership."

Martens likes to be

Pastor Jim Martens

available and approachable to his congregation and any community members.

"This is an exciting community to be in with a lot of room for things to happen," he says.

The most important thing Martens thinks a community can have is a desire for progress and a willingness to move forward in the community and in the church.

He says Drayton Valley has the potential to grow and the residents shouldn't underestimate themselves.

"The church's first mandate is to teach the gospel, but along with that is the community involvement."

The First Drayton Valley Wolf Cub pack was extremely busy over the holiday.

After an exciting fall that included building bird houses, members of the pack enjoyed a hay ride at Kynoch's, went carolling at the Shangri-La Lodge and extended care unit at the hospital and gave the seniors Christmas decorations they had made.

Plans for 1988 include making cars for the annual cub car rally, a winter camping trip, swimming, bottle drives and planting trees.

Forum discusses services

A public forum will be held in Drayton Valley Jan. 17 to hear about the provincial government's review of services to the mentally handicapped.

The meeting gets underway at 7:30 p.m. at the Black Gold Inn.

The purpose of the meeting is to provide the public with an informal opportunity to have input into the review.

The committee will hear any presentations by interested individuals and will also welcome written submissions.

Bruce Nichola, executive director of the Drayton Valley Developmentally Handicapped Association will attend. He has already submitted a brief to the committee headed up by Olds/Didsbury MLA Roy Brassard.

The review, announced by Social Services Minister Connie Osterman in May, is to address the future service needs of Albertans with mental handicaps and outline specific directions for services targeted to them.

Nichola feels that some of the ideas generated by the committee could affect Drayton Valley.

All interested people are welcome to attend. The committee considers their views to be important in the review process.

Benefit dance Saturday

The Community League of Rocky Rapids will hold a benefit dinner and dance Jan. 14 for a couple whose home was destroyed by fire last month.

Eileen Belva, secretary treasurer, said the league got together after Tim and Colleen Sekura lost their home and its contents, and decided the benefit was something that should be done.

After making arrangements - including music donated by First Choice Entertainment and bars donated by Gavin's - the league informed the Sekuras that help was on the way.

"I think they were really pleased," she said.

With proceeds from tickets and the bar, Belva hopes to raise $1,500 toward rebuilding costs.

Tickets are available at the Rocky Rapids Store or by calling 542-5667.

County police to obtain shotguns

Members of the county police received some good news last week.

While they have been stripped of their hand guns and the word 'police' will be dropped from their title in April - their responsibilities will be the same.

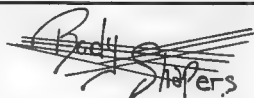

In the place of hand guns, members will be allowed to carry shotguns or rifles in their vehicles. These will only be used for animal control.

"Their duties haven't changed, just their use of firearms," Wayne Gent, a member of the County of Parkland police commission says.

Items discussed at a police commission meeting last Wednesday dealt with the firearms issue, a possible name change and a dog problem.

Lodge retiree never far away

Shangri-La Lodge's resident supervisor joined the ranks of the retired in September but something keeps calling her back to work.

"You get to know one another so well," says Inga Hawryluk of the lodge's 48 seniors. "Some of them are like parents to me."

Hawryluk says four years as general helper and nine years as supervisor have left a permanent attachment.

"I still have some of them phoning me 'to chat,'" she boasts.

She admits that not all is rosy the first few weeks in a care facility. Seniors enter fearing the stereotype of an institution.

But, Hawryluk is quick to describe the inevitable transformation when a senior realizes peer support and group activities have as much to do with extended care as proper meals.

"I think a home is the answer," she says. "They get to the point (in private homes) where they don't want to cook for themselves," she says.

It's partially through Hawryluk's efforts the residents have access to activities.

"When I took over in 1979 it was never open to the public," she said. "We opened the lodge up to the community."

Hawryluk also found a volunteer craft coordinator and eventually convinced the board to add her to the list of paid employees.

"I'd say about 20 per cent to 30 per cent of the seniors do crafts," she said.

Hawryluk recognized seniors as vital members of the community and used them as a resource to improve the lodge's programs.

She is now glad to have the extra time to devote to her own crafts such as knitting and sewing. But a small part of her has never really left the lodge, nor will it.

"(The residents) love to have jokes...love to laugh," she says.

"There were so many rewarding experiences."

Impoverished farm life memories still bring smiles to Mary Heintz

By Belinda Atkinson
Cooking Lake holds fond and terrible memories for a local senior but, with each story of woe, comes a little bit of laughter.

"Everybody was in the same position in those times," says Mary Heintz of an impoverished farm life. "It was pretty terrible all over."

Growing up on a homestead in the early part of the century had hardships enough. Heintz excuses the seven-day work weeks of her youth as typical of the time.

But she smiles through memories harder than most seniors could comprehend.

"My father died four months before I was born," she said.

With her father's death, Dec. 23, and his burial, Christmas Day 1909, her mother was faced with seven children to raise - the eldest 12 years old - and a homestead to single-handedly scrape a living from.

"She had a rough life. We milked 16 cows by hand. There were no Sundays," she said. "For us every day was a work day."

The children's education went as far as the community's one-room school house could go. Then farm work and survival filled their days until they were of age to start their own lives.

"I got married at 19 years of age. My husband was a lot older than me," she hesitated. "He was 30. There was a big difference in our ages but we had a wonderful marriage."

The two raised five sons and a daughter through the 1930s, a time when "trying to get a dollar was quite an effort."

When the Dirty Thirties consumed the family farm as a means of survival, it was necessary for men to find outside work. Mary soon found herself living a life similar to her mother's.

Her husband would make a weekly 15-mile hike to their farm Saturday nights and, after a 24-hour visit with the family, walk back to a work camp.

Mary took over the manual labor and child raising but relates only fond memories of the time.

"It was a lot of fun," she laughs, describing stiff underwear dried on clothes lines in winter and a mischievous little boy dumping a full bed pan on his sister's head.

The latter has developed into a story traditionally told at family gatherings, one which always brings uproarious laughter.

Mary's husband died 14 years ago. She nursed him until three strokes left him with little control beyond that of an infant.

"He got so he didn't know any of us," she said.

Two years ago, Mary moved in to the lodge and began all the crafts and hobbies she never had time for.

She giggles that the lodge has spoiled her and raves that chores such as washing and vacuuming are no longer a worry.

Her children gather from nearby cities and towns once in a while and the visiting room fills with laughter about the good old days.

"It was kind of nice raising a family," she says. "Even during the tough times."

Crafts have replaced manual labor for Mary Heintz.

Guild goes from primal chanting to grand ol' opry

It is difficult to imagine how a quartet would perform with "tongue firmly planted in cheek," as a Calgary Sun critic suggests, but muffled sounds aside, Guild has astounded audiences and critics throughout Canada and the United States.

Described as an a cappella quartet with a difference, Guild - The Vocal Group is said to blend silliness with solid musicianship.

"We take our music seriously, even though we often don't take ourselves very seriously," explained the quartet while performing in Grande Cache.

The group takes listeners through a lyrical history ride that begins, according to reports, with primitive chanting, progresses through Mozart and ends up with Manhattan Transfer, opera and even grand ol' opry.

A difficult task at best, but possible, considering the artistic backgrounds of these four Calgarians.

Marilyn Buehning - singer, dancer, actress - has tackled everything from opera to children's theatre.

Blood Brothers, Company and The Sound of Music are among a list of many stage performances that have brought her into the quartet.

Hal Kerbes - singer, actor, composer, arranger, playwright, the list goes on - has worked extensively in theatre and musicals.

His accomplishments include, to name a few, Glorious Mud and The Premature Death of Art In Our Time, which he co-wrote.

Michael Shields has toured with and composed for the band The Diffrence, performed in theatrical productions such as Oklahoma and has sung with several choral ensembles.

Susan Dyer has also performed extensively

Guild - The Vocal Group will perform in the Rec Plex Theatre Jan. 13 at 8 p.m.

outside the quartet, with appearances in Coup, Once Upon a Mattress and others.

With critical acclaim such as "high spirited and comical," "glided effortlessly from one idiom to another," Guild - The Vocal Group sounds a must for those with songs in their hearts or jokes in their heads.

Tickets are available by calling 542-5676 or 542-5006.

Guild - The Vocal Group will perform Jan. 13 at the Rec Plex Theatre as a replacement for The Pirates of Penzance, which was scheduled to run Jan. 20.

Farm women to get '90s conference

Decision with vision, a conference for farm women, will be held in Calgary Feb. 23.

The theme of the conference is "looking into the '90s." Participants at the winter conference will see how they hold the key to the future use of agricultural techniques.

The keynote speaker, Dr. Bob Church from the University of Calgary, says he believes farm women will explore and communicate new information to the entire family becoming the promoters of new challenges and opportunities.

Former Olympian Diane Jones Konihowski will tell participants about setting goals, pursuing them and how to be the best of what you are.

Other sessions will include fashion and fabrics in the '90s, dollars in decision, marriage enrichment strategies, if it ain't Alberta - it ain't beef, vegetable gardening, you and your aging parents, and getting things in order.

For further information contact your local district home economist. To qualify for the early-bird draw, registration must be received by Jan. 23.

RCMP report 20 accidents

The RCMP were busy last week writing out accident reports.

Cpl. Tim Vatamaniuk says a whopping 20 accidents occurred during a five-day span (Jan. 1 to 5) - double the usual number of traffic mishaps in an average week.

"The whole week has been terrible," said Vatamaniuk, who blamed bad driving for the spree of mainly minor accidents.

The startling statistic includes five minor accidents that occurred during the snowstorm last Thursday.

"A large portion of the people aren't prepared for winter driving conditions," Vatamaniuk said.

RCMP noticed a sharp rise in mishaps soon after the flurry of snowstorms that followed Christmas.

Drivers "have to realize they have to slow down because the can't stop as easy as they used to," noted Vatamaniuk.

He added that, in poor conditions, the posted highway speed limits are "too fast."

Enforcement-wise, Vatamaniuk said the RCMP's only recourse is to charge reckless winter drivers under Section 69 of the Highway Traffic Act.

Section 69 permits drivers who may be going the speed limit to be charged if they ignore the "atmospheric, weather or other conditions that might affect the visibility of the driver of the control of the vehicle."

Common contract in works

Negotiating a common contract for teachers formerly employed by different school systems will be a priority for the new Twin Rivers school division, says the superintendent of schools.

Dr. George Bevan says it will be crucial for Twin Rivers to negotiate a contract with its teachers before the end of August.

Finding a "level playing field" that is acceptable to teachers who once held contracts with the counties of Parkland or Leduc will be a difficult task because both sides will probably want "the best of both worlds," Bevan said.

"They will feel undervalued or underappreciated if they're paid less - we must try very hard to avoid this."

Bevan's own interim contract expires in six months in order to give the new board of trustees a chance to reconsider the appointment.

The Twin Rivers division includes 130 teachers, 55 support staff and 22 bus drivers.

Two council members sworn in

The two newest members of the Brazeau municipal district council were sworn in last week at a special organizational meeting.

The addition of Jim Coombes and Wes Tweedle brings council to its full complement of five members.

The council re-elected Henry Rondeau as reeve and Bob Booth as deputy reeve.

The members also re-worked the committee make-up.

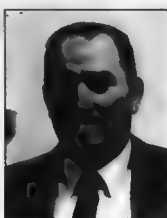

The structure of several of the committees, however, were only tentatively established.

The municipal district is still waiting to hear, for example, whether its boundaries will fall within the Alberta West Central Health Unit or the Leduc-Strathcona unit.

Municipal manager John Eriksson told council the it's likely the MD will stay within West Central's boundaries. If not, a councillor will be required to sit on the Leduc-Strathcona board of directors.

Jim Coombes

Wes Tweedle

The renamement policies of the MD were also addressed.

Councillors will receive a $200 a day honorarium; the reeve will earn an honorarium of $250 a day; and members at large will receive a payment of $150 per day.

Council, staff and members at large will also receive an allowance of $200 per day when attending MD-sanctioned conventions.

Alder Flats annexation now in hands of Local Authorities Board

The annexation of Alder Flats and parts of Moon Lake is now in the hands of the Local Authorities Board, says Brazeau MD Reeve Henry Rondeau.

But he said he doesn't know when the provincial board will reach its decision on whether to grant the areas' request to become a part of the Drayton Valley-area municipality.

It's also not known if the counties of Leduc, Parkland and Wetaskiwin or the MD of Clearwater plan to fight the annexation of their territory.

The issue made its way to the Local Authorities Board after petitions were signed in Alder Flats and Moon Lake supporting the change in municipal governments.

Rondeau said his council endorsed the plan, but added that it was "acquiring to the requests of the local ratepayers."

The reeve was uncertain whether the addition of the new areas would require changes to the makeup of the current council.

"I would doubt it right now, but it's something council would have to take a look at."

Waste transfer stations to be built this spring

Construction of new garbage disposal units at Cynthia and Lodgepole is scheduled for the spring.

Environment Minister Dr. Ian Reid and Drayton Valley MLA Shirley Cripps announced last week a $176,900 grant has been awarded to the Drayton Valley Sanitary Landfill Authority to construct additional waste transfer stations.

The grant will cover the total cost of the project.

Similar transfer stations are already located at Easyford, Rocky Rapids, Violet Grove and Buck Creek.

John Eriksson, manager of the municipal district and partners in the landfill authority, says garbage dumps at Lindale and Breton are also being reviewed, and they are possible sites for transfer stations.

The grant is provided under Alberta Environment's waste management assistance program.

Grant traded for new MD

The formation of the new municipal district has cost the Drayton Valley Association for the Developmentally Handicapped $5,000.

Because of the boundary changes that took place Jan. 1, the association will have to do without a $5,000 grant they have received since 1981 from the County of Leduc.

Association president Carry Lorenz says they have approached the municipal district for the money.

Lorenz is keeping his fingers crossed the MD will pick up the shortfall, after they recently decided to continue funding the FCSS programs in the Breton area.

School's fate sparks election interest

Fears about the possible closure of Lindale school have sparked interest in the Twin Rivers school division election.

Almost all candidates running in Ward Four - the district which encompasses the Lindale school - have expressed concern about the future of small, rural schools throughout the region.

Mac Tryon, a candidate for Ward Four trustee and president of the Lindale school parents association, says concerns about Lindale's own survival surfaced eight or nine years ago while still within County of Leduc boundaries.

She said enrolment dropped by 22 students this year primarily because parents transferred children to Drayton Valley.

"We lost a few kids as parents did not know what was going to happen" after the establishment of the new municipality.

"Keeping it open - that's a priority as far as I'm concerned," said candidate Ursula Springer.

"I'd just like to stress how important it is for everyone to get out and vote," she added. "It's really important to the welfare of their children."

Man jailed for breathalyzer

'Clark...a man of dignity and honor'

By Frank Ryan

Joe Clark has enjoyed a very promising political career.

Clark, son of a High River Times editor, printer and publisher has held a variety of positions during his years in politics.

His recent victory in Yellowhead is the fifth time he has been re-elected after capturing the riding for the first time in 1972.

While attending the University of Alberta, Clark edited the newspaper, Gateway, was a McGowan Cup debater and was twice national president of the Progressive Conservative student federation and the founding president of the Canadian Youth Council.

He taught political science for two years at the U of A and worked summers for the Farmers Union of Alberta as a broadcast, print and television journalist.

Youngest prime minister in Canadian history

Clark was director of organization when the PCs in Alberta were rebuilding under Peter Lougheed, and narrowly lost out in the election of 1967.

Later that year he went to Ottawa where he became special assistant to the Honorable Davie Fulton. Robert Stanfield invited him to join his staff after the 1967 leadership convention.

In 1972 Clark returned to Alberta to defeat a Liberal incumbent in the Rocky Mountain riding general election. He was re-elected to the House of Commons in 1974, 1978, 1980, 1984 and recently in 1988, representing the Yellowhead riding.

Clark reached a milestone

in his political career, when at the age of 39, he became the youngest prime minister in Canadian history and the first Westerner to hold that office.

His minority government was defeated in December of 1979 following a Commons vote on the Crosbie budget. The PCs lost the election the following year.

In opposition, Clark brought together a spirited party into what Charles Lynch called "the most effective Parliamentary opposition in Canadian history."

Following a leadership convention in 1983, the Right Honorable Brian Mulroney assumed the role of party leader. At the request of Mulroney, Clark prepared recommendations on questions relating to arms control and disarmament. He travelled to Europe and China to meet with world leaders on this critical issue and held hearings across Canada to receive the views of concerned Canadians.

On Sept. 17, 1984 Clark was appointed Secretary of State for External Affairs, a position he still holds today.

Just before the end of 1988, Clark was given extra duties as the interim justice minister.

'Always willing to speak out boldly for the West, Canada'

A lot of praise has been directed toward Joe Clark. Here are some of those opinions:

"Clark...a man of dignity and honor." (Calgary Herald).

"Our external affairs minister is firmly defining Canada's national interest in international arenas." (Edmonton Journal).

"He has led the party with distinction, making a real serious contribution to public policy. He understands Canada, its regions and provinces, probably better than any other single politician." (Vancouver Province).

"Joe Clark has always championed external affairs issues which affect the West, and has represented the concerns of the local coal industry in Yellowhead at the cabinet table. He has never failed to respond to any of my requests to discuss the issue." (Larry Dykes, Obed Mountain Coal).

"Joe Clark has consistently demonstrated a willingness to speak out boldly on matters of principle. He is seen as one of the most accomplished foreign affairs ministers the country has ever had." (Victoria Times Colonist).

"With his help, the Yellowhead Highway Association secured $100 million for twinning. We all owe a debt of gratitude to Mr. Clark." (Tony Sitar, vice-chairman, Yellowhead Highway Association).

Holiday frolic

Two youngsters in Drayton Valley enjoy the mild weather and extended Christmas holiday last week by building a snow fort to play in without detection from passersby.

Some baby gates found to be unsafe

Consumer and Corporate Affairs Canada warns consumers against the use of certain accordion-style baby gates which have diamond-shaped spaces between the slats and large V-shaped openings along the top of the gate.

These gates are made of wood or hard plastic and can be expanded scissor-like across an opening such as a doorway. The diamond-shaped spaces are large enough to entrap the head and neck of a child, with risk of suffocation. More adventurous children may slip while climbing the gate and hang themselves in a V on the upper edge of the gate.

Although it may be possible to find these gates in some retail outlets, they're usually sold second-hand or handed down from one user to another.

The warning follows the recent death of a 21-month-old Ontario toddler. The child died after her neck became wedged in one of the top Vs of the gate. This is the second such death to be reported in Canada.

When purchasing a baby gate, consumers are advised to look for a durable, well-constructed gate, preferably with a straight-topped edge on a small-meshed screen or bars. The gate should be properly installed in accordance with the manufacturer's instructions.

Don't worry, be happy

Too many people take life too seriously.

They get wrapped up in cares and troubles; they worry over problems and burdens; they try to carry the load of the world on their shoulders, like an old man Atlas was once supposed to do.

Life is entirely too transitory for such seriousness and such a burden-carrying existence. As we journey along we should try to get as many laughs as we can, and there is nothing like a good laugh to cheer one up.

If anything will keep people out of asylums it's a little more humor and a little less worry and anxiety.

The troubles, trials and vexations of today matter little in the vastness of eternity.

Build yourself a strongbox, Fashion each part with care, When it's as strong as your hand can make it Put all your troubles there; Hide there all thoughts of your failures, And each bitter cup that you quaff;

Lock all your heartaches within it, Then sit on the lid and laugh.

Division No. 65
Division 2 Trustee
My name is
Jo-Anne Schultz

I am running for school trustee in Division 2. I have lived in Drayton Valley most of my life and I now have 2 children attending the public school system. For the past 12 years I have done volunteer work with the schools. I have also done volunteer work through the community. There are many concerns I have regarding our new school division and our school tax monies. Having the time and energy to devote to this position, I believe I would make a good representative to the people of Division 2.

How to avoid skiing accidents

Skiing is the fastest growing sport in Canada today.

In the last 30 years cross-country skiing, downhill skiing, and most recently, helicopter skiing have caught the enthusiasm of young and not-so-rich.

Since skiing first became popular it has spawned an annual crop of injuries. In the early years, most injuries involved feet and ankles; the low, soft-leather boot worn by downhill pioneers gave little support or protection in falls. And the treacherous conditions of ungroomed trails gave plenty of opportunities for tumbles.

These days, techniques and equipment have improved so much that the number of injuries have not kept pace with the phenomenal increase in the number of skiers.

However, the types of injuries have changed. Today, more skiers arrive in physicians' offices with knee, shoulder and hand problems. These result in part from the increased speed at which skiers move down groomed slopes, and in part from the safety straps on poles that some skiers use, and which, if the pole gets stuck in the snow or in a tree, can cause a nasty wrench to the hand and shoulder.

There are simple precautions skiers can observe to avoid injury.

Get fit first so you don't strain muscles on the first day. Check all your equipment at the start of each season, and check release bindings every morning. Use poles with hand guards or release mechanisms rather than safety straps. Stick to hills you can manage; beginners who have launched off on slopes beyond their skills form a large proportion of the casualties seen by physicians.

Read the signs at the base of the hill so you know how to summon the ski patrol, where the first aid hut is. Don't ski after minor injuries; the next injury may be caused or compounded by the first one which you didn't take seriously. A few lessons from a professional will make an enormous difference to beginners, enabling them to acquire techniques and confidence that will prevent them coming to grief.

This is especially true for children. The novice at the top of the hill is like someone ready to jump into the middle of a lake before he has learned the technique of staying afloat.

Horses must form part of inventory

If you are in the business of horses, you will be doing your taxes differently next year says a Calgary accountant.

Judy Lloyd, a certified management accountant who specializes in farm accounting, will be telling the Horse Breeders and Owners Conference how tax reforms will influence the horse industry.

The conference, a top-notch educational program for the horse enthusiast, is Jan. 14 and 15 in Red Deer.

Bill C-139 changes farm income tax calculations effective Jan. 1, 1989. For those engaged in the horse industry there are some major changes.

All horses have become designated for tax accounting and must form part of inventory. Designated animals are no longer allowed as a deductible expense but become capital purchases which are depreciated at a 30-per-cent-per-year rate. When a designated animal is sold, the proceeds are included in income, and the undepreciated cost is recorded as an expense.

Fifteen internationally recognized speakers from the horse industry, research and business community will be featured in the conference program.

For registration information contact Alberta Agriculture's horse industry branch at 427-8905 in Edmonton.

There's no right way to parent

By Val Boyko

There are no perfect families, nor is there a right way to parent. Children, however, hold as an ideal, the traditional family constellation.

They are aware of the changes taking place amongst families: they see divorce, separation or live-in arrangements and realize these arrangements are not readily accepted nor understood by everyone.

They know about them but do not want to be part of them. When faced with them, they realize they deviate from the norm, and they are stressed by this realization. However, the child of the traditional two-parent family can face a number of stressors as well.

The two-parent family, defined as husband and wife living together, has changed dramatically in the past years. The breadwinner father and housewife mother are evident in only a few homes.

With the increasing number of mothers working outside of the home, children are more often cared for by others. Brenner (1984) states that no matter how good the child care arrangements are, the children still experience some level of stress.

Interagency presents...

They are faced with adjusting to a new environment and are forced to adhere to time schedules that coincide with their parents' working schedules. Parents who themselves must juggle complex schedules are under a great deal of stress. Their children sense this tension and are affected by it.

The mobility of today's family also has an effect on children. Moving is a time of separation. New homes mean new neighborhoods, new friends and new schools. To a child, the loss of a place is like the loss of a family member. Children are seldom able to share in the decision to move.

The nature of parents' work or their dedication to it also has an effect on children. A number of children live with workaholic parents, parents whose career ambitions supersede those of parenthood. All the things that money can buy are available to the children, but the time parents spend with their children is limited.

At the opposite end of the spectrum are unemployed parents. Unemployment can become a central theme in a home. Children sense they are economic burdens.

Parents tend to blame themselves and their lack of finances for the problems their children may have. They also tend to rely on their children for the kind of emotional support that is beyond their years.

Sleepless nights all in vain

By Chris Kreiser

I was forced to go to the dentist. I'll admit it was not an easy thing to do but a year of trying to ignore a toothache finally wore me down.

I had to give in before I became seriously addicted to the pain killers I was taking (and the policeman asks why are you taking drugs? I've got a toothache? Sure, lady!)

So I made an appointment and was scared and nervous for a week. Sleepless nights were filled with visions of high-pitched drills dancing in my head.

I couldn't tell anyone about it either. Because as soon as you start talking about dentists everyone has their fingers in their mouths trying to explain what they had done to them. It wouldn't help.

Have you ever noticed that dentists' offices are always up a flight of dark stairs and down a long, narrow hallway? My heart was pounding before I hit the third stair.

When I arrive at the front counter the girls are so cheery that for a second I forget where I am - and the reason I'm here. My fear calms.

Then I'm given forms to fill out. 'Do you have adverse reactions to anesthetic?' 'Hey,' I start to think, 'there's hope after all.'

Next question: the name, address and phone number of your family physician?

My doctor? Why do they want his name? I knew I shouldn't have come here.

Too late. I'm in the chair. I mention I'm a little nervous about needles (truth is, I'd rather die at this moment than face a needle...)

The doctor calmly advises me not to look...but c'mon, I know better. How can you not notice a three-foot-long needle going into your gums, up your nose and into your eyeballs!

I'm about to tell him this when he interrupts me to say I'll feel a little pinch. Okay, there's a pinch, no big deal.

I wait for a second, then start to tell him again when half of my mouth freezes up on me.

I actually got a needle and didn't feel it. Wow! This guy is good. Where was he when I was eight and going to the dentist twice a week?

Noticing my look of amazement and as if reading my mind, he quipped, "We've come a long way, baby."

SABING QUILTING
Japanese peasants and artisans developed Sashiko quilting to strengthen and thicken those fabrics they permitted to wear by the ruling class. The patterns were adapted to simulate the elaborate designs on the kimono they covered.

Participants in the workshop will create a small quilt using traditional Sashiko designs. Sashiko quilting is a project to work on while traveling, waiting or watching TV, and the cathartic effect is stunning. After creating the design to the fabric, the stitching and bottom layers are sewn to the top layer before hand-stitching the design into three layers. Supply list on registration.

Take a moment to reflect...

We live in a fast-paced society. The ability to move faster and communicate more quickly often seems to turn into the compulsion to do so.

There are meetings to attend, committees, clubs, social gatherings, places to go, things that "must" be done. Things are happening but never getting finished, and we can become weighed down. Sometimes we can no longer even believe in anything beyond the immediate goal that compels us to act.

When this happens, we need to look beyond our own small world to the larger world of which we are a part. We need to take a moment for silent reflection. Instead of feeling torn and distracted, we shall begin, in prayer, to sense ourselves as coming together.

From the Pastor's Pen

By Father Martin Carroll
DV Catholic Church

If you wish to come home to God, you must first come home to yourself. When you are weighed down with responsibilities and obligations and cannot see where you are going, take a moment to restore peace in your life by talking a walk under the stars, looking up, and spending a few moments in silence.

People need such an attitude of wonder, for it helps develop a true sense of proportion and distance. We become less important to ourselves and more integral to the world around us which is filled with God's presence. Wonder lifts us out of ourselves.

This is what the psalmist felt when he looked into the night sky and saw how vast it was, and how small by comparison he was. Yet God loved him more than all the rest of creation.

Houses need annual physical

Happy New Year!

January means our winter is almost half over. Canadians do not need to be reminded they live in one of the harshest winter climates in the world.

We cope with the cold by spending a good deal more time inside. It is a lot more pleasant to be snug and warm in a well-insulated house. Up-grading insulation and draftproofing is not only good for the spirits, it's good for the budget as well. Every winter thousands of Canadian homes lose valuable energy - and their owners' hard-earned money - through poor energy health.

Houses need a physical every year to determine their level of energy efficiency. Windows should be double-paned, with tightly fitted

Consumer's Corner

By Samia Vallevand

weatherstripping and show virtually no condensation between the panes. Doors are the same. Insulated metal or solid wood with a storm door are the best choices.

The basement accounts for as much as 25 per cent of a home's heat loss. All air leakage points need to be well caulked and the header area well insulated with a sealed vapor barrier on the warm side of the insulation. Don't forget the attic. Check for air leaks and at least 25 cm of insulation.

There is more to home energy management than insulation and air leakage control. You also need an efficient heating system. Furnace filters must be kept clean and changed when necessary. Make sure heat registers are unobstructed. To remain efficient, the furnace requires annual maintenance - check your manual. CAC will be happy to help boost your energy management practices. Culprits removed 19 extension cords from local vehicles sometime between Christmas Eve and Boxing Day, RCMP report.

Cpl. Tom Turner said four plug-in cords were reported missing from trucks owned by Strike Oilfield Services.

It was learned that another 15 cords had been stolen from J&A Trucking during the same time period, he added.

GOOD NEWS FOR YOU AND YOUR ENVIRONMENT

On January 15, 1989, updates to Alberta's Beverage Container Regulation take effect.

Now, more containers like bottled water, juice, and non-alcoholic beer and wine are returnable. The beverage container return system has been simplified and that's good news for you, the consumer.

There are only two size categories you now need to be aware of:

1. Those returnable bottles, cans and containers ONE LITRE OR LESS are refunded at a minimum of 5¢.
2. Those returnable bottles, cans and containers OVER ONE LITRE are refunded at a minimum of 20¢.

Milk containers, beverage boxes, juice and beverage cans larger than one litre and products bought outside Alberta are not returnable.

Between January 15 and February 20, 1989, non-refillable soft drink containers of 500 ml or more will be refunded at the old rates. After February 20, 1989, the new rates will be in effect for these containers.

For all other returnable containers purchased under the former deposit system, the deposit you paid when you purchased the beverage will be the refund you receive when you return the container to your local beverage container depot.

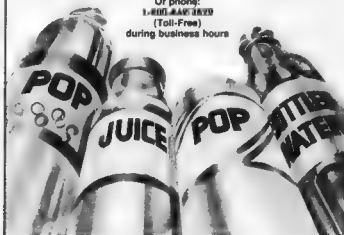

Note: If no deposit was paid, no refund will be paid.

Further details will be posted at your local beverage container depot. Or you can write:

Pasture demands increase

By Gerald Laarhuis
District Agriculturist

The Drayton Valley district is quickly gaining popularity and recognition as an area providing superior pasture.

Apparently, long-term dry conditions in eastern and southern Alberta have encouraged numerous cow-calf producers of these areas to look to higher rainfall areas to provide the necessary grazing for their cattle. With abundant rainfall and high-producing forage land, Drayton Valley is the destination for thousands of cattle from these regions.

Cattle owners who have had their cattle custom grazed in this area for the past few years have generally been impressed. The extra 50 to 100 pounds the calves gain on the superior quality pastures, more than offsets the cost of trucking. In some cases the value of extra gains offsets or exceeds the cost of custom grazing. In addition to higher calf gains, the cows leave pasture in much better condition. As a result, the majority of customers are returning; they also spread the word "back home" which increases the demand for local pasture.

As demand for pasture increases, so does the charge for custom grazing. The expected average charge for grazing is expected to increase slightly to $13 per animal unit month (AUM). The price is expected to range from $10 to $15/AUM depending on pasture quality and degree of supervision provided.

As a comparison, public grazing reserves are charging $10/AUM which includes a rider and salt. Already this year the requests for allotments on local grazing reserves far exceeds available space.

The advantage of private grazing is that cattle can be managed in individual groups on smaller pastures.

This will be the third year the Alberta Agriculture office in Drayton Valley will be coordinating custom pasture arrangements. Already several inquiries have been made to our office. Local farmers with available pasture can contact our office with the details; we can then put you in contact with cattle owners wanting pasture. We strongly advise and can provide a blank custom grazing contract. Every year we deal with cattle owners and land owners who received less than they expected.

In time it is hoped the number of owned and custom grazed cattle in the area will expand. This will require continued high quality pasture, feasible prices and understanding policy makers.

Best protection - be prepared

By Bev Brooks

District Home Economist

Death, injury and illness are all unpleasant facts of life. Every day women of all ages in Alberta face the prospect of having to manage on their own. Although less likely statistically, men could find themselves in the same situation.

In a farm business, managing on your own means understanding the financial side of both farm and family.

Do you prefer to let your husband handle all the banking and negotiating with accountants and lawyers? What do you know about the financial end of the farm? Could you make decisions necessary to operate the farm business? Can you see your husband keeping track of important family papers, running the household and organizing family activities?

When unprepared to assume the other's role, an emergency situation results in crisis.

Each of you has your own area of responsibility. It might be managing household finances, keeping farm records, or dealing with bankers.

To prepare mentally for the prospect of managing on your own, learn about the work your partner does and take the time to help your partner understand the work you do. Together you make a wonderful team; alone you might find yourself adrift in a sea of confusion.

The best protection against compounding a difficult emotional time with financial problems is to be prepared.

Know how to manage your family and business activities at the bank, and make sure you will both have access to money if something happens to one of you. Become familiar with business advisors, such as your accountant, insurance broker, bank manager and lawyer. What type of advice could you seek from each one?

Being prepared also involves understanding how property is owned in your farm business. Know the advantages and disadvantages of each type of ownership. Of course, the opposite side of owning is owing, so make a list of the credit obligations held by your family and farm business.

While you're in the mood to make lists, jot down the types of insurance policies you currently hold and make a mental note to review existing coverage. Record all investments, including the type, amount and location. Gather these lists together in one central file, label "In case of emergency" and tell your spouse where it is. Also, make sure your will is up to date.

For more information, give me a call or stop by the office for the factsheet "Inventory of Family and Financial Papers."

Local youngster needs special treatment in U.S.

Jane Robinson has many worries after her daughter Jaime was diagnosed with AVM last month.

By Belinda Atkinson
Barely 20 months after Jamie Platz succumbed to cancer, another area child, by the same name, begins a fight for life.

Twelve-year-old Jaime Gilbert needs help.

The bright-eyed Drayton Valley girl was diagnosed Dec. 9 with Arterio Venous Malformation (AVM), a rare disorder where the arteries in the brain mait together forcing pressure and possible rupture.

One artery burst Dec. 7 and Jaime collapsed in excruciating pain.

"She just started to scream," said mother Jane Robinson.

Jaime was taken to the local medical clinic and given an injection to calm what the doctor thought was a severe migraine headache. When the medication did nothing, Jaime was rushed by ambulance to the University Hospital in Edmonton.

There her 10-day nightmare began.

Five specialists poked and prodded, trying to name the disorder that had taken away the temporary use of one arm and leg.

She was given a spinal tap, two CAT scans, an angiogram whereby doctors temporarily freeze the brain, and "10 million needles," according to Jaime.

"They didn't even put me to sleep. I watched everything," Jaime said. "It still hurts."

The little girl received morphine, demerol and valium to calm the pain but, to her family's dismay, she was often unable to recognize them or think rationally.

"She was put in the Election marred by lack of voters

By Steve Fletcher

Six area residents earned seats on the Twin Rivers school board last week in an historic election that was marred by low voter turnout.

Trustees elected for a unique three-year, nine-month term are: Vi Helm, Tom Hutton (Ward 1, Drayton Valley), Colene Davis (Ward 2), James Reid (Ward 3), Mae Tryon (Ward 4), Carolyn Strand (Ward 5).

The new trustees will be sworn-in at the board's first meeting tonight (Tuesday) at Evergreen elementary school.

Returning officer Earl Briscoe said the election went well despite a "fairly light (turnout), other than in Breton."

For example, he estimated roughly 20 per cent of the electorate voted in Drayton Valley's ward.

Briscoe noted the actual election process went smoothly, with the unofficial results available less than two hours after the polls closed.

There were few surprises, although one of the biggest upsets occurred in Ward 2, where Brascu MD Reeve Henry Rondeau came in fourth behind winner Colene Davis.

Rondeau said he was thwarted by the "lack of time" issue.

He said voters in the area believed his duties with the new MD would leave him with little time for the trustee's board.

Another high-profile candidate defeated at the polls was Bruce Cropley. Cropley, a former councillor with the County of Leduc, finished 142 votes behind winner Mae Tryon.

Last month, Cropley lost out in his quest to win one of two new seats on the Brascu council.

Twin Rivers official trustee Rene Marrinier will relinquish his duties following tonight's swearing-in ceremony.

"It's been a challenging task to establish the new division," he said on election night. "I received excellent cooperation."

Marrinier said he will be returning home to Edmonton, but looks forward "to challenges of a similar nature if the opportunity arises."

Election results

The following are the unofficial results of the Twin Rivers school division board of trustees election on January 11:

Vi Helm, 192 (elected); Tom Hutton, 115 (elected); Nancy Jacobs, 92.

Ward 2

Colene Davis, 80 (elected); Colleen Anderson, 21; Henry Rondeau, 16; Jo-Anne Schultz, 32.

Ward 3

James Reid, 72 (elected); Bonnie Hunter, 14.

Ward 4

Mae Tryon, 157 (elected); Bruce Cropley, 15; Evelyn Haight, 34; Delores Olson, 17; Ursula Springer, 46.

Ward 5

Carolyn Strand, 258 (elected); Frances Ekstrom, 178; Jean Huber, 96; Lynn Oberle, 16.

Charges pending after collision

Charges are pending following a two-vehicle accident near St. Anthony's school last Monday afternoon.

According to the RCMP both vehicles were north-bound on 43 Street at the time of the accident.

Apparently the first vehicle stopped for the school patrol and was hit from behind by the second vehicle.

The driver of the first vehicle, Roberta Lee Bast, 37, of Tomahawk, received neck injuries and was taken to the Drayton Valley hospital by ambulance.

Flurries expected

Skiers should be happy this week as ideal conditions are forecast.

The Edmonton weather office is calling for a high of +2 today (Tuesday) and again Wednesday with the overnight lows dropping to -7 C both nights.

On Thursday look for a daytime high of -3 C and an overnight low of -7 C. It will be much the same Friday with a high of -6 C and a low of -17 C overnight.

Flurries are expected throughout the week.

Local News Briefs

Town council is still waiting for a reply from Alberta Environment over a report they submitted some time ago concerning dust problems at Pelican Mills.

The skate sharpening machine in the sports centre generated $91 for the town during the months of Nov.-Dec. The town gets 10 per cent of the funds.

It will cost the town $2.90 per capita to join the Yellowhead Regional Library Association.

The library located in the town's new administration complex (the old arena) is expected to open later this week.

Radio Shack hopes to move into the old library space (back of Cornerstone Gold & Gifts) by the end of the month.

Yellowhead MP Joe Clark was in the riding last week. He made brief stops in Barrhead and Whitecourt on Saturday and held a meeting in Jasper on Sunday.

Greg Pankewicz will play in the Alberta Junior Hockey League all-star game Jan. 21 at Hobbema. The Drayton Valley youth, who plays with Sherwood Park, was selected as the top right winger in the northern division.

Some residents in the West Valley trailer court have reported up to two dozen cats missing in recent weeks.

Area man killed

A 66-year-old Breton man was killed Saturday when his vehicle collided with a tractor trailer on Highway 616, eight miles west of Breton.

The passenger of the vehicle, his wife, was taken to hospital with unknown injuries. The names of the victims have not been released by Breton RCMP.

The driver of the tractor was not injured.

First PC candidate steps forward

By Belinda Atkinson
The first candidate has stepped forward to claim Shirley Cripps' seat in the upcoming provincial election.

Thomas Thurber, of Winfield, announced Jan. 11 he will run in the Drayton Valley constituency. This comes only one day after the associate agriculture minister officially confirmed she will not seek re-election.

"I didn't anticipate either way what Shirley was going to do," said Thurber. "I just waited to hear her plans."

Thurber has worked closely with Cripps as an on-and-off director for the constituency's Conservative party and is a long-time friend of the MLA.

He would not confirm or deny whether Cripps will vocally support the campaign but he said Norm Moore, an auctioneer who was involved in Cripps' political career, will act as his committee chairman.

Thomas Thurber
...first PC candidate

Thurber enters the provincial race with experience in municipal politics and has served on numerous boards governing schools, hospitals and agriculture.

Having served as reeve for the County of Wetaskewin in 1985 and 1986, he said he is not a newcomer in the political ring.

"My background in municipal politics will certainly help me convey citizens' concerns to the government," he said.

Thurber worked as director on the County of Wetaskewin School Board from 1983 to 1986 as well as chairman of Breton's hospital board from 1983 to 1988.

The 27-year veteran farmer and owner of a cow-calf operation also served two terms as chairman of the Alberta Cattle Commission and two terms as vice chairman of the Agricultural Products Marketing Council.

"I understand the problems down at the grass roots level," he said. "A person has to remember to relate problems to the government rather than relating the government's problems to the people."

Thurber would not outline specific projects he would initiate, if elected, reasoning that the campaign is still young.

But he said diversification, tourism, forestry and agriculture are areas where growth will continue.

"I have a lot of ideas but I won't make promises I can't keep," he explained.

"I'll try to ensure a political climate that allows people to expand without government intervention," he said. "I think we're very lucky to have an area with this potential."

Several consider Cripps' vacant seat

Several people are seriously considering the vacancy being left by Drayton Valley MLA Shirley Cripps.

While Tom Thurber of Winfield is the only one to step forward and let his name stand, four others are considering the possibility.

And, another four have said they're not interested.

Candidates seeking the Progressive Conservative nomination in the Drayton Valley constituency don't have much time. The nomination meeting will be held Feb. 10 at the Rec Plex.

Tom McGee, a town councillor, is giving the opportunity serious thought, especially after being approached by the retiring MLA.

Garry Cavanagh of Devon, who opposed Cripps at the 1986 nomination meeting says any decision to run again depends on a land deal he's currently involved with. He should know the results of that deal in a couple of weeks.

Henry Rondeau, reeve for the municipal district, said he's been approached by a number of people. "It's too early to consider," he told The Western Review.

The best bet out of the four is Wayne Gent, a Tomahawk resident, who is president of their ratepayers association.

"I'm seriously considering it," he says.

Mayor Bob Mayhew says he's not interested. That same opinion is shared by Norm Bittner, reeve for the County of Leduc who also opposed Cripps in 1986, Marty Prentice, former president of the chamber and Alder Flats auctioneer Norm Moore.

Moore will be involved, as he will manage Thurber's campaign.

Better late than never Breton's New Year's baby has finally arrived. Kalla Ann Adelaide was born Jan. 9 at 4:50 a.m. at the Breton General Hospital. Kalla is a healthy 2,480-gram first child of Fairlie and Keith Janz.

Annexation war heating up

The battle over who gets Alder Flats and Moon Lake is heating up.

Brazeau MD Reeve Henry Rondeau says he's heard "through the grapevine" the counties of Parkland, Leduc and Wetaskewin plan on fighting the annexation of portions of their territory.

The communities of Alder Flats and Moon Lake each petitioned the provincial government to become a part of the Brazeau municipal district.

Rondeau said the Local Authorities Board will now probably hold hearings into the issue sometime after April 1.

The Brazeau council discussed the annexation question with a Calgary lawyer during an in-camera council session last Thursday.

Rondeau said the lawyer's firm may be retained to represent the MD if "we feel we need somebody."

Opinions

Take time to express our sincere thanks

Most youngsters dream of playing hockey. A lot of those dreams also include playing in the National Hockey League (NHL). A small percentage of those young men make it.

If you were to check the NHL player guide, you would find out that a majority of those playing in the league come from small towns.

Towns like Warburg, Wetaskiwin, Ponoka, Spruce Grove, Hanna, High Prairie, Westlock, St. Albert, Beaverlodge, Viking and so on....

And, if you asked any of them, they would likely be grateful for all the ice time they got back home, in rural town Alberta.

This is Minor Hockey Week in Canada.

A time to thank everyone who sits on the executives, coaches, managers, volunteers and sponsors who help make that one boy's dream come true.

And, for all the time they must spend providing the boys and girls with a place to play, even if their dreams of playing in the NHL don't come true.

The Drayton Valley Minor Hockey Association is one of those organizations that spends a lot of time, even before the hockey season, on providing ice time.

These past couple of years have been extremely difficult. They had to work around a later-than-expected opening for the new arena and a delay in getting the outdoor rink built.

Despite their problems, the local minor hockey association forge on, giving kids a chance to play.

Take time this week to extend your thanks, whether you're a player or a parent, to the many volunteers to give up their own personal time to the Drayton Valley Minor Hockey Association.

MLA retirement announcement comes as shock

Shirley Cripps' decision not to seek the Progressive Conservative nomination for the Drayton Valley constituency in the next provincial election was a shock.

It was the last thing I expected.

When some of the cabinet ministers started announcing their retirements, I never dreamed Shirley would follow. If anything, I expected her to become the next minister of agriculture.

But, after 10 years in provincial politics she wants to put her feet up and enjoy some of the things she has missed. Who can blame her for that?

Being a politician, either at the provincial or federal level, is no easy task. Damned if you do, damned if you don't, is often the position politicians are caught in.

There may come a time, in the not too

Frankly Speaking

By Frank Ryan

distant future, that people in this end of the constituency will look back and see just how fortunate they were to have someone like Shirley Cripps working on their behalf.

Because of the size of the constituency, people in this area who have benefitted from Shirley Cripps' hard work, often behind the scenes and without recognition, could find themselves with an MLA at the other end of the constituency.

Then, we will realize how much work our MLA did.

We already feel that in Yellowhead. When Joe Clark comes for a visit he often makes stops in Edson. He doesn't get out this way very often.

If the PC supporters don't want to see this happen, they had better make sure to get some local candidates out for the Feb. 10 nomination meeting.

Our MLA still has some work to do, and will attempt to get that done before the premier calls an election.

In the meantime, I hope the PC party will get busy and make plans for a recognition night for our MLA, to thank her properly for the 10 years she spent on behalf of the constituency.

School buses mistreated

Dear Editor,
I am writing in regards to how people treat school buses.

So many of you try to pull out in front of us, it seems like the thing to do is beat us on the road or something. I have to stop in town three different times. People don't even seem to see us sitting there. A big, yellow school bus — how can you not see them!

When I was loading two little girls, on two separate occasions, people tried to pass on the right side. The right side is where the children load on. They could have been killed.

Also on the same street, I was in the process of loading four children and a big truck went right on by. The sad thing was, he waved to his daughter who was loading but didn't stop for the lights on the school bus.

Also, turning into Northside Estates, which is a left-hand turn going north from town, people have just kept right on going, pass me and away they go. I've even been stopped waiting for it to clear, with four vehicles behind me, and had people pass all of us. A big truck even passed us in the ditch on the right side of the bus. The children and I tried to get the licence plates but we weren't that lucky.

In another incident just recently, when I phoned to the company's big truck that just about hit us making a left-hand turn, I was told to either turn my signal light on or clean my lights. They were on and they were visible. Maybe next time you could just slow down. It was sunny out and maybe he didn't see them on, but he could have at least slowed down.

So please, when you see a school bus please be aware of the precious cargo we're carrying!

$1,500 fine levied

A Lodgepole man was fined $1,500 last week after he pleaded guilty to a drunken driving offence.

Randall Scott Cox, 29, pleaded guilty to a charge of driving over the .08 mg blood alcohol limit last Thursday in Drayton Valley Provincial Court.

His driver's license was also suspended for one year.

The offence occurred near Rimbey.

Getty has no reason to call an election this year

There is no reason for an Alberta general election this year.

The Progressive Conservative government is little more than half-way through its five-year term, which expires in May 1991. There are no compelling issues that demand the specific approval of the electorate.

Even so, the opposition and the media continue to fuel speculation about a spring vote. And in private, government members predict the likelihood of an election by the fall, if not this spring.

If the government is indeed entertaining any thoughts of a snap vote, it should abandon them.

Costs time, money

Governments are elected for full terms. They should plan their time in office accordingly. Frequent elections cost time and money, to no great purpose.

The present Alberta government still has much of its agenda to fulfil. Provincial Treasurer Dick Johnston's five-year fiscal strategy still has a couple of years to run. The ambitious program of economic diversification introduced by the Getty government so far consists largely of words.

The government should use the balance of its term to ensure those projects actually get started.

The Getty government has still to prove that the diversification plans, and Johnston's strategy will bring stability and prosperity to the province. The balance of its mandate would allow ample time for the trend to emerge.

Guest Editorial

Yet from the perspective of pure political expedience, it is easy to see why an election might be a tempting prospect for the Getty government. Far from being struck with a dose of the mid-term blues, the Tories have been acting like election-bound politicians. They have restored funding to hard-hit schools, universities and hospitals. The announcements of the diversification projects have come hard and fast. On top of it all, a significant number of veteran cabinet ministers have announced they will not seek re-election.

Premier should wait

Faced with incipient challenges from the New Democrats and the Liberals, Getty might want to move swiftly, while times are relatively good, to undercut any advantage the opposition might later gain.

Certainly, the earlier the election, the less prepared new Liberal leader Laurence Deane will be.

The opposition parties will almost certainly campaign on the premise that a change is needed. With the retirement of so many cabinet ministers, Getty might try to counter that with his Tories are the change.

Even so, political expedience isn't good enough reason to call an election. No matter how strong the temptation, the premier should wait.

neurological ward and a lot of the people in there don't have hair...well, she thought they were going to kill her," her mother said.

Jaime is at home now, waiting for the swelling in her brain to decrease. As soon as it does, doctors hope to begin radiation treatments either in Boston or Pittsburgh.

But they fear another artery could burst under the pressure. At the very least this would postpone treatment; at worst, Jaime could suffer a seizure, stroke or coma.

And if the radiation fails to correct the disorder, Jaime will have to undergo brain surgery knowing removal of the arteries would leave her without speech or memory.

It is very important now for Jaime to remain calm and avoid strain.

"She can't go to school and she's not even supposed to read or watch television," Jane explained.

"I feel like I've been grounded because I can't do anything," Jaime says.

Jaime's biggest concern is missing school. The Evergreen student, who was voted November's Student of the Month by her class, fears she will have to repeat Grade 6.

This is the least of her parents' worries. Jane and Jack are struggling with the seriousness of the disorder and the possibility of a second rupture. On top of that, they know Alberta Health Care will not cover the costs of treatment in the United States.

"They said they'll cover the hospital costs according to their rates which is $280 to $500 per day," Jane said.

American hospitals which are run as private businesses, charge a great deal more and Alberta Health Care would not cover medication, airfare, hotel costs, food or even the tests that drove Jaime's stay in Edmonton up to $8,704.

"This treatment could take up to two years with as many as three to four treatments per year," said the mother and Black Gold employee.

"They haven't told us any costs yet but even the flights going back and forth will cost a lot."

Jane has started working nights and her 16-year-old daughter, Roxanna, has quit a part-time job to watch Jaime in the evenings.

Jack received approximately $360 from fellow employees at the Fison Western plant near town who were concerned over the family's predicament. A friend of the family also donated $50.

But Jaime's treatment could cost tens of thousands of dollars and the family is not sure where to turn.

Some suggested seeking money left over from the fund-raising effort to help Jamie Platz, the Buck Creek youngster who for 12 years battled cancer.

Edmonton media and local clubs raised $22,400, not including private donations from Peter Pocklington.

But according to accountant Dan Baines, money not used by medication and treatment in Mexico was used to buy the little boy's headstone.

Jamie Platz couldn't be saved. With your help, Jaime Gilbert has a good chance.

If you are interested in making a personal donation or one on behalf of a club or organization, please contact The Western Review.

Move delayed

The town's move into its new administration complex (the old arena) has been delayed.

Mayor Bob Mayhew told council last Thursday the move is about 30 to 45 days behind schedule.

Originally, the town had hoped to move all its departments into the building by Christmas. The mayor is hopeful the building will be ready by the end of this month.

"It's not creating any problems," he told council.

The building's grand opening will be held sometime in the spring. No date has been set.

Rondeau credits Cripps for MD

By Steve Fletcher

Brazeau MD Reeve Henry Rondeau credited Shirley Cripps with spearheading the formation of the municipality during the MLA's appearance before council last week.

Rondeau expressed his gratitude for "all the work done to create the MD...we know you have taken abuse and suffered some shocks (in the process)."

Cripps, Drayton Valley's MLA since 1979, announced last Tuesday she would not be running in the next election. Cripps is currently serving in Premier Don Getty's cabinet as associate minister of agriculture.

"I told you I wasn't married to this job," joked the MLA. She told MD council that deciding not to seek re-election was an agonizing one.

Cripps pointed out she "thoroughly enjoyed" being MLA but believed it was time to quit for family reasons.

"For 10 years...my family's agenda has been totally tied to my timetable," Cripps said. "Another four years is a big commitment."

In an interview, Rondeau said he doubts "very much" if he will seek the Conservative party's nomination in Drayton Valley.

He added, however, that a "politician never says no to anything."

Rondeau said that, while he has not ruled out the possibility entirely, he believes he may be too involved in municipal politics to contemplate a move to the provincial level.

Weedless Wednesday offers chance to quit habit

By Belinda Atkinson
If National Non-Smoking Week Jan. 11 to 18 isn't enough to put out the fire, then a number of therapies offered in Drayton Valley might do the trick.

Laser Therapies (International) Ltd., from Calgary, and Laser International Inc., from Kelowna, B.C. will each hold a one-night therapy session Jan. 18 — Weedless Wednesday.

For the $100 fee, both companies promise to help you "stop smoking in one session."

The laser technique is based on acupuncture and acupressure, the ancient practice of applying pressure to key nerve endings in the body.

Laser Therapies (International) Ltd. owner Glen Hein says his company concentrates on the ear to reduce physical cravings and withdrawal, the chin to suppress appetite and the liver and spleen to help the body clear toxins and nicotine built up over the years by cigarettes.

If your ashtrays are still full there is a way to keep them empty — forever.

Laser International Inc., under the new name Deleo Laser International Inc., addresses the points that control craving, withdrawal, appetite and anxiety.

Both companies say the laser system is the most modern therapy available and highly successful without any pain, negative side effects or harm.

They offer a second booster, if needed, but they say only one session is required.

Dave Hewko, a chiropractor based in Wetaskiwin, offers a similar laser therapy but, according to a company spokesman, four visits are required to stop a smoking habit.

For a $28 fee, the doctor provides three treatments spread over three days, and then, after one week, a final session.

The spokesman is leary of companies claiming success in one session and says a heavy smoker sometimes requires more than four sessions.

There is much skepticism in the medical community about the success of lasers over a long period of time.

A doctor with the local medical clinic shares the view but says the method also has merit.

"Personally, I say it doesn't hurt to throw in another option. No one knows if the lasers do anything or not but as long as the people think it's doing something," said Dr. Smith.

He recommends relying on two or more methods to ensure success rather than one.

"The latest statistics suggest any single method is 10 to 20 per cent effective," he said. "Combining two brings it up to 50 to 60 per cent effective."

Smith tells patients to combine 20-days to Being Smoke Free, a program designed by the American Lung Association, and nicotine chewing gum.

He says the program, which helps patients to slowly reduce their smoking, will deal with the mental addiction at the same time the gum will help the physical addiction.

Smith says if this doesn't help, there are also medications available to help calm the nerves and conquer the physical addiction.

"These were originally developed as blood pressure medications and for people with other physical drug additions," he explained.

New firehall part of Breton's 'prosperous new year'

By Wendy Carruthers
Breton can look forward to a prosperous new year in the community, according to Mayor Colleen Lee.

"We are looking forward to a few new businesses starting soon," said the mayor of seven years, adding that "we haven't had any businesses close down here."

One of the latest developments in Breton is the Dial-a-Life response system that started operation Jan. 10.

A hospital spokesman said there are seven senior citizens of Breton connected to this life-saving system.

With a phone number (898-3533) and an electronic button worn around the neck, seniors have instant access to help. Whether it be a medical condition or fear of intruders, the participants have contact with the hospital from anywhere in their home.

The day after it commenced, the hospital - where the system is based - had one phone call, though not a medical emergency.

Another development in Breton will be the opening of a new firehall, which Lee said should be operational by March for the Breton volunteer fire department.

tourism project designed to renovate the mainstreets in small towns to promote tourism in Alberta has picked up the tab to have Breton's main street redone.

"The village theme (which is one of the requirements for the funds) will be to unite the past and future of main street," Lee said.

Along with the town renovations will hopefully be the opening of a museum to attract even more visitors to the area.

"There are big plans for the golf course," Lee said.

The addition of real greens last year will be matched with a sprinkler system in 1989.

Lee also said the new ball diamond will help bring people to Breton when they hold baseball tournaments.

"We hope to hold some provincials here."

A fund-raising venture that has been ongoing for two years will continue until enough money is collected to build a swimming pool in Breton high school. Lee says they have collected $160,000 of the needed $500,000 so far from donations because "we promised not to use tax dollars."

Lee suggested that anyone could take ideas to the village office and welcomed ideas for improvements to Breton.

Neophyte skip takes Oilmen's

Al Fedorus made the most of his first ever trip to the Pembina Oilmen's bonspiel final.

Calling the shots for the Champion Chemicals foursome, Fedorus only needed eight ends to down Dave Sluchinski and his Ganske Welding crew 10-4.

Bruce Clemmer skipped his Wild Card crew to a six end 8-2 win over MacFam Enterprises and McGinnis Rat Hole Drilling out of Nisku defeated Brian Hansen and his Sunburst rink 8-3 in the other final match ups.

Fedorus led 4-1 after three ends. Sluchinski narrowed the gap to 5-4 after six. But the Champion Chemical squad put the game away with a pair in the seventh before stealing three in the eighth. Actually, Sluchinski played a big hole in the three ender when he raised one of the opponents rocks into the house on an attempted draw.

The winning skip praised his rink of Bob Powell, Larry Tabish and Bernie Welin for their outstanding shot making.

Prior to his 'B' final against Clarence Layden and the MacFam foursome, Clemmer needed an extra end 5-4 semi-final win over Marshall VanderPloeg.

After Clemmer recorded three ends in the fourth and sixth MacFam threw in the towel. The 'B' event squad also included Maurice Neal, Ray Shapka and Dennis Kneller.

Four games in one day was too much for Brian Hansen and his Sunburst crew as they threw in the towel in the sixth end of their 'C' final with the Nisku foursome that included skip Gord Stephenson, Rick Kautz, Rick Romanyk and Brian Redeker.

Hansen tied the game at 3-3 after the fourth but gave up three in the fifth and two more in the sixth before calling it quits.

Forty-eight rinks participated in the 24th annual spiel. Doug Baird, last year's champs lost out to Fedorus and his rink in their second game. Sluchinski knocked off Clemmer, the winner two year's ago, in their first game.

Midget Clippers drop two; suffer injuries in the process

The midget Clippers lost a pair of weekend games.

On Saturday they travelled to Barrhead where they suffered a 10-1 loss in a game that saw the referee walk out after two periods. And on Friday, the Clippers dropped their 10th one-goal game of the season, this time 6-5 to Mayerthorpe.

Manager George Bergquist says he talked to the referee after the second and told him the game was out of hand. The referee apparently agreed and left the rink. The two linesmen finished the game.

Besides the loss, four of the Clippers suffered injuries in the contest.

Penalties also proved to be costly in the loss to Mayerthorpe.

After the visitors had opened the scoring, Mike Enyedy, Adrian Aganis and Jason Woods gave the Clippers a 3-1 first-period lead. But Mayerthorpe stormed back in the second to tie the game, and then with Kevin Bergquist sitting out a questionable major for interference, the visitors went ahead to stay with a pair of goals.

Paul Polei pulled the Clippers to within one goal at the 23-second mark of the third but Allan Fischer's second of the game proved to be the winner for Mayerthorpe. Aganis rounded out the scoring with 25 seconds left.

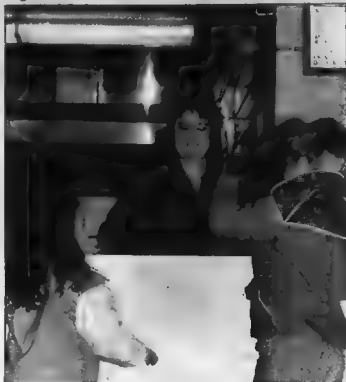

Steven Foster, who replaced starter Len Adler after two periods in the Clipper net, kept the score close with numerous outstanding saves.

The Clippers next action is this Friday when they host Wabamun in an 8 p.m. game at the sports centre.

Volley-skiing

Local children learned the intricacies of cross-country skiing last weekend at the Pembina Nordic Jackrabbit Ski League program. Volleyball and other games were used to give them agility on skis.

Concession owner Cecilia Gustafson says it's business as usual.

Business as usual — booth

The location is definitely new, but Drayton Sports Centre's concession owner says it's business as usual.

Since the move to the new building in November, concession owner Cecilia Gustafson says profits remain identical to the old arena where she ran a concession for two years.

"It was my personal feeling the profits were going to be the same," she said. "Minor hockey and figure skating both had the same amount of time."

The "same" for Gustafson adds up to late hours - 4 p.m. to midnight - and below average pay.

"It's like working for someone else at $6 per hour," she said.

"Some days you're working for practically nothing," she admitted.

But Gustafson is gambling that a new curling rink, which the town will begin constructing this spring, and the new outdoor arena, recently completed, will eventually pay off.

Gustafson cannot increase the menu in the event of a business surge due to lack of space, but she has expanded into hockey tape and laces.

Any additional profits from this area, however, will be used to recoup losses from products the town has eliminated under her new contract.

"The town has put some restrictions on what I can sell," she said. "I can't sell gum, sunflower seeds or cigarettes."

Gustafson agrees with the town's view that sunflower seeds and gum can be hazards on the ice and she says cigarettes have never been money-makers. But she said some out-of-town customers get irate when told they can't buy cigarettes.

Rangers take Red Deer in hockey

Travis Brigley scored three goals and set up another as the Pile Base Rangers downed visiting Red Deer Fas Gas 7-5 Sunday night in pee wee hockey action.

Bryson Kuzek, Greg Thompson, Trent Williams and Robin Smashnuk chipped in with singles. Kuzek also collected four helpers and Scott Riske had two assists.

Pool attendance freezes over; swim lessons starting up again

The cold, sub-zero temperatures kept a lot of people from showing up at the Park Valley Pool, says pool manager Debbie Brigley.

"When it's minus thirty no one thinks of going swimming," she said.

"Don't forget it's really warm in here and how hot the hot tub is."

Brigley says the pool is returning to its regular schedule after a short Christmas break.

Lessons at all levels began again on Saturday.

Brigley noted the bronze medalion class is small, with plenty of room for interested participants.

A new adult class has also recently started up. The class, called CanSwim, "seems to be going over really well," said Brigley, who added students are allowed to progress through the program at their own level.

Brigley said special swims are planned for school students during days when classes have been cancelled due to such things as teachers' conventions or parent/teacher interviews.

Former Norette enjoying 'AA' hockey

Craig Warren is enjoying his first season of 'AA' midget hockey in Leduc. The former Norette bantam captain had 14 points at the Christmas break and his club supported a 12-5-3 win/loss/tie record.

One of Warren's first season thrills came at the recent Nova Cup midget tournament in Carstairs where he scored the winning goal during the semi final game against Wetaskiwin in the third overtime period.

Since school started, Warren has been travelling from Drayton Valley (where he has been attending Frank Maddock high) back and forth to Leduc. However, when his first semester is over at the end of this month, he will be staying with a family in Leduc and attending school there.

Braidnor loses final

The Braidnor Bullets were defeated in the finals of the two-day atom hockey tournament at Wabamun on Sunday. Leigh Melnychuk netted three goals and Blair Matalski added two as the Bullets downed Stony Plain Credit Union 5-3 in their first game.

In their second game the Bullets edged the Knights of Columbus from Spruce Grove 3-1. Gilbert Dobransky had two goals with Jordan Edwards getting the other.

In the final, against the host Wabamun Flyers, the Bullets came out on the short end of a 13-4 score. Michael Thomas, David Lyon, Jeff Buchanan and Edwards had the Drayton Valley goals.

Goalie Eric Wolf was selected as the Bullets' most valuable player.

John Specht led the Flyers with four goals and Andy Lenz chipped in with three.

AD decision made

Town council has made a decision on advertising at the Drayton Sports Centre.

Advertising will be permitted on items that are donated or loaned to the sports centre. These items must be considered functional in terms of some aspect of the arena operation and may or may not generate revenue for the supplier or the town.

Such items include the score board which was installed free of charge by Coke. The skate sharpening machine is also included in this category.

This policy will also affect tables in the main lobby. The town is hoping to get advertising for the table tops, similar to the golf course.

Councillor Jean Saunders was the only one to oppose the motion. She felt the same policy should apply to the swimming pool and library.

Saunders felt that if vending machines were being allowed in the sports centre, then consideration should be given to allow them at the pool.

Council says sanitary budget stinks

Town council is not happy with the new regional sanitary landfill authority budget.

The town is looking at a cost of $216,800 this year. Last year they paid $193,600.

Without even considering the cost increase, council tabled the budget request pending further clarification.

Seven years ago the landfill budget for the town was $131,600.

Four local singers debut at saloon

Three area women took to the stage last week, testing their vocal cords before a live audience at Edmonton's Cook County Saloon.

A fourth gets her chance in the spotlight next month.

Marilyn Rosenberger, Felicia Fleischhacker and Marlene Baumann sang at the saloon in hopes of winning top prize in a radio station's annual contest — a $30,000 recording contract.

Local singer Tineta Courterier will sing at the saloon on Feb. 20.

The three singers participated in the contest's semi-finals last Monday night. Each had to audition in order to get the opportunity to compete for the prize.

Although none reached the finals, competitors like Baumann were satisfied just to take part.

"I've never sang in public before," she said.

Baumann said she has always enjoyed singing at home, but it was husband Kevin who finally coaxed her into performing at the country and western saloon.

She entertained the audience with renditions of songs by Reba McEntire and The Judds.

"It was fun," said Baumann, who added the judges advised her to "smile and play the crowd a bit more — and not to be so nervous."

She plans on trying it again next year.

About 185 people competed in the auditions, of which 42 were selected for the semi-finals. The semi-finals take place at the saloon on six successive Monday nights, the last being Feb. 20.

Brazeau sets up board

The Brazeau MD council has set up a library board to take advantage of available funding grants.

Municipal manager John Eriksson told council the board will probably meet four times a year, and will mainly involve divvying up money.

The MD decided to set up the board when it found that it was contributing to the operation of area libraries but was not receiving Alberta Culture grants it was eligible for.

The municipal district plans to advertise for three members at large. Two councillors will also sit on the board.

Cuts for $3 attractive buy

By Wendy Carruthers
"Shave and a hair cut — two bits."

Those kind of prices may be gone forever, but you can still get a full haircut for under $3 at the beauty culture class at Frank Maddock high school.

Rita Daily, the teacher for the beauty culture students, says there are quite a few regular customers from town getting their hair done for the low prices.

The low prices are not the only reason for the return customers; the students are well trained and only hold their amateur status because they are not paid. The students are allowed to keep any tips for the work they do.

For one group of Grade 12 girls the course has been hard "with so much theory" they say.

The course runs for three years and offers an apprenticeship for students who want to enter the field after high school.

The first year they learn the basics," says Daily, "the structure of skin and hair, roller sets and apprenticeship qualifications."

In the second year of the program the students progress to cutting, perming and advanced roller sets.

The classroom is designed to familiarize students with the set-up of a salon and each student has their own hairdressing chair.

The hair coloring section of the course has produced some experimenting with each other's hair that has raised a few eyebrows.

On the day of the interview, customers were absent while a guest speaker talked about skin and hair care products.

They also study customer service and the business structure of a salon. Beauty culture teaches them much more than hairdressing.

They are taught salon management and retail sales. Perhaps the most important lesson is the future.

Only three of the seven girls in one Grade 12 program are seriously considering entering the salon profession at the completion of the course. The others will use their knowledge for personal and family use. With the business sense they acquire during the program, most are ready to enter any field they choose.

The three-year course adds up to 45 of the necessary 100 credits required for a high school diploma. But a matriculation diploma, needed for university entrance, is unobtainable for beauty culture students unless they return for a fourth year to get the required courses.

For the three girls who will make a living from their talents the future is clear. The others will no doubt put their business training to another use. One thing is certain — they will all look well groomed no matter what they do.

MD wants letter from department clarified

A letter from the deputy minister of municipal affairs has drawn a negative response from the Brazeau MD council.

Council agreed at its meeting last Thursday to request the department clarify its position regarding an industrial tax transfer from ID 14 to the Brazeau MD.

In the letter, Deputy Minister Archie Grover said the department had decided ID 14 "will not be providing an industrial tax transfer to the municipal district."

The letter states that "new developments and the sums of money provided by the province...as well as the fact that according to the newspaper the municipal district was projecting a surplus of $1.5 million..." resulted in the government's decision.

Livestock killed

Between Nov. 10 and Nov. 13 persons trespassed on to private farm land located a few miles north of Tumahawk.

Once on the land, these persons shot and killed a charolais cow which was in calf. The culprits took the cow and left behind the head and hide.

Crime Stoppers will pay a cash reward for information leading to the arrest of any of the persons responsible for this offence.

CRIME STOPPERS
1-800-922-TIPS

After the council meeting, Reeve Henry Rondeau said the MD wants Alberta Municipal Affairs to clarify the reasons behind the decision.

Specifically, he said he wanted to know what "new developments" the government was referring to.

Although the ID 14 tax amounts to only $5,040, Rondeau said an agreement between the two municipalities stipulated the transfer take place.

The beauty culture class works on classmates when afternoon customers were cancelled for a guest speaker.

It is suspected that students vandalized this table

Red Rooster owners angry over blatant property vandalism

By Sue Kenyon

Gunter and Ann Schmidt have suffered with problems from some local youth and they are sick of it.

The Schmidts, owners of the Red Rooster on the south side of town say that generally their young customers are great but last week, 10 minutes after they put out a new picnic table, it had been broken.

"It is the handful of the school kids who are spoiling it for the rest of them," Ann Schmidt said.

The Schmidts say that once school lets out at lunch hour, they get busy. Recently they have had several problems with one or two of the kids.

She says an older man witnessed a youth throwing a rock at the lottery sign outside the store, which broke the sign.

"An elderly gentleman came in quite early one morning and said he had just seen someone break the sign," she said in disgust.

A while ago, Schmidt says a youth entered the store, put his hand in the till and took out a twenty-dollar bill. The youth did not steal the money, but simply laughed and said "just joking."

Gunter Schmidt says the broken table will be fixed and they will be asking around to see if anyone will admit knowing who vandalized it.

This broken sign is more vandalism the Red Rooster has suffered.

"You know, it just is frustrating. You try and beautify it for their convenience and look what they do," he said.

Ann Schmidt said she phoned most of the schools to report the problem and said the principals on the whole seemed very concerned about the problem and even a couple of them went down to the store and had a look at the table.

The Schmidts have owned the store for nine years and haven't had too many problems in the past. However, they are getting tired of what has been going on.

"You know, you could put a bunch of 200-pound people along that bench and I bet it wouldn't break. This is out right vandalism," Ann Schmidt said.

A fire that started because of the kitchen stove burner being left barely in the 'on' position caused approximately $40,000 damage to the Gunn family home on 45 Ave. last Friday. Fire chief Sheldon Fuson said the structural damage (roof, attic, etc.) exceeded the damage to personal belongings. Another fire in a three-quarter-ton seismic truck parked at the Black Gold Inn caused about $300 damage to the truck and $800-$1,000 damage to batteries and wiring that shorted-out.

Man seeks $83,704 from town council

An unidentified resident has submitted a claim to the town for $83,704 in regards to sewer problems they have encountered.

Information supplied to last Thursday's council meeting stated the problems started two years ago.

At that time the town followed normal procedure and took the flush truck to the site to check the main. At the time, the town crew found the line flowing normally. The problem, according to the report, seemed to be in the owner's service line

Six months later, the sewer backed up again.

Once again the town checked the lines and determined the problem was on the town's side of the service line, near the water main crossing. The service pipe had separated and settled, creating a plug up.

This has resulted in the claim.

The matter is currently being investigated by the town's insurance company.

Is your outlet getting into hot water?

Water and electricity don't mix. So be sure to replace your bathroom outlets with lifesaver outlets (sometimes called Ground Fault Circuit Interrupters). When an appliance trips or comes into contact with water, lifesaver outlets sense it and immediately shut off the power. Around water, smart electrical thinking is the lifesaver.

Mill rate stays same

Most taxpayers in the Municipal District of Brazeau won't see any change in their taxes this year.

The mill rate for residential and farmland remains the same as 1988.

There's a two per cent increase for commercial/industrial.

And, electric, power and pipeline will see their taxes drop as a result of a 14 per cent decline in their mill rate.

However, John Erickson, the municipal manager is quick to point out a 14.57 increase last year.

Erickson couldn't give any figures on what MD residents would be paying in actual taxes, due to the variety size of lots and farmland.

Visiting caravans chance to open tourism doors

The local business community can expect a financial shot in the arm this weekend.

Two caravans are scheduled to be in town Saturday, and shopping is on their agenda.

Sixty recreational vehicles travelling with the Battle River Tourist Association cavalcade will stay in town Saturday night.

While another 45 RVs travelling with the Midnight Twilight Tourist Zone will be in Drayton Valley for a few hours Saturday afternoon.

People travelling in both caravans indicated to the chamber of commerce tourist committee, organizers for the visit, that they wanted to visit the local stores.

The RV invasion was discussed during a recent town council meeting.

"I'm pleased to see them coming. It's a chance for us to open our doors," said Councillor Jean Saunders.

"It's an excellent way to kick off economic development and tourism," Tom McGee suggested. "It's good to see them coming here," Charlie Miner added.

"It's fantastic," says Natalie Gibson, who has done most of the organizing.

"It's a big boost for tourism," she added.

Gibson says the response from local businesses has been excellent.

Should school buses be equipped with seat belts?

"No, I don't think so. If there's an accident the bus driver doesn't have time to get them (the children) out."

Lezure Lea seniors complex

Lawn furniture, bird houses would be enjoyed

One of the most beautiful green areas in town is located at the Lezure Lea Apartment grounds.

Unfortunately the area, located south of the apartments is all grass with a few trees for shade.

Some of the residents who live at Lezure Lea, would like to see some lawn furniture so they can get out and enjoy the outdoors.

Their suites are nice, but I can't blame them for wanting to get outdoors. Our summers are short enough as it is.

Another wish a handful of the tenants would like to see, are a few birdhouses on the grounds.

Frankly Speaking

By Frank Ryan

Sounds like another good idea. Hopefully, the board of directors who have to okay such items, will consider the suggestions so the residents can get out while the weather is nice.

Our gas prices always cause a fuss amongst local motorists. Especially when they see what others are paying.

Recently, I motored down Highway 22 and jotted down the following prices for regular gasoline:

Rocky Mountain House	41.9
Caroline	39.6
Sundre	41.9
Cremona	41.9
Cochrane	42.9
Trans Canada Hwy.	45.4

See for yourself — most of them are cheaper than what we're paying.

Girl lucky to escape injury

By Sue Kenyon

Last week a young girl was very lucky to escape serious injury after falling from a horse. Accidents will happen and that is why safety precautions should be taken.

That is why there are certain laws in place — to protect us from ourselves.

There is a law in place that helmets must be worn by those driving motorbikes.

There is no law that horse riders must wear protective helmets. This young girl wore no protection at all.

Comment

It was a relief to see most entrants in the horse race, at the same event, wearing helmets. However again, one positive thinker in the horse race wore no protection.

The girl who did fall from her horse suffered a mild concussion. Who's to say whether she would have still suffered a concussion had she been wearing a helmet? At least, though, the odds would have been in her favor.

It is always a tragedy when there is a loss of life, or irreversible injury. It is even more tragic when such incidents could have been avoided.

Suggesting a law be passed that all horse riders wear protective helmets is perhaps too strong. But if entrants in potentially dangerous events took a little precaution and wore the suggested safety gear, these events may be a little more enjoyable for those watching, and worrying.

Application New (traffic) lights proposed forms now available

Application forms are now available at the town office and from the chamber for the annual Lions Evergreen Rodeo parade.

The parade will start at 11 a.m. on Saturday, June 10.

The parade route will be the same as in the past 14 years.

If entries in the parade want to be judged and qualify for an award, they must fill out an application form.

Town council is seriously considering another two sets of traffic lights on 50 St.

One system is being proposed for the Turbo corner at 46 Ave. and on 45 Ave. into the Dodson Mall.

The other proposal council looked at last Thursday is at the corner of 54 Ave. and Industrial Road.

Total cost of the project is about $200,000.

The price tag includes a coordination scheme linking all the traffic lights along 50 St. Safety is the main reason for the system at the Turbo corner.

At the present time, school buses travelling south on 50 St. are experiencing a lot of problems turning east on 46 Ave. At the same time, traffic travelling west on 46 Ave., is faced with similar problems when they attempt to turn left.

Button-controlled pedestrian crosswalks will be in effect at all the intersections.

No decision has been made by council to proceed with the new signal lights.

Caterpillars to be sprayed by town

The town plans to spray for caterpillars this year.

Council heard last Thursday that all trees located on town boulevards, parks and reserve areas will be sprayed. Priority will be given to the worst areas first.

The town's program does not include trees on any privately-owned property or trees outside town boundaries.

Private land owners are asked to spray their own trees. The town has established a caterpillar hotline. For assistance call 542-5327, extension 252.

In an effort to assist residents, the town has sent out a brochure that includes what to use in spraying the caterpillars.

MD to treat country roads for dust

Chemical applications to control dust on country roads could begin by the end of the week, according to the director of public works.

Richard Tatso said dry weather conditions have made it necessary to start spraying calcium chloride on roads considered a high priority but workers may have a difficult time.

"It's a tough time of year to get started because it is extremely dry but frost is still coming out and making the roads soupy," he said.

"We're going to have to do a lot of maintenance to loosen it quicker."

Tatso said contracted tankers will first treat unsafe roads and major arteries the MD has approved for free spraying.

Approximately 22 roads will receive free treatment this year, under stipulations they be near schools, hamlets or individuals with severe medical conditions worsened by dust.

Tatso said trucks contracted by the MD will then treat roads on a request basis at a cost of $100 per application.

Car give-away promo has good response

Early response to the chamber's car give-away promotion was good.

The deadline to sign up for the 10-week shopping promotion is this Friday. If you were missed, call Judy Forrest.

The second annual classic will start in mid-July. Last year upwards of 400,000 ballots were filled out during a 20-week span.

"Shoppers came from all over," explained last year's promotion chairman Don Regenwetter.

"A lot of people came to Drayton Valley just to fill out a ballot," Regenwetter.

Up for grabs in this year's promotion will be a new car valued between $12,000 and $14,000. Woodland Chrysler, DV Nissan and Sunshine Ford are the participating dealerships.

An anticipated increase in the price of grain may balance depressed feeder cattle prices.

Declining prices don't worry farmers

By Belinda Atkinson

The current declines in cattle and grain prices aren't dampening area farmers' hopes for a profitable season, according to the district agriculturist.

"A lot of farmers in Alberta are not nearly as optimistic as the ones around here," said Jerry Laarhuis.

Laarhuis said a slightly depressed feeder cattle price — $1.05/lb. compared to $1.13/lb. in 1988 — will have little impact on profits, especially if an anticipated increase in the price of grain is enough to balance the loss.

He said barley prices were introduced at a surprisingly low $1.50/bushel compared to $2.30/bushel this time last year but are expected to rise.

"We're back to where we were after the past three years have been relatively depressed. Farmers are generally optimistic," he said.

Area farmer Cliff Whitelock agreed last week there is optimism among producers even though he doubts grain prices will show a significant increase by harvest.

"My own personal opinion of oats is that the price will slow down a bit to (where) it was at last fall," he said, adding that it is still comparably high.

"Cattle prices won't be that strong but a lot can happen before the grain is taken off," he said. Whitelock has approximately 220 head of cattle and dabbles in grain sales only when he has a surplus.

"I don't think prices will change enough to really affect anyone. It will be a medium year," he said.

Farmers are most concerned now with the prospect of rain as they plant this year's crops.

Laarhuis said the area has experienced more precipitation than during the last three years but spring rain will be the factor determining a good year.

"Relative to other areas we've fared extremely well. We get calls each week from people looking for pasture," he said.

He said dry spots in the eastern corner of the province could be the beginning of a "serious drought" problem for some farmers.

New ambulance authority formed for MD of Brazeau

By Belinda Atkinson
The Drayton Valley and District Ambulance Authority is being dissolved to expand service throughout the Municipal District of Brazeau. MD councillors passed a bylaw May 11 confirming the newly-formed Pembina the current authority's jurisdiction ends.

The biggest change, according to Municipal Manager John Eriksson, will come in 1990 when the newly-formed authority is given responsibility over Brazeau's service.

The Leduc-based Tri-County Ambulance Board has been given a year's notice before its involvement with the one-ambulance hospital ends. Eriksson said the number of ambulances available throughout the MD will not change as a result of the bylaw.

The new authority will be responsible for two ambulances in Drayton Valley, one in Breton and one in either Entwistle or Evansburg, as was present under the two authorities.

"It's just basic restructuring. We felt having one authority would be easier than having two," said Eriksson.

Janet Young, hospital administrator in Breton, doubts the shift will have any effect on ambulance service.

Money donated for hospital chapel

By Sue Kenyon
As part of its 30th birthday celebration last Thursday, the Drayton Valley Hospital Auxiliary donated $100,000 to the hospital.

The money is to go towards the building of a new chapel beside the hospital, said auxiliary president Gladys Thiel.

Roger Badick, assistant administrator of the hospital accepted the cheque. In an acceptance speech he said how worthwhile the project is and how he is looking forward to the completed chapel.

Over 60 people attended the birthday celebration held in the main lobby of the Drayton Valley Health Complex. Most of those were members from neighboring auxiliaries. Some came from as far away as Calgary, Lethbridge and Redwater.

So far this year the auxiliary has donated three Lazy-Boy chairs to the extended care unit, bought a video cassette recorder for the children's ward and started raising money for the chapel.

The hospital was officially opened in 1958 and the auxiliary was organized in January of 1959.

Caravans roll in to town on weekend

Two caravans are scheduled to visit Drayton Valley on Saturday.

Forty-five recreational vehicles travelling with the Midnight Twilight Tourist Association are expected to start arriving in town about 2 p.m.

They will be parked along 50th Street near the Dodson Mall.

"About the time the (Midnight) Twilight caravan is departing, 60 RVs will be arriving..."

They are expected to depart about 4 p.m. for Em-T Town near Alder Flats were they will spend the evening.

About the time the Midnight Twilight caravan is departing, 60 RVs will be arriving as part of the Battle River Tourist Association cavalcade.

They will camp at West Valley Park for their overnight stay.

Like members of the Midnight Twilight group, the Battle River travellers plan to spend a couple hours shopping Saturday afternoon.

After supper, entertainment has been arranged by the host chamber of commerce.

On Sunday, the visitors will be shuttled to the Elks Hall for a pancake breakfast.

This will be followed by an outdoor church service, lunch and tours of the area. Some of the tours will include Pelican Spruce Mills and around town. Some members of the caravan have expressed an interest in fishing, golfing and swimming.

4-H prepares for big day

The annual 4-H achievement day will be held next Monday (May 29) in the Drayton Sports Centre.

Fifty-five 4-H members from four clubs are expected to compete in the day-long event. The four clubs represented include Lin-Berry-Buck, Lobstick, Tomahawk and Two Rivers.

Competition opens at 11 a.m. with the show followed by the inter-club at 1 p.m. and the sale at 6 p.m.

About 50 steers are expected to be sold during the auction. For the 25th year, Sekura Auctions will handle the sale. MLA Tom Thurber will officially open the show at 11 a.m. The public is invited to attend.

Twin Rivers school division throws council curve

Town council has some major problems facing them before they decide on the mill rate.

The Twin Rivers school division threw council a curve last Thursday when they stated they would need 23 per cent more funding from the town.

It's not known at this time how that will affect the tax notices.

"I don't know what's going to happen," says town manager Manny Deol.

Council will wrestle with that problem at a budget meeting scheduled for May 29.

"We share your concerns for the taxpayers of Drayton Valley, Breton and the rural area," school division chairman Vi Heim told council.

It was explained to council the increase was due to part, because Drayton Valley was now the major partner in the new school division.

Block party planned for MacKenzie Ave.

Town council has cleared the way for a block party. Council has authorized that MacKenzie Avenue from 4220 to 4412 be blocked off for six hours on June 3. The closure will take effect from 4 p.m. to 10 p.m.

HATS OFF TO OUR LOCAL HEROS

Staff Sgt. Jim Humphrey looks back on 11 postings and an array of positions with satisfaction that he's achieved a professional goal.

"As far as an ultimate goal, it was to have the opportunity to run my own detachment and at this point in time, I'm enjoying it and have no other aspirations," he says.

The easy-going RCMP administrator admits the nature of his career makes it necessary to enjoy the time one has in a community without losing sight of the fact a move is likely down the road.

"I expect to be here for a few years yet. We're not looking to sell our house," he quips on the anniversary of his first year here.

Pitching leads Oilers

Strong pitching and big bats carried the bantam baseball Andex Oilers to three wins.

The trio of Bryson Kuzek, Tony Kopp and Greg Thompson combined for an 11-strikeout performance during a 10-4 win over Stony Plain.

Kopp also had a productive night at the plate, collecting four hits, which included two home runs in four at bats. Thompson contributed three singles.

In the second half of the double header with Stony Plain, Kopp drove in the tying run and scored the winner in an 8-7 decision.

The trio of Kuzek, Kopp and Thompson combined for an other 11-strikeout performance during a 14-2 win over Whitecourt.

Kopp continued to swing the hot bat with three singles. Danny Fowler, Shawn Harden and Thompson all had two hits.

Golf lessons popular

The phone is ringing off the hook at the Drayton Valley golf course.

Mike Townley, back for his second season as head professional, says the response has been excellent. Townley says the membership so far this year has surpassed last year's total and he expects it to top the 600 mark by the end of the golfing season.

"We're seeing a lot of new golfers and it seems a lot of former members are coming back," Townley says.

The addition of nine holes is also helping. With 18 holes, Townley says there isn't a time of the day when golfers can't be accommodated.

Besides memberships and green fees, golf lessons have been extremely popular.

Eleven four-hour sessions are full and several golfers are on a waiting list.

"No one will be turned away," says Townley.

The pro says the course is in excellent condition.

The club championships will be held this Saturday and Sunday followed by the Oilmen's June 2-4.

Better diamond facilities needed

The Drayton Valley Slow-Pitch League is concerned about the conditions of some of the playing fields in town.

Marty Prentice, president of the 54-team, 800-member slow-pitch league expressed his concerns in a recent letter to town council.

"It has now become obvious to us that Drayton Valley is in definite need of more and better diamond facilities," Prentice stated in his letter.

"Many of our league games are played on poor diamonds which should be substantially upgraded. Additionally, new diamonds are needed to fully accommodate all of the games that we would like to play within our schedule," he added.

It was also pointed out, that many of the facilities slow-pitch are currently using are poorly constructed and maintained, namely, the diamonds located on school property.

In response, Mayor Bob Mayhew has informed Prentice the town purchased the old Woods property in order to have an increased area in West Valley Park for such facilities.

"In order to continue to suffice the needed demand, as you suggested, we intend to pursue this project with the municipal district and the Twin Rivers school division," the mayor stated.

"As you can appreciate, a project such as ball diamonds cannot be realized this season, but council will be adding this issue to their project priority list," he added.

Recreation director Paul Nielsen told council last week two diamonds had been upgraded in West Valley Park this season.

Slow-pitch, who pays a user fee of $2,700 assisted in that project.

'Eighty movies in six months'

By Steve Fletcher

Gary Pasichynk is the ultimate film buff.

Over the last six months, for instance, he has sat through roughly 80 movies — seeing all of them an average of five times in a single week.

Eighty movies is a mere fraction of the total cinematic diet for Pasichynk, who has been comfortably ensconced inside the nearest thing to a balcony seat at the Cadium theatre for six of the last 10 years.

Diehard, starring Bruce Willis, eclipsed most recent movies in his esteem column — noting that he watched it eight or nine times "and never got tired of it."

Pasichynk is a part-time projectionist at the theatre, a position he has enjoyed off and on since Grade 8.

He says films as interesting as Diehard don't come around too often — watching a movie once in its entirety "is usually enough."

But, still, it's not the type of job Pasichynk is likely to give up, especially when his vantage point leaves him with the best seat in the house.

"It's kind of like a hobby," he said. "It gives me something to do in the evening...I don't consider it work."

Pasichynk's night at the cinema begins about an hour before showtime.

His first task is to splice together the six reels of film that usually constitute one, feature-length movie and to transform them onto two 32-inch reels for the theatre's projectors.

"If the film is in good shape, I'll usually have it ready to go in half an hour," said Pasichynk.

The projectionist's worst nightmare?

"Having the film break — at least it was when I first started. Now it doesn't bother me as much, I just get it fixed as quickly as I can."

Pasichynk noted that he must often cope with catcalls from the more rambunctious members of the audience when something goes awry.

"They get whistling or clapping or booing at times and sometimes they'll call your name out," said Pasichynk, a life-long Drayton Valley resident.

Only once, he added, has the giant Lamphouse bulb ever popped on him — and that was while working at the drive-in theatre, which closed down in 1984.

The result was a chorus of honking horns.

Pasichynk agrees having such close contact with the movie scene has instilled in him a keen appreciation for the dramatic arts.

"You can pretty quickly tell the good movies from the bad," said Pasichynk, who pointed out the previews are often a dead giveaway.

The projectionist gives a personal thumbs up to the following movies: Wall Street, Beverly Hills Cop (I and II), Crocodile Dundee (I and II) and Diehard.

Gary Pasichynk loads film onto the projector at the Cadium Theatre. Pasichynk has been working in the projectionist's booth off and on since Grade 8.

Complaints to RCMP skyrocket

The RCMP report an increase in the number of complaint calls.

Staff Sgt. Jim Humphrey informed town council last Thursday the Drayton Valley office had received 742 complaint calls during the months of July, August and September. This compares with 686 for the same three months in 1987. Because of this, Humphrey says the members' workload has increased.

He also told council the number of motor vehicle accidents in town for the same three-month period last year had climbed to 236 from 210 the previous year. An increased traffic volume is being fingered for this.

Busing rates studied

Busing of students to recreational facilities in town has raised some concerns by the Catholic school board.

The board has authorized principal Ron Williams to look into a rate structure for transporting all the students to such places as the Park Valley indoor pool and the Drayton Sports Center.

A questionnaire circulated to the parents, indicated a strong desire for the kindergarten to grade 3 students to ride the bus. At the same time, 110 of 127 who returned the questionnaire indicated their willingness to pay for the service.

However, a questionnaire sent to parents of students in grades 4 to 6, didn't help the board in their decision making.

Twenty indicated they were in favor of walking to the pool while 36 said they would be willing to pay for a bus.

"The older students like to walk to the pool," Williams told the board.

The board also learned last Thursday that the kindergarten class has already lined up a school bus for the 1989-90 school year at a cost of $175 for eight trips to the pool. Each student will be required to pay $15 for this service.

"We are short of big brothers"

Being a big brother is always rewarding

Big Brothers annual general meeting recently resulted in the same board as last year being re-elected as directors.

President Marty Prentice said the purpose of the organization is to provide additional adult relationships to children living in single parent homes.

There are strict guidelines on screening and matching procedures, said Prentice. "We can't cross-match sexes. Sometimes it would be nice, but there is more potential for difficulty. We have a big responsibility making sure that the big person we match up to a little person is suitable."

"Not all (single parent families) need Big Brothers or Big Sisters, but I'm sure a lot of them could benefit from it," said Prentice.

The organization needs more volunteers, according to Prentice. "We do have Big Sisters available, but we certainly need Big Brothers. We have two little brothers that need, so we are short of Big Brothers."

Prentice has had a little brother for the past 13 months and said, "I find it rewarding. It can sometimes be time consuming, but there are certainly rewards there."

Stony Plain Cubs on winning streak

After a slow start the Stony Plain Cubs have found their winning form.

During a three-game span the Cubs defeated the Edmonton As and swept a pair from the St. Albert Expos by scores of 12-1 and 16-3.

Trevor Fedorua worked four innings in the 12-1 decision, giving up just two hits. Kevin Dusterhoft worked the final four innings.

In the 16-3 bout both Chris Hutchinson and Jerry Bartlett went three for four at the plate.

Riders hit the trails for multiple sclerosis

Thirty-five riders joined forces over the weekend and went on a six-hour trail ride and raised approximately $2500 for multiple sclerosis, Colleen Sekura, an organizer of the event said. Colleen Anderson said this was the first year a trail ride has been held for MS in this area and she was pleased with the turnout.

Walkways being surveyed

A survey of roads and sidewalks is currently underway in Drayton Valley.

A spokesman for ISL Infrastructure System told town council last Thursday a report, complete with estimates, should be ready by the end of the month.

Part of the project included a complete walk-around of all the streets and walks in town.

The riders rode from 10 a.m. until noon when they stopped and had a wiener roast.

A steak barbecue was held at 4 p.m. once riders made it back to the start-up point.

All riders had to supply their own horse for the ride.

AIDS education to be taught in three-part play

Medicine Hat's Inter-Act Theatre will launch an attack against ignorance May 30 in Drayton Valley.

In what a local coordinator describes as "educational theatre," the group will perform a three-act play in an attempt to dispell the myths surrounding acquired immune deficiency syndrome (AIDS).

The message in AIDS - Life in the Bloodstream, according to Val Tucker, is strong and yet the performance is often entertaining.

"Someone can talk for half an hour or act for five minutes and still get the message across," said the coordinator for Powerhouse Further Education Council which is helping to sponsor the event.

She said the first component will take place in an AIDS drop-in centre with a portrayal of three people who have the deadly disease and are trying to come to terms with the causes and effects.

"The first component is basically geared toward adolescents," she said.

In the second act, an eccentric maintenance man will sit out on a rollercoaster ride in the bloodstream.

Tucker said children will laugh as he and a frantic doctor rush to teach people about AIDS and the immune system before the ride is over.

In the last act, a melodramatic courtroom scene will take place in which AIDS victims are put on trial. The prosecution wants to put them to death while the defender pleads for compassion and understanding.

A local nurse and doctor will be among expert panelists who will present their perspectives on the disease during this segment and answer questions from the audience.

Tucker said the group has presented three similar educational plays with great success.

"They're very effective because you immediately have the audience's attention," she said.

Tickets are available through the Powerhouse Further Education Council.

MD purchases park land

The MD of Brazeau has purchased 36 acres of land near Modeste Creek for park expansion.

According to municipal manager John Erikson, the MD purchased the land from a private owner for $32,000 to assist an area ball club that was running out of room and ball diamonds.

"I believe the local group has some intentions of (constructing more ball diamonds)," he said.

He said the MD simply purchased the land to assist the group and all expansion and maintenance will be left to the individuals in the club.

Pelican steering committee takes action

The Pelican steering committee, established by the town to look into problems at the mill, has been busy.

The committee that consists of town appointed chairman Howard Olsen, mill representative Bob Olson and Dean Hjelte, Scott Dryden and Wayne Terry, all members from the community, have met with various individuals.

Heading the list are Larry Begoray from Alberta Environment, Dr. Bob Rogers and Bob Booth representing the West Central Health Unit.

Booth told the May 8 meeting that a questionnaire submitted by Dryden and other residents to the health unit had made it all the way up to the premier's office.

And, it was Premier Getty that directed the health unit to help the government try and determine if there is a health problem or if it was just an aesthetic air quality problem.

Rogers informed the Pelican committee that he had met with some residents of the Hillcrest area during the winter.

It was noted at that time, when there was still snow on the ground, that there definitely was an aesthetic problem.

Dryden suggested there was also health problems in the homes.

As a result, two samplers have been located in the residential area, one at Dryden's home and the other at Terry's.

Dr. Rogers suggested to the committee, that for the purpose of this study, the samplers should run 24 hours a day, seven days a week for a minimum of two weeks.

Once a cycle is completed, both the filter and the chart are sealed in an envelope and sent back to Alberta Environment for weighing.

The committee is also looking at placing some samplers next month in order for them to be comparable with the mill's samplers.

In a documented report to town council last week Olsen mentioned the possibility of hiring consultants to come in and do a comprehensive study on the noise issue. It is hoped that Weyerhaeuser will agree to this. The service is expected to cost between $5,000 and $8,000.

Parents expressing interest

Parents are getting involved in the educational system at St. Anthony's school.

Principal Ron Williams told the school board last Thursday that some parents had visited the school, looking at possible programs for the students during the lunch hour. Other parents have expressed an interest in running the canteen.

The visits were a follow-up to some recent parent concerns.

Some of the parent concerns included bus loading, location of the bike racks and activities for the students during noon breaks.

Communication was another concern. As a result the school is looking into printing a parent and student handbook. And, each home room teacher will be encouraged to organize a 'meet the teacher' night.

Farmers must recognize stress factors involved

By Bev Brooks
District Home Economist

If the quality of life on a farm is to be maintained and if the goals of the farm family are to be achieved, farmers (and others) must recognize the stress factors involved.

Some of the stressors that contribute to stress levels on the farm are:

The family and farm are one. The farm family today more closely resembles a non-farm family than it did a generation ago, however, there are still distinct differences. The most obvious being that in the farm family, there is little or no separation of economic and social roles. Marriage partners are business partners and their children perform chores that in another business are often performed by hired employees.

The farm home is the centre for both work life and home life. Depending on your situation and the time of the year, there can be either too much or not enough togetherness. Because of this, open and sincere communications between family members is necessary.

This is evident in a statement made by a farm woman: "My husband hasn't been off the farm overnight in the past 10 years. In spite of this closeness, we find it very hard to maintain a strong family unit."

International conflicts
Estate planning may be one of the most stressful situations facing farm families. Most parents want to treat all their children equally, however, they also want to preserve the enterprise as a unit.

Retirement and land transfer can be stressful. After farming for many years the land itself becomes a form of identity for many people.

Slowing down to allow a second generation to farm, or giving up this activity altogether may be very difficult and we often hear statements such as, "My father is very unresponsive to change — to me, this causes stress."

Economies. Financial stressors often cited by farmers include low commodity prices, rising expenses, high debt loads and lack of regular cash flow.

Income, and therefore cash flow, varies considerably on a farm from month to month and even year to year. This can have an impact on farm relationships. There may not be any spare cash but when grain or livestock is sold it comes in, in large amounts. Family disputes can arise over how the money should be spent.

In an Alberta study farm finances were the leading producer of stress and also a part of many other stress-producing situations.

Agricultural health and safety. Powerful machinery used on the farm have contributed to it being a hazardous occupation. Canadian farms have an accidental death rate 20 per cent higher than the national average. The risks are compounded with farm work done under time-pressure and anxiety-laden conditions.

Weather. Farmers will always have to contend with the unpredictability of the weather. This in itself is a source of worry or stress.

Second-hand cigarette smoke hazardous to bar staff

By Hugh Westrup
Canadian Science News
Tending bar and waiting on tables can be hazardous to the health, according to a team of British Columbia researchers. Smoking, drinking and second-hand smoke are laying low Canada's bar and restaurant workers.

The research team, headed by Helen Dimich-Ward of the University of British Columbia's department of health care and epidemiology, selected their information from 457,083 B.C. death certificates spanning the years 1950 to 1978. Of that number, 1,280 men were classified as bartenders or waiters. Of the women, 436 were classified as bartenders or waitresses.

The results showed male bartenders and waiters died most often from bronchitis, emphysema, cirrhosis of the liver and cancers of the mouth, esophagus, larynx and lungs. All of these are health risks commonly associated with chronic smoking and drinking.

The results were not as strong for women; nevertheless, they also tended to die more often from liver cirrhosis, esophageal cancer and lung cancer.

Dimich-Ward says that it was difficult getting a proper fix on the women because of the small number classified as waitresses and bartenders. In addition, occupational information from death certificates is less reliable for women who often move back and forth between working at home and away from home. She adds, "In the death certificates, homemaker is the typical occupation listed for women."

Despite these shortcomings, the findings of the B.C. study still fit neatly with a survey of the smoking habits of U.S. workers, which showed bartenders and waiters are among the occupational groups with the highest number of smokers. Sixty-eight per cent of bartenders are smokers, of whom 89 per cent smoke at least a pack a day. Half of all waitresses are smokers, of whom 63 per cent consume a pack or more a day.

Dimich-Ward says that even those waitresses, waiters and bartenders who don't smoke still run a greater-than-average risk of tobacco-related deaths.

As a spate of recent studies has pointed out, there are health risks associated with breathing in second-hand smoke on a regular basis. Bars and many restaurants are extremely smoky and often poorly ventilated. According to one estimate, a non-smoking restaurant employee daily inhales the equivalent of 40 cigarettes.

Lodge's long wait over

The long wait appears to be over for residents of the Shangri-La Lodge.

A sod turning is planned for Friday, Jan. 27 involving a major addition. Total cost of the project has been estimated at $2.5 million.

For the average resident the renovations will mean an end to the cramped living quarters most of them have contended with since 1973.

The revamped facility will double the size of most of the residents' bedrooms.

Ray Siverston of Garrick Siverston Architect Ltd. has been handed the contract to design the renovated building, which will include a 38-unit addition.

The new lodge will have 22 units in the existing building and 38 in the addition. All the rooms will be fully furnished with private baths.

Food service and amenity areas will also be upgraded.

The fight to get the lodge upgraded has been going on for six years.

Warburg swimming pool a priority among residents

By Paul Flegel
Leduc Representative

Village residents in Warburg have committed themselves to the idea of constructing a swimming pool, planning to organize now and build later.

A group of about 40 people including Reeve Norman Bittner, Mayor Dale Haggerty and county school trustee Phyllis Schnick gathered recently to give a presentation of pools and discuss the viability of such a facility.

Residents unanimously agreed the village should have a pool, citing a number of reasons, from improving recreation for students to attracting new families to the area.

"In a master plan we did years ago, a swimming pool was rated high on the list of priorities," says Haggerty.

High school principal Ron Mann said junior and senior high swimming programs were costly and awkward to operate as students were bused to Drayton Valley and later to Rimbey, where use of an outdoor pool proved to be the problem.

He added elementary students are given about six opportunities a year to swim but described the system as inefficient and costly.

- In addition, a summer bus-to-swim program operated by Leduc County parks and recreation cost $25,000 for two months of service in the Warburg area.

While the county school board and residents agreed on the concept of a pool attached to the second phase of the high school modernization, funding scenarios and possible partnership by the county have yet to be considered.

Council is currently negotiating with county towns and villages for the distribution of $240,000 recently earmarked for recreation in the municipalities.

Reeve Bittner said it would be unfair to split the funds evenly because each community offers different services and has a different debt load, and every municipality has a different ratio of urban versus rural residents.

Under the current funding scheme proposed for recreational projects, the county would cover 77 per cent of debentures on the village recreational capital debt and operating funds... matching the percentage of rural residents.

Many of us spent a good deal of time tapping up the sunshine, fresh air and picturesque surroundings.

Neophyte paddler catches wave

By Susan Moscieli

With knots in my stomach and knocking knees, this neophyte paddler recently embarked on a full-day canoe trip down the North Saskatchewan River.

I mean, I felt reasonably safe until I met the guides at Rocky Mountain House and was asked to sign a disclaimer indicating they were not responsible if I should be injured, or even if I died while on the trip. Was there something I wasn't told? But, no, the guide assured me it was a form everyone must sign before taking the trip.

A short history of the original voyageurs was given on the bus ride to the Voyageur campsite, from where the group I was with would be leaving on the trip. Talking about men who spent many months on dangerous waters carrying hundreds of pounds of supplies and/or furs on portages did little to relax my nervous system, and I was ready to expect the worst.

Our group was provided with a hearty breakfast before we headed to the riverside to begin our adventure.

We zipped up our life-jackets and prepared to get into the three brand-new 26-foot canoes but first, Wally Wright and Merle Pederson (owners of Voyageur Adventure Tours) told us, there was a ceremony to perform.

Merle said that when a boat hasn't been 'wet' before, it must be christened and dedicated to the Great Spirit of the river, Manitou.

"...ziggy, ziggy, zaggy...ho, ho, ho" — I'll do anything to save my skin.

I presumed it was to keep the voyageurs safe on their journeys and if it would help to get me home in one piece, I was game. So all of us stood in a circle with our paddles pointed toward the centre and sang "ziggy, ziggy, zaggy...ho,ho,ho" while Merle christened the paddles, boats, and poured the rest of the cupful of liquid into the river for the Great Spirit. Okay, I know it sounds corny, but I'll do almost anything to save my skin.

We finally got into the canoes and started our journey downstream. Expecting the worst from the start, I was pleasantly surprised to find it was very relaxing and truly enjoyable. I was so relaxed that rather than spending the whole trip white-knuckled from clinging to the canoe, I found myself chatting with Mike, another passenger in the canoe. In fact, we chatted so much we forgot to paddle and suffered a great deal of teasing when we stopped for lunch.

Lunch was another treat for the palate, especially after spending several hours in the fresh air and sunshine. We were also treated to 'paddlers' delight,' a warm, sweet drink with apricot brandy, apple cinnamon tea and orange juice. The guides joked that in the winter it is called 'skiers' delight.'

The guides also spent time cracking what they called 'current' jokes, for which Mike laughingly said they should be 'paddled.'

On the last leg of our journey, Mike and I paddled to beat the band and made sure we made the others aware when they weren't pulling their weight. Not that I'm a vengeful person, but fair is fair, you know.

When we alit at our final destination, we had a taste of what the voyageurs went through on portages. We only had to carry the canoes about 100 feet (or at least it felt that far) out of the water, but it was no picnic.

We then went into Rocky's national historical park where we took a step back in time. Marjorie Huculak and Kent Lien (Angus Blackwood), dressed in garb similar to the original voyageurs, acted out a scene where 'Angus' comes back from a long portage to have his bannock (a bread type food).

Marjorie invited all of us to taste the bannock while 'Angus' fascinated us with some stories about his long trips on the river. He and the bannock were both real treats and the park was a pleasing wrap-up of the day's experiences.

I can't honestly say I am now a converted paddler and will spend all of my free time canoeing, but the memories are pleasant ones, and I will not hesitate to try it again in the future.

We shared the river with these more daring paddlers.

Behind the scenes.

Angus proudly displays his 'new' rifle.

4-H and summer months go hand in hand: shows, camps

By Tracy Morey
Regional 4-H
Summer Assistant
Gradually the 4-H year is beginning to wind down — achievement days are on their way. However, with the completion of your 4-H projects, begins a new aspect of the 4-H year — the summer months.

4-H and summer go hand in hand with lots of regional and provincial shows on the go and tons and tons of different camps to attend. Helping to facilitate and organize these 4-H summer events is part of my job.

My name is Tracy Morey and I will be your 4-H summer assistant for our northwest region. I held the same position last year but I was then Tracy Plummer. In September of 1988 I married David Morey of Rochester. We are presently living north of Mayerthorpe on a farm.

I am still attending the U of A and will be entering my third year of special education in the fall. Both

4-H News

David and I have a long history and genuine interest in 4-H. We look forward to seeing you all throughout the summer.

I hope to meet with most of you at your achievement days and I would like to wish all of the members (and leaders) the best of luck as you exhibit your final projects. You all need to be commended because completing a project takes a great deal of hard work on the parts of both members and leaders.

For those of you getting your pheasant 'coops' ready, the pheasants will be arriving May 31 between 3 and 5 p.m. north of Stony Plain in the county service yard.

Important dates to remember include July 7 for the regional beef show and multi-judging eliminations. Both of these will be held in the Agricom commencing at 9 a.m. Please try to register members entering into the elimination judging prior to July 6.

If you have any questions about camps, regional and provincial shows or any other 4-H related inquiries, just give me a buzz at the office (874-8248) and I will do the best I can to help you.

Snowfall, snowmelt not far below normal

While April precipitation was below normal across most of the province, winter snowfall, spring snowmelt and runoff have recharged surface soil moisture.

According to Alberta Agriculture, there's enough surface soil moisture for germination. Although winter precipitation was below normal, it wasn't that far below normal and certainly was much more than in the previous winter.

Subsoil moisture, however, is still low in many areas of the province. Areas that were in trouble last year with low subsoil moisture, particularly in the south and east, have seen some marginal improvement.

This year's farm water supply is much more positive than a year ago. There has been some runoff that's put water in dugouts without pumping. Many people had to use the water supplies assistance program to pump water into their dugouts in 1988.

April precipitation was below normal in the province. From Lac La Biche south to the eastern region and in the Lethbridge region, precipitation was less than half of normal. Most other areas of the province ranged between 60 and 90 per cent of normal.

This was Jesse Winship's second ride on a helicopter. Jesse, 8, enjoyed the ride as a guest of Pelican Mills during National Forest Week. He was one of several who won for his poster of forests. The theme was "Who uses our forests?" Each contest winner had a 10-minute ride over Drayton Valley.

Reform Party not pleased with budget

"The federal budget fails to provide the economic and financial leadership which Canadians had hoped to receive from the Mulroney government," says Reform Party leader Preston Manning.

This was in answer to a challenge issued by Finance Minister Michael Wilson for his critics to say how they would cut the deficit.

Manning and Reform Party MP Deborah Grey were speaking at the outset of a five-day tour through Grey's Beaver River constituency to secure grass roots reaction to the federal government's legislative and budgetary proposals.

"Canadians expected strong and effective action from Mr. Mulroney and his cabinet to control federal spending and reduce the deficit," said Manning. "Instead, the federal government will spend $10 billion more in 1989-90 than it did in 1988-89, and the federal deficit will increase $1.5 billion."

Instead of providing such "leadership by example," say Manning and Grey, the federal budget calls for increased spending on the House of Commons, the Senate, the Governor-General's office, the Library of Parliament, the Privy Council office and the promotion of official bilingualism.

The budget does not even contain a commitment to analyze, let alone trim, the administrative overburden of federal departments and programs. In fact, some programs like the Western Diversification office have increased their staff resources (by 120 persons-years) even though their budgets have been reduced (by $25 million).

The federal budget contains no regional breakdown of federal and total government expenditures in Canada, no clear statement of the government's position on interest rates, and no leadership on the appropriate mix between fiscal and monetary policy.

'Lord, go ahead, make my day'

By Janice Snell
Associate Pastor
DV Church of God

A few years ago a saying from a movie became quite popular around the college I was attending. Almost every day in some shape or form, you would hear the words:

"Go ahead! Make my day!" It is amazing how many meanings those two small phrases held. For instance, the most common meaning for this saying was a threat. It implied the person would not let anything stand in his/her way and if someone tried to stop the plans it would be a pleasure to plow right over them.

Similar to this is using that little phrase as a challenge. At college it became a way of communicating to another person that it was a bad day or a way of making fun of some stupid thing you had done.

I have to admit I was probably the one to use this saying the most. I used it in any situation where it seemed to be appropriate. It was by far my favorite saying for the year. After a few months, however, I saw something that changed my thinking about those two phrases.

From the Pastor's Pen

I was walking into a friend's room one day and I looked at her calendar. The picture for that month was a dolphin, standing on its tail, and it looks as if it has a big smile on its face. The caption read: "Smile, God has already made your day!"

It hit me as I read the calendar caption how I had been marching around challenging people to 'make my day' when all the time Christ was there beside me trying to tell me He had done that already. He made my day the very day I accepted the gift of life only He can give.

Now this saying is no longer a cute little saying that was said to challenge, threaten, or to make fun of. These few words have become a plea to God asking Him once again to come into my life and 'make my day.'

He has come and given us peace in a world that seems to thrive on war; He has brought a joy in a world that is often depressed; and He has given us hope where there was nothing but despair.

However, just as God has Chamber directors plunge into new year

With the selection Dec. 12 of this year's directors, the chamber of commerce will now get to the job of planning a strategy for the upcoming year.

Doug Nelson, who heads the finance committee and serves as treasurer, will dive into his duties immediately with the task of outlining this year's budget.

John Mulligan and Peter Rowe will also make an immediate thrust with the chamber's goal of increasing membership.

Tourism, headed by Natalie Gibson, Bob Farras and Linda Bennett, is also "off and running," according to Grant Monsour, chamber president.

The economic development committee, made up of Horst Boehm, Tom Edgar, Dave Thorn and Cathy Polak, will be busy in upcoming months working out the details for a high school career day scheduled for March.

Members Joe Melnyk and Shari MacPherson will begin planning the trade fair next month, a "difficult job," according to Monsour that begins long before the fall event.

Doug Nelson will start organizing in March for the one-man ad hoc hire-a-student committee.

And as the year draws to a close, Ann Krawchuk will organize the farm family award; Jill Lorenz will select the citizen of the year; and Neil Harskamp and Linda Bennett will begin the 1989 Christmas light-up campaign.

Ann Krawchuk and Jill Lorenz will work throughout the year to ensure the running of a properly oiled machine.

Don Reggenwetter will be busy throughout with his office and newsletter job.

The meetings committee, run by Shari MacPherson, Tom Edgar and Linda Bennett, will be ongoing position as well.

Ann Krawchuk and Jill Lorenz will work throughout to head the retail merchants.

Grant Monsour and John Mulligan who've signed up for the nominating ad hoc committee, will also carry constant duties.

And, finally, the environment committee, organized by Neil Harskamp, Bob Olson and Horst Boehm, will be called upon throughout the 1989 term.

Book brigade

Trudy Boos stacks paperbacks at the new library facility last week. Hidden behind the paperback rack is fellow employee Janet Meek. Library staff members are busily gearing up for the opening, which could take place next week.

Woman injured at ski hill

The ambulance was called to the ski hill on the weekend to transport a lady to hospital after she apparently took a bad fall near the bottom of the hill.

Building permits miss $10-M mark

Building permits in Drayton Valley last year fell just short of the $10-million mark.

Figures for 1988 show permits totalled $9,599,141.

This is well ahead of $7,287,750 recorded in 1987 but well off the 1986 total of $11,014,800.

This year's total included $4,649,250 for residential construction with $2,426,911 on institutional, $1,704,989 for industrial and $816,000 on commercial building.

The $4,649,250 for residential construction is the best the town has recorded in the past four years.

The new year could get off to a great start if the expansion to the Shangri-La Lodge expected to cost $2.5 million, and the new IGA, estimated at $1.1 million were announced.

provided and 'made our day.'
He is expecting us to go out into the world and with the help of the Holy Spirit make other people's days.

There are many ways this can be done. It might be as simple as giving a smile away to someone who needs walking down the street or inviting someone over for supper. It might also mean giving up something that was important so you can counsel that friend, or leaving all behind and following God to wherever

He needs you to go.

With Christ with us we can be assured that no matter how bad the circumstances,
Christ has been before us and He's there ready and willing to make our day with His everlasting love. Are you willing to accept that love?
It's as simple as saying:
"Lord, go ahead, make my day!"

How safe are your savings?

By Samia Valleand

How safe are your savings? Consumers concerned about how their money is protected can now find the answer only a phone call away. This is thanks to the Canada Deposit Insurance Corporation's new toll-free information service.

Usually, nest eggs tucked away with a bank or trust company are insured by the CDIC to a maximum of $60,000. But as some investors have learned, not all deposits or institutions provide CDIC coverage. Those deposits not in Canadian funds or investments that take more than five years to mature are not covered. The money in a self-directed RRSP may or may not be protected.

Consumers have had difficulties finding out which deposits are covered and often must puzzle through CDIC's sometimes confusing rules.

For example, the $60,000 limit is normally applied per institution. But if you have a joint account, an RRSP and a regular account, the limit applies to each of them. That means it is possible to have as much as $180,000 in insured deposits.

The new information service should help clear up some of the confusion. But, the Consumers' Association of Canada feels Parliament could allow the corporation to go a lot further to inform and protect investors. CDIC coverage should be increased to $100,000.

WHO'S NUMBER ONE?

Who gets first crack at your pay cheque? Chances are, it isn't you. In fact, if you're like most people, you probably pay yourself last—if at all.

At Investors, we believe that to realize your dreams and goals, you must pay yourself first. I can show you how to do that—and how to make your savings grow. Call me today.

'Here's the world for you' them of '89 graduates

Baseball fans will be glad to hear league play is starting this week for all teams.

Supper and ceremonies for the graduating class of 1989 were held May 12. The theme for this year was "Here's the world for you."

Master of ceremonies for the evening was Jack Hlker. During the supper toasts were given to the bus drivers, teachers, and parents.

Guests at the ceremonies, held in the high school gym, were greeted by salutarian Kim Stevenson. Class historians Coreana Borosewich and Duane Moveld provided an entertaining and interesting piece of information about each of the grads, using some lines from popular music to aid them.

Heather Power, on behalf of the grads, presented Breton high school with a plaque in memory of Stephen Fullerton, who died in a vehicle accident last year. The plaque reads: "In memory of Stephen Dean Fullerton, Our Last Gift, 'Remembrance', The Class of '89' and will be hung in a place of honor at the school."

Valediction was given by Tina Monts, who stressed the importance of education, both at school and home, and the role teachers and parents played.

Twin Rivers School Superintendent Dr. George Bean and principal Mr. Musson presented the graduates with their diplomas.

Breton's annual ethnic evening will be held June 30 at the community hall. The evening will begin with a supper at 7 p.m. followed by entertainment. Erwin's Alpine Band will provide the dance music. For more information or tickets contact Kathy Nuefeld at 696-2142.

Ben and Sheila Halushka are the new parents of Kelsey Paige, born May 10 at Drayton Valley weighing six pounds 10 ounces, a sister for Randee and Linzee. Grandparents are Nancy and Walter Halushka of Breton and Romy and Gary Meyer of Winfield.

The Swimming Pool Society has registered with the "care

Meeting deals with policy

A Liberal executive meeting was held in Drayton Valley last Tuesday.

President Phil Gibeau says the meeting dealt with policy statements.

Secretary George Spentzos and treasurer Joan Proluk also attended the meeting.

"IT'S A GREAT MOVE FOR CLAIRMONT."

Clare Songer, Town Manager, Clairmont, Alberta

Clairmont Town Manager, Clare Songer, is one of a growing number of municipal leaders to endorse Retail Postal Outlets. Over ninety percent of our customers say service at Retail Postal Outlets is as good as or better than the former post office.

COMMUNITY BENEFITS

In many rural communities across Canada, where postal services have been converted to a local business, community leaders appreciate the benefits the town receives from increased access to postal products and services.

Overall the change from a corporately-operated post office to a Retail Postal Outlet run by local business means:

Longer hours of service, often including weekends and evenings.

More outlets. Over the next few years the number of outlets will grow from 5,000 to 7,000 across rural Canada.

More business. Retail outlets, operated as part of a local business, help strengthen the business base of the community.

*Canada Post Corporation is delivering on its promise.
We're in rural Canada to stay.*

Thanks to special volunteers, the preschool storytime program has completed another successful series of story, craft and activity for three to five year olds.

Each session was full to capacity with waiting lists of children wanting to participate. The storytimes were well thought out with a wide variety of themes to capture the children's interest and imagination.

Hire A Student

If you are searching for a job you must do it one step at a time to ensure your success.

Before you begin there are four points to remember: First impressions: people make first impressions after seeing you for a maximum of one minute.

Positive attitude: employers surveyed said a positive attitude was more important than past work experience; enthusiasm and self-confidence were also important factors.

Personal fact sheet: this sheet a person makes up before he begins to search for a job. It includes information like educational background, social insurance number, licence number, former employers' names and addresses, special skills and volunteer work. This sheet helps you be prepared to fill out any application forms and answer any questions that may be asked.

Be realistic: do not expect $10 an hour for a job you have no previous experience in. Also, have an ideal of what type of jobs you would be interested in doing.

Make grad a safe, happy one

Each year, thousands of young Albertans open the door to a bright future when they graduate from high school. Tragically, the door, for some students, is shut prematurely and permanently as the result of drinking and driving at grad parties.

The Alberta Motor Association urges parents and students to cooperate in making graduation parties safe celebrations.

Here are some tips for graduates and parents to help make graduation time a happy, memorable occasion for the right reasons — not the wrong reasons.

Tips for grads

1. Select a student committee to organize and control the grad party. Then select a site that offers controllable access and will not disturb residents of the surrounding community.
2. Keep the grad party safe by eliminating drinking and driving. By taking away access to graduates' vehicles, the chances of injuries or loss of life are taken away as well. This means organizing car pools, volunteer drivers, bus service or a "designated driver" program.

3. Print and sell tickets to the party. The money will help pay for food, music, buses, etc. Tickets also identify people who are allowed to use your special transportation. Only sell tickets to Grads and Guests. They are the only people who have reason to celebrate together.

4. Ensure the clean-up committee does a thorough job so that the people providing the site will do it again for other grads.

Tips for parents

1. Assist the student committee in organizing safe transportation. Auto club members may call the AMA's consumer information department for suggestions.

2. Volunteer drivers must truly be volunteers. Payment of the drivers could render insurance void. (Check the rules with local insurance agents.) And remember: drivers are there to drive — not lecture.

3. For outdoor parties, set up a first aid/transportation/phone centre. This centre should offer: first aid; notification to ambulance service of grad party site; radio to police, if possible; coffee, hot chocolate, doughnuts and pop; trailer, motorhome, or RV for privacy and first aid treatment; strategic location to protect against grade crushers.

4. Remember: time is the only thing that reduces blood alcohol levels, not food or coffee.

By following these guidelines, graduates can enjoy a safe party and parents can rest a little easier.

Certificate Career Programs

In Alberta's expanding economy, it's people with skills who get the jobs. And there's no place like NAIT for acquiring job skills. Why not look into enrolling in one of the following one-year certificate programs this fall.

- Diesel Mechanics
- Millwork and Carpentry
- Welding

Consider the advantages of a certificate program:

- The programs are only 34 weeks in length
- you don't need a high school diploma to enroll - Grade X English, Math and Science are required
- job opportunities for graduates are expanding
- credit toward apprenticeship training may be granted
- financial assistance may be available for qualifying applicants.

Programs begin in late August, 1989. Enrollments are limited by quotas. Apply now to avoid disappointment. For additional information, call

MD staff rises by two

The two latest staff additions at the Brzeau municipal district office are now getting acquainted with their new responsibilities.

Mike Anderson, 23, joined on as the MD's public safety officer Jan. 3.

The former Pelican Spruce Mills employee has been placed in charge of bylaw enforcement, disaster services, and fire safety and prevention.

Anderson is currently awaiting status as a special constable which will give him bylaw-enforcement capabilities.

A uniform and vehicle will also be required.

"It will be low-key," Anderson said of his uniform.

"We want to be (seen as) accessible."

A former member of the Breton RCMP auxiliary, Anderson stressed the MD plans to focus on prevention rather than enforcement.

"We're not going to be sitting behind trees, that's only a small part of it."

Planning and development officer Dave Roberge also started work on Jan. 3.

Roberge, a native of Vancouver, B.C., says his main duties will be to act as an advisor to the municipal planning commission on all developments within the MD's boundaries.

He will also be responsible for the licensing of mobile homes in the district.

A contractor for 12 years, Roberge, 28, foresees good things ahead as far as development within the Brzeau is concerned.

"(It looks) fantastic. It's very positive."

Free trade benefits rural Alberta

By Shirley Cripps
MLA Drayton Valley
I'd like to take this opportunity to wish you all the best in this new year.

The past year for me was another hectic one - beginning with an agricultural trade mission to Mexico and Texas in February; participating in various events at the Calgary Olympics, including a fantastic media reception and hosting at Alberta House; and winding up the year with another trade mission to Asia in November.

The rest of the time was taken up with my ministerial responsibilities and dealing with constituency concerns. I am pleased I was able to meet with so many constituents and organizations over 1988.

With the re-election of the federal Progressive Conservatives in November and the recent passage of the free trade legislation, the free trade agreement became effective Jan. 1. I believe free trade will be particularly beneficial to the agricultural community and rural Albertans. The agreement will provide wider and more secure access to the U.S. market for Alberta's major agricultural and food exports. This is vital to Alberta's continued growth and prosperity.

On a personal note, Lorne and I celebrated our 30th wedding anniversary last fall, which gave me pause to reflect on the benefits and joys of a stable family life.

The premier's endeavors to strengthen the family to date - both through the added responsibilities for the family under the jurisdiction of the minister of education and through the Community Facility Enhancement program - are coming at a time when our society is re-evaluating many social issues, especially child care, broken homes and health concerns related to communicable diseases.

The effects a healthy, happy family environment can have on a child cannot be adequately measured and the Alberta government wants to ensure we are doing all we can to assist in making this possible.

So, we are into another challenging year. I hope you share in my optimism for the future of our wonderful province. My warmest wishes to you and yours for a healthy, happy and prosperous 1989.

Amazing response for local food bank

By Susan Moesicid

Two local women trying to organize a food bank in Drayton Valley are ecstatic over the "overwhelming" response.

"The phone's been ringing off the hook," says Eva Flanders. She said she has already been promised several food donations.

"We need something fast to set up in," said Catherine Meredith. A building is the top priority (for storage and office space), according to Meredith, but other needs include freezers, fridges, shelving, paper and plastic bags, boxes, a scale, some office furniture, and cash donations.

Volunteers will also be needed for pick-up and delivery of food, sorting, and office help. "We're going to ask those people that we help to help us too," she said. "It won't just be for welfare people," said Meredith. "It will be for people on unemployment insurance, old age pension, and low income people with families to support who can't make

Winfield man pinned in accident wreckage

A Winfield man was pinned in the wreckage of a truck for 45 minutes Friday night after the commercial vehicle went off the road in Buck Lake.

John Zawarka, 39, remained conscious while a Drayton Valley rescue crew and Tri County Ambulance used air bags to allow his escape from the Buckler Transport truck.

Michael Delyster, 24, the second occupant, escaped when the truck flipped on its side at approximately 9 p.m.

Both Winfield men were treated at the Drayton Valley hospital, Zawarka for a leg injury and Delyster for a head injury, and released Saturday. Breton RCMP Const. Peter Clark said the accident is still under investigation.

Council wants post office moved

By Frank Ryan

Town council would like to see the post office in Drayton Valley relocated or the parking improved.

Following a "closed door" meeting with four Canada Post officials, that appears to be highly unlikely.

Mayor Bob Mayhew said he was very, very disappointed in the meeting with them.

"We didn't try to demand anything," the mayor says.

Members of council went into the hour-long meeting knowing full well the reported $60,000-per-year rental agreement is up for renewal.

"We got a flat no to relocation," the mayor explains.

"They wanted to know what the town was going to do," he added.

Councillor Howard Olsen was equally disappointed.

Personally, Olsen said, he was disappointed with the people Canada Post sent — two trying to do their job and two others who didn't seem to be interested at all.

"They will continue to do as they please as they have in the past," Olsen said in a disgusted tone of voice.

"We might as well forget it. They're not interested in relocation whatsoever," he continued.

Olsen says Drayton Valley is well down Canada Post's list of priorities for any changes.

The lease, expected to be for another five years with a Red Deer owner, is expected to be signed shortly.

The town also equired into additional parking stalls for the public. In return, they were informed Canada Post is only required to provide two stalls...one for the manager and the other for loading/unloading.

"They don't care where people park," the mayor says.

Because of the stand taken by Canada Post representatives, the mayor plans to send a letter of protest to Yellowhead MP Joe Clark.

Family expresses gratitude for generous support

By Susan Moesicid

A Drayton Valley family, left homeless after a fire that ravaged their home recently, are trying to pull their lives back together.

"It's sort of like a bereavement," said Bev Gunn. "We're trying to get over it."

Bev and Wally Gunn lost many of their belongings in the fire that caused approximately $40,000 damage.

The blaze resulted in most of the back portion of the Gunn home being totally destroyed, and major smoke damage throughout the dwelling.

"I lost all my dishes, pots, pans, and most of my clothes," said Bev. "We're not going to be in great shape."

Gunn said she and her husband have not sorted through all the damaged and destroyed items yet.

The Red Cross asked what the Gunns needed, and has so far donated bedding which Gunn said all she had been sure was needed at the time.

"My neighbors very graciously went around and took up a donation. They raised $488," she said.

The Gunns are currently staying with friends until they can find a place to rent.

"I'm very thankful to the town (people) of Drayton Valley," she said. "Everybody has been greatly supportive."

Amoco abandoning plans for proposed water well

By Belinda Atkinson

Rocky Rapids residents are walking a little taller this week following the news they won a battle against a national oil company.

"We've got 'em beat," proclaimed Glen Belva from the community's general store.

Belva is one of 200 area residents who opposed Amoco Canada's intention to build a water source well to supply the Lobstick Cardium Unit oilfield one mile northeast of Rocky Rapids.

Amoco's plan to pump 50 gallons of water per minute had residents and MLA Tom Thurbur worried surrounding residential wells would be affected.

The company notified residents two weeks ago and the MD of Brazeau this week that the project will be abandoned in favor of rebuilding a pumping station on the North Saskatchewan River.

Jake Buckert, Amoco's district manager, told a public forum in April this station had twice flooded and forced great expense on the company.

Instead of rebuilding and risking another flood, the representatives said at the time they preferred digging a water source well.

Buckert said last week the revamped station will provide more flexibility in the amount of water that can be extracted.

"The river station gives us much more flexibility and that's the major reason," he said.

"Many people preferred not to have the well and we took that into consideration also," he continued.

Buckert admitted the possibility of flooding is still a concern but not enough to prevent the project.

"If so, we'll have to rebuild and review it at that time."

Good news!

The weatherman has good news for all you lucky people who work outside.

A high near 30 C today (Tuesday) will kick off a warm and sunny week.

Expect mostly sunny skies Wednesday with a high near 31 C. The temperature will cool slightly Thursday to 18 C but remain sunny until Friday when clouds move in and the weatherman predicts a 40 per cent chance of rain along with a high of 17 C.

Preliminary inquiry set for October 5

The hearing of a 20-year-old Carnwood man charged with impaired driving causing death following a two-vehicle collision near Lindale recently has been set over for preliminary inquiry in Breton Provincial Court to Oct. 5 and 6.

A 52-year-old Lindale woman died as a result of injuries sustained in the crash. Beth Holmgren and driver Cecil Ellis, 63, were eastbound on a gravel road two kilometres west of Lindale when their vehicle was struck by a vehicle driven by Robert Larsen of Carnwood.

Larsen did not sustain any injuries but two passengers in his vehicle were treated in hospital and released.

Larsen was also charged with three counts of impaired driving causing bodily harm, one count of driving with a blood alcohol level over .08, one count of driving while suspended, and one count of taking an automobile without the owner's consent.

Postal service may change

By Belinda Atkinson

The future of Cynthia's mail service is up in the air following notification that the hamlet's postmaster will retire June 30.

If Canada Post can find a business owner to take over the operation Dorothy Anderson currently provides from the Cynthia Hotel, a spokesman said full service will continue.

If not, Bob McRory said a mail delivery centre will be established and the 19 customers wanting stamps or special services would have to "catch up" to the mailman while he delivered mail.

"Other services would be available at the nearest outlet," he said.

Hotel owner and retiring postmaster Dorothy Anderson said many of the approximately 60 residents already travel to the postal outlets in Drayton Valley or Lodgepole to do their business.

Regardless of whether Canada Post secures a contracted customer or a mail delivery centre, she doubts her 19 customers will notice a change in service.

McRory is confident another business will take over the postmaster's responsibilities and full service will remain available.

"We fully expect to find someone. There has been good response so far," he said.

If another business takes over the contracted retail postal outlet, he said operating hours may even increase from the current 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Friday.

A public meeting will take place in Cynthia June 6 to deal with the issue. McRory said Canada Post has not yet designated a time or location.

Environment open house

Alberta Environment will hold an open house Thursday night at H.W. Pickup junior high school.

The public is invited to attend.

The open house is being held in conjunction with Environment Week.

Displays will be set up and Alberta Environment officials will be on hand to answer questions.

The evening gets underway at 7:30 p.m.

Opinions

Why can't something be done regarding dangerous intersection?

Town council is taking a serious look at installing two more sets of traffic lights on 50 St.

But what is surprising about it all, is that nothing is planned for one of the most dangerous intersections in town. Namely the Royal Bank/Saan corner.

Council is pondering a proposal to spend $200,000 on lights for the 46 Ave./Turbo corner and 54 Ave./Industrial Road intersection.

No one's to argue that turning at the corner of 46 Ave. is nearly impossible.

Pressure to have something done could have very likely come from the school bus drivers, who must get frustrated every time they try to turn left off 50 St. on to 46 Ave.

It's nearly as frustrating for the motorist trying to turn left off 46 Ave. onto 50 St. Especially for those in a hurry to get to the hospital.

Considering the danger most pedestrians face when attempting to cross at the Royal Bank/Saan corner, it's hard to see where the Industrial Road intersection gets a higher priority.

The town has already spent considerable money to improve the traffic problems at the corner of 54 Ave. and Industrial Road.

That corner doesn't seem to come anywhere close to handling the high pedestrian and vehicle traffic volume the Royal Bank/Saan intersection does.

Hopefully, council will consider this intersection before making a decision.

Fond (and dry) memories of May long weekends

The May long weekend means different things to different people.

To some, it's time to plant the garden; to others, it's time for that three-day camping, trip while others either head out to their favorite sporting event, or simply stay at home.

If you stayed at home this year, that may have been the best decision.

Just when everyone was keeping their fingers crossed for good weather, old man winter threw us another curve with a taste of snow, blizzards and rain.

Despite the weather, a lot of diehards still went on that camping or horseback riding trip. And, they undoubtedly have many tales to tell of sleeping in a wet, soggy tent or trying to light a fire when everything was soaked.

When I was growing up, and later when I became sports editor of the Peace River Black News in Dawson Creek, B.C., our May long weekend always meant one thing

— It was time to kick-off the baseball and fastball season with the annual Beaverlodge Sports Day.

Councillor Tom McGee likely also has some memories of that event, as Beaverlodge was his stomping ground a few years back.

Of all the years I went to Beaverlodge, I can only remember it snowing once. Oh, we had lots of dust. But, mostly it was HOT and the weekend marked the official start to summer activities.

Let's hope the weather we experienced on the May long weekend this year, isn't a sample of weekend weather this summer.

Environmentalists taken seriously

By Belinda Atkinson
Environmentalists aren't thought of as drug-smoking radicals anymore, according to Rob MacIntosh.

"At one point, being an environmentalist meant you were part of a fringe group. Now, enough time has gone by that we're being taken seriously."

MacIntosh finds a bit of amusement in the sudden acceptance.

"We've been saying the same things all along but what used to be seen as ridiculous is now accepted as fact."

For MacIntosh and seven like-minded volunteers and staff at the Pembina Institute, Environment Week June 4 to 10 is one in a long line of important signs that society no longer puts progress before air, water and soil.

What began less than a decade ago as a quiet industry consciousness and willingness to hear environmentalists' complaints has mushroomed to big business for retail stores being swept up in an "environment-friendly" bandwagon.

Suddenly North American consumers are thirsty for expensive pesticide-free produce and biodegradable products.

Even the Pembina Institute is finding itself a wanted commodity. Reports and information commissioned by industry have helped fund their efforts not only toward a cleaner environment but also for arms reduction.

The Drayton Valley group now boasts a healthy readership of two regular publications: Environment Network News and Peace Education News (PEN).

MacIntosh admits the bimonthly environment magazine does not break even but membership to the quarterly peace journal has topped 1,800 with subscriptions as far away as Australia and Spain.

All along, the group has intentionally remained small and its efforts unobtrusive.

"A lot of our work is concerned with education: supporting teachers, providing information and going in to schools," he says. MacIntosh says focusing on the school system and contributing to a data-base network does more for the peace and environment movements than the old-fashioned lobby and protest efforts.

"(Students) have an ability to step back from the immediate issues and look at the big question," he says.

Since educators have the need to teach and the institute is trying to inform, it's the perfect union.

"After all, they (students) are the voters of the future," he says. "We're preparing them for their role as adults."

Sentence handed down against Winfield men

The Winfield men each received two years less a day sentences in Breton Provincial Court recently.

Wade Pirie, 19, was convicted of one count of arson, three counts of theft over $1,000, six counts of theft under $1,000, 19 counts of break and entry, one count of possession of narcotic, and three counts of possession of stolen property.

Hugh Larivee, 20, was convicted of one count of arson, two counts of theft over $1,000, five counts of theft under $1,000, 17 counts of break and entry, one breach of probation, and one count of forgery.

Large demand expressed for local pasture land

By Frank Ryan

Pasture land in the Drayton Valley and Evansburg areas is in big demand.

That's the opinion of two district agriculturists, Gerald Laarhuis in Drayton Valley and Evansburg's Fred Young.

When asked about the interest, Laarhuis responded, "It's been extremely well received and overwhelming."

The Drayton Valley office has already made arrangements for 50 to 70 interested parties.

"It doubles yearly," says Laarhuis.

A good percentage of the custom cattle being put out to pasture in the Drayton Valley area are from the east country, around Coronation and south of Calgary.

Laarhuis estimates about 30,000 cows are grazing on area pastures as a result of the demand.

From his office in Evansburg, Young says he doesn't have a single listing, although several parties are still looking.

Two-thirds of those looking in the Evansburg area are from points south of Calgary.

"The demand is higher this year than last. Word is getting around that this is a good area."

Young says he's not concerned about price. That can be worked out, once he gets the parties together.

"It's a viable operation as long as southern Alberta remains dry," he explained.

Tax notices being sent out this week

Property owners are expected to know this week if they will have to pay more taxes.

The town had hoped to send its combined general assessment/tax notice out by the end of the month.

It has been delayed this year due to the general assessment.

Manny Deol, the town manager, wasn't letting the cat out of the bag one way or another, but he did indicate council had always tried to hold the line on taxes.

That may be extremely hard this year with the assessment, new buildings and projects the town has undertaken and recent demands from the Twin Rivers school division.

Warm weather would benefit local farmers' crops

By Frank Ryan

Recent rain and snow hasn't helped area farmers who are busy trying to get their crops in.

Farmers in the Drayton Valley area are really feeling the effects of the weather according to district agriculturist Gerald Laarhuis.

He estimates that between 40 and 50 per cent of the crops were in as of last Wednesday.

The mid-May snow and heavy rains were expected to put farmers a week to 10 days behind schedule.

However, things are slightly better in the Evansburg area.

District agriculturist Fred Young says about 70 per cent, give or take 10 per cent, of the crops were planted when the bad weather hit.

Prior to the rain and snow,

Young says the hay and pasture fields were starving for moisture.

But some warm weather would be great.

In fact, Young says, "It would be fantastic."

Meanwhile, both men say the rush is on to get crops in by the end of the month.

Young says crops could go in later than that, but then farmers have to worry about what kind of fall they're going to get.

Oats and barley account for 60 per cent of the crop in the Evansburg area followed by wheat and canola.

In the Drayton Valley area, oats and barley account for 90 per cent of the crops.

DA opts for carefree lifestyle

Gerry Laarhuis is letting his hair down after a three-year stint as the area's district agriculturist.

The Tofteld native has decided to fulfill a lifetime of wanderlust dreams beginning June 14 when his recent resignation to the MD of Braxton becomes effective.

"I have lots of plans but it's all up in the air right now," he says.

"It's just something I've always wanted to do."

The 27-year-old plans to buy a motorcycle and begin his "year-or-so" journey in Canada.

After travelling with friends, he says it's off to Europe and probably South America.

"It's just something I've always wanted to do," he says.

Laarhuis says he'll work if

Gerald Laarhuis he needs the money and play it by ear — on the trip and after his return.

"I may go back to school or maybe find a job in the private sector. There's always a need for someone with a background in both oil and agriculture," he says.

Laarhuis says he's loved his time in Drayton Valley and has formed close friendships with farmers in the area.

"I'll miss this place," he says. At the same time, he smiles in anticipation of fulfilling his life-long dream.

Cynthia hoping for new hall

The Cynthia Recreation Association is anxiously waiting for a go-ahead from the provincial government to begin construction of a new community hall.

The group, which, according to the president, encompasses the entire community, has managed to raise $12,000 and is now "crossing its fingers" for grant money from two provincial government agencies.

Within the next two weeks, William Yakymyshyn says the group will know whether applications to the Community Enhancement Program and Community Recreation Cultural (CRC) have been accepted.

If they have, the association will receive $76,000 toward the $100,000 facility.

Yakymyshyn said government response has been favorable so far. MIA Tom Thurber has offered his endorsement and MD of Brazeau councillors added their verbal support last Wednesday during a regular meeting.

"If they can get the money then great for them," said Municipal Manager John Eriksson.

Private companies in the area have also been very supportive, according to the president.

Texaco, he said, is donating $3,000 worth of labor and $6,000 for cement and land work.

Texaco purchased Cynthia's former community hall in 1985.

Marshco will provide $2,000 worth of labor and the community has promised $4,000 toward construction.

Yakymyshyn said plans have been drawn up for a 40-foot-by-60-foot building on one acre of land volunteers have already cleared and levelled.

The facility will house a dance floor, sitting area, kitchen, washrooms and be suitable to house up to 120 people.

"This is something that has brought the community league back together," Yakymyshyn said.

He said all 72 community residents are involved and eager to see the project to completion.

Two in serious condition following Hwy 13 collision

A man and woman were rushed in serious condition to the University of Alberta Hospital Saturday afternoon after a two-vehicle collision near Winfield.

The 26-year-old man and a 23-year-old woman, both of Edmonton, were travelling on Highway 13, 14 km east of Winfield at approximately 1:30 p.m. when their Honda Civic collided with a Chevrolet Suburban.

Both vehicles were in the eastbound lane.

The four occupants of the car, between the ages of 54 and 56, were transported to Breton Hospital and later released.

Breton RCMP Const. Peter Clark would not release any names and said the accident is still under investigation.

Rain dampens long weekend

Snow and rain during the May long weekend affected traffic at the Brazeau Recreation Area.

Ranger Bob Hilbert says about 100 units visited the area, however, it was quieter than anticipated.

Canada suffering lack of engineering students

By Sue Kenyon

The future of the economy is a concern to local engineers due to the decreasing number of students entering engineering.

The association of engineers and scientists, APEGGA (Association of Professional Engineers, Geologists and Geophysicists of Alberta) held a district meeting in Drayton Valley last Wednesday.

Grant money totals $2,700

Two area organizations have received funding from the Alberta Sport Council.

The Breton Minor Sports Club will receive $1,400 to provide additional training opportunities with the purchase of a pitching machine.

And the Drayton Valley Gymnastic Club will be receiving $1,300. The funds will go toward the purchase of uneven bars.

In all, the sport council, a non-profit Crown corporation whose mandate is to promote and fund amateur sport in the province, has announced it is providing a total of $48,850 to 18 amateur sports groups in Zone 5. The money represents funding to applicants from the 1989 first quarter of the local sport development projects grant.

During the early hours of April 9 a 1985 Suzuki quad, model IT250E, was stolen from the back of a pickup truck parked at the entrance of a lease road three and one-half miles north of Highway 39 on Highway 759 (Berrymoor road). Quad was bearing licence plate 2CC414 Alberta. VIN available at local RCMP.

Crime Stoppers will pay a cash reward for information leading to the arrest of any of the persons responsible for this offence. You do not have to reveal your identity and if your information leads to an arrest you qualify for a reward.

APEGGA president Tom Chambers said Canada has one of the lowest numbers of engineering students.

"Japanese graduates are joining the workforce at a rate of 630 per million (population/year) The U.S. figure stands at 950 and Canada follows at 260," Chambers said.

The number of engineers in Japan has grown by five per cent, in Germany by 4.1 per cent, Canada by 2.4 and the U.S. by one per cent.

Chambers related the numbers of engineers to economy stability, pointing out that the Japanese economy has taken off since the Second World War.

"The Japanese economy rebounded after WW II. With a small land mass and limited resources, Japan put its people to work. Today I am sure many of you in this audience own either a Honda, Canon or Sony," he said.

Chambers believes it is a lack of public awareness and the engineering image which has hurt the popularity of the profession.

"As engineers and scientists, our work seldom brings us in direct contact with the public, unlike a doctor or lawyer. Few realize the enormous potential for Recreation areas — it will be your decision

The MD of Brazeau is letting the people decide the future of recreational facilities in the area.

In what one organizer described as a key component of a future program, 120 questionnaires have been circulated to area clubs for input on what recreational facilities would enhance the area and draw visitors.

Jeanine Glassford, recreation master planner, said the questionnaires and disaster — we assume people cross a bridge, or take a drink of water without suspicion. Simply put, our work is taken for granted," he said.

APEGGA does have a task force in place presently working towards rectifying the problem. Videos have been produced which are shown to students and there are career counselling public forums will be instrumental in determining what new facilities are built and what existing attractions are upgraded.

"We're going to get as much public input as we can," Glassford said last Wednesday after the MD of Brazeau approved the 10-page recreation and culture master plan.

Once the questionnaires are in, Glassford said the suggestions will be taken to committees set up throughout the province. Chamber fears though if the numbers of engineering students don't increase it could have a detrimental effect on Canada.

"Canada's future is at stake. We must have the foresight to control and chart our destination into the 21st century — to be pro-active," Chambers said.

public forums and the 12-stage plan will move in to the fourth stage for analysis.

"We're going to let this (the plan) slowly evolve and watch to see if we're doing what the people want," she said.

"Instead of making drastic changes, we're going to take adequate time and give people a chance to have a consensus.

Justin Pysar, a product of the Drayton Valley Minor Baseball system could find himself wearing the California Angels colors in the not-too-distant future.

The 19-year-old Pysar, who played winter ball at Saddleback Junior College in Mission Viejo, California, has been invited to a tryout camp in Oakland.

This is one of several camps being held in the United States, which is funded by a number of major league clubs.

The camp, is expected to give major league scouts a looksee at what's available in time for the baseball draft next month.

However, the California Angels may have other ideas.

Word is the Angels plan to draft Pysar.

While the Saddleback Gauchos missed the playoffs, Pysar, who plays both right and centerfield, had a good season.

"He hates to lose, he practices hard, he plays hard."

He hit .327, collected 27 RBIs and tagged opposing pitchers for four home runs.

"He's such a great competitor," says assistant coach Charlie Phillips.

"He hates to lose, he practices hard, he plays hard. Those are intangibles that you can't teach," he added.

Pysar is expected to suit up with a junior team in Morinville this summer, depending on what happens in Oakland and in next month's draft.

The major league baseball hopeful was a member of the Andex Oilers in 1985 when they won the provincial bantam title and qualified for the Western Canada finals in North Delta, B.C.

The following year he participated in an 'elite' program offered by Baseball Alberta. And, he also suited up with the Easyford Colts of the Oilfield Baseball League.

Alberta Environment's 'Tour' will be visiting your community to celebrate Environment Week, June 4-11.

Most would agree, there is no greater concern than for the future of our environment — the home we share.

To bring that important message to the people of Alberta, to reinforce the necessity for all residents to lead an environmentally conscious lifestyle, a team of Alberta Environment staff will travel to communities throughout the province.

The 'tour' or open house will offer local residents opportunities to find out how to reduce, re-use, and recycle household waste, conserve water in their home, store and use pesticides safely to minimize impact, and eliminate CFCs.

The 'tour' will arrive in:

Drayton Valley, June 1st,
H.W. Pickup Jr. High School
7:00 - 9:00 p.m.

Please make an effort to get involved, to discover that each one of us can make a difference.

Klein on the spot

Grant Mitchell, Liberal environment critic, has stated that if Environmental Minister Ralph Klein seriously wanted to reduce toxic spills in Alberta he would change Alberta's transportation of dangerous goods regulations.

In the wake of three major Edmonton area spills, within a month, Mitchell criticized the government's failure to "toughen up" employee training standards. At present, an employee is deemed to be fully trained in the handling of dangerous goods at his employer's discretion.

"It's scandalous that in Alberta a truck driver is certified to handle toxic goods when his boss says so by filling out a 13-point form."

Mitchell slammed the present certification process for its weak guidelines governing emergency action, spill reporting and proper use of safety equipment. "It's obvious that in situations like the Lamont spill, proper training would have protected the public."

The Liberal environment critic pointed out that Alberta's spills legislation is weak in three additional areas. First, a system of compensation is needed to assist victims. Second, the spills reporting centre must have improved telephone capacity. Finally, any spill must be automatically characterized as an offence so as to simplify spills prosecution.

Mitchell concluded that if we want to ensure highways are reasonably safe from weekly toxic spills the Alberta government must move now to improve the impartiality of dangerous goods training and licensing.

Hold it!

Boys will be boys, and these two are no different. Even the simple sport of tossing a football around in the front yard is turned into an all-out competition, however friendly it may start out to be.

Gov't funds paving job

The Alberta government will provide funding for a major paving project in the Mulhurst area.

The project involves the construction of base pavement on Secondary Road 616 from the junction of Secondary Road 778, south of Thorsby, for 8.3 kilometres to east of Mulhurst.

The project also includes paving of the access road from Secondary Road 616 for 2.6 kilometres to Mulhurst and Argenta Beach.

The work is scheduled for completion this summer.

Home-All Building Centre Joins the Computer Age

If you've been shopping at the Home-All Building Centre this month, you may have noticed that computerized terminals have replaced the more conventional cash registers at the check out area where you order your materials and pay for your purchases.

Manager Rick Allen checking inventory levels.

By making this change, Home-All joins many other large Home-All Building supply dealers that have converted their stores to this system with excellent results over the past two years.

Robin Wardlow and Amy Blais processing daily invoices.

To support the installation of this new system, installation and training representatives from Builder Mart Computer Systems were on hand to train management and staff on how to use the new system.

Linda Rybak and Alex Blais checking sale items.

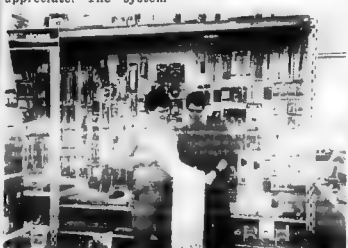

"there are many benefits of this new system"

Jack Allan, manager of Home-All Building Centre explains that "there are many benefits of this new system which customers will appreciate. The system keeps track of the sales of every item in the store. This assists us in identifying products that customers don't want and replacing them with other products that are more in demand. This process will significantly improve the chances of you being able to buy exactly what you need when you need it."

"Also this new system greatly assists us with our ordering. It keeps track of every single item we carry in the store (would you believe 10,000 items) and tells us when we should be placing an order for replacement stock. This should drastically reduce the number of times we are sold out of certain items," Allen added.

It will also enable us to give quicker quotes and prices on items like decks, garages, houses, farm and shop buildings.

Jerry Osland captured the best overall title in the men's low gross category with 160. Joe Palmer came in second with 165.

Kathy Day swung into first in the ladies' low net with a 148 while Carolyn Philips took second with 155.

Cindy Vowk captured the ladies' low gross title with Kevin Fleury swept into first in the second flight, low gross division with a 167 score. Cliff Erickson took second with 168.

Winding up the club's first place winners for 1989 was Al Fedorus who captured 136

A club spokesman said 59 participants in all came out for the yearly event, slightly down from last year's numbers.

After Laughter

By Frank Pavlick
Canada's Sports Post

A player who scores is a sight for stunned eyes. Both arms up in arms, hockey stick to the skies. Like fleas in his jockstrap, emotion retorts. Bad dude on the move with ice cubes in his shorts.

A dekar, a squeaker, a shot in between. The cue for gyrations no one's ever seen.

But eyes of a madman that stick out three feet. The octopus jive for a goalie he beat.

One piston-like arm punching out all the air. While goalenders mumble and smoulder and stare.

"They dance for attention," somebody once said. The top scorers like all those pats on the head.

Great ballet performance on one skate or two. Contortions that say I just stuck it to you.

Whatever the case, it's the ice hockey way. Great moments of spirit are lots of fun, EH!

Battle River Country to boast on steam-powered rail tours

It's official. Battle River Country can boast of having the only steam-powered railway excursion in Alberta.

At a recent BRTA meeting held in Tofield, association manager Sylvia Clemens told members that all this was due to Thomas Payne, president of Central Western Railway Corporation who, on May 1, announced the creation of Central Western Rail Services Ltd.

The latter has been created to conduct the steam-powered railway excursions, which will operate along the Central Western Railway line between Camrose and Drumheller. BRTA member communities Stettler, Meeting Creek, Big Valley and Edberg are located along the line.

The train, named The Province, and its crew will be scheduling tours commencing this month.

Volunteer cleanup successful

Favorable weather conditions allowed more than 15,000 volunteers to successfully tidy up alongside primary highways clean across Alberta May 6, during Alberta Transportation and Utilities' annual highway cleanup campaign.

By the time the spring cleaning chore was completed, 10,896 youth group volunteers and 4,406 of their volunteer supervisors had gathered 63,448 bags of litter from along 9,108 kilometres of highway.

Alberta motorists did their part, too, as there were no reported traffic injuries to the volunteers.

"I think this campaign is a great one for all Albertans," said Transportation Minister Al 'Boomer' Adair. "It's a terrific fundraiser for many Alberta youth groups, including 4-H clubs and Junior Forest Wardens, plus it puts our highways in terrific shape for the coming summer."

"A pat on the back is in order, not only for the volunteers, but also for Alberta drivers whose care and caution insured the campaign was carried out safely. The efforts of the Alberta media who helped us publicize this important event are also greatly appreciated."

Tight wheat supply forces large price increase

World wheat prices continue to reflect the extremely tight supply of wheat says an Alberta Agriculture market analyst.

"We're coming to the end of crop year with this very tight supply. Prices are substantially higher than they were a year ago. Price direction in the next crop year, both internationally and domestically, is dependent on 1989 world wheat production," says Charlie Pearson.

"If there are signs of another crop production disaster in one of the major producing areas, there would be a further tightening of world wheat stocks and an increase in international wheat prices," he says.

Another critical factor in the tight supply situation is continued growth in world wheat consumption. It has been outpacing increases in production. "Even if the 1989 crop is good, the carryover's not likely to increase substantially. That's the basis for optimism in continued good prices." A world wheat disappearance of 536 million tonnes, would leave the world wheat carryover at the end of 1989-1990 virtually unchanged from the 110 million tonnes forecast for the current crop year.

This level of carryover is close to the levels of the early 1970's, the time of the "Great Grain Robbery", says Pearson.

The 22.9 million tonnes of total 1988-1989 estimated Canadian wheat supply is down 41 per-cent from the previous crop year.

International wheat prices in 1989-1990 are expected to remain the same as those for the current crop year, he says. His forecast is based on a supply demand situation similar to the present trend.

The Canadian Wheat Board (CWB) set its initial payment for 1989-1990 1 CW rad spring at $155 per tonne. That's down from $170 for the current crop year.

"Forecasts of high international prices mean producers can expect a $20 per tonne adjustment payment and a January 1991 final payment of a further $20 per tonne."

The CWB initial payment for 1 CW amber durum was reduced to $150 per tonne from $190 per tonne.

Pearson says increased North American durum wheat acreage accounts for the drop and total for this class of wheat won't carry the premiums of recent years to hard red spring wheat. He adds a crop failure in a major durum wheat producing region would push prices higher.

He says feed wheat prices will be highly dependent on both the impact of international feedgrain prices and the quality of the 1989 Canadian wheat crop.

Infant car seat instructions revised following crash testing results

Installation instructions for two popular infant car seats have been revised following crash testing by Transport Canada, reports the Alberta Motor Association (AMA).

A public notice issued through the member clubs of the Canadian Automobile Association affects 129,397 car seats sold in Canada between March 1, 1985 and Feb. 1, 1989.

Owners of 'Dyn-O-Mite' and 'Evenflo' infant car seats, both manufactured by the Evenflo Juvenile Furniture Company of Brantford, Ont. are now advised not to use the rear-facing seat in its most reclined position with only a lap belt securing it.

Check your infant seat for safety.

The installation instructions originally provided said the seats could "be used in all recline positions as a rear-facing restraint in cars." The manufacturer is now issuing labels warning against use in the most reclined position. All other recline positions meet safety standards when installed according to the manufacturer's instructions.

"We encourage all owners of these seats to contact the AMA consumer information department or the manufacturer to obtain a warning label," says the auto club's Bob Undseth. "Even if owners are themselves now aware of the limits on the safe use of these restraints, there's always a possibility the seat could be borrowed or sold to someone who does not know about this important change to the installation instructions."

A tisket, a tasket...

A concentrated effort resulted in the desired conclusion for this determined young man.

TransAlta Utilities looking ahead to bright future

"The prospect for the year ahead is promising, with a strengthened and more diversified provincial economy helping to maintain sound growth," says Marshall Williams, chairman of the board and chief executive officer of TransAlta Utilities at the corporation's annual shareholders' meeting in Calgary recently.

Electric energy sales have increased by 7.2 per cent over the last 12 months, Williams reported. With continued growth in the oil and gas sector, the pulp and paper industry and the chemical and steel industries, TransAlta expects requirements for electricity to continue to rise in these sectors.

Earnings per share were $0.35 for the first quarter of 1989, compared to $0.38 for the first quarter of 1988.

Mice used to help fight disease

By Hugh Westrup

Two Toronto researchers have succeeded in transplanting human bone marrow into mice — a development that will help in the study of human blood diseases and perhaps of AIDS.

The mice still look and act like their old selves, but their biology has been changed so that they are now a tiny bit human.

Human bone marrow tissue contains special 'stem' cells — the 'factories' where the human body makes every kind of blood and immune-system cell. Injected into the mice, the human stem cells have remained alive and are producing human blood cells that flow freely through each mouse's circulatory system.

"Our measurements show that anywhere from 0.3 to 3-per-cent of each mouse's blood is 'human,'" says one of the two researchers, Dr. Suzanne Kamel-Reid, a post-doctoral fellow in molecular biology at the Hospital for Sick Children.

The transplanted mice are called HID (human immunodeficiency) mice.

The transplant experiment's success bodes well for the study of blood diseases, says Kamel-Reid. No longer will researchers be forced to experiment with dying human cells in laboratory vessels. Now, human blood can be kept alive inside the mice and tested there.

There is much medical scientists still don't know about how stem cells produce a variety of normal blood (and immune system) cells.

"There are many steps involved in the production of normal blood cells. We hope that with the HID mice we'll see what these steps are," says Kamel-Reid.

"And as we learn about the process, we'll be able to find out at which step cancerous cells begin to form," she says.

The HID mice may also assist future AIDS research. New drug therapies that cannot be tested on human patients for ethical and practical reasons could be given to the mice. However, researchers must first make sure that the transplanted stem cells are making human blood cells.

The HID mice could also open a new route for gene therapy experiments. Many diseases are caused by defective genes; with the HID mice, researchers might be able to determine whether man-made genes can be transplanted into bone marrow to cure these diseases.

Kamel-Reid says the human stem cells were injected into the tails of the mice and migrated directly to the bones.

To prevent the mice from rejecting the human stem cells, each animal was given a low dose of radiation to suppress its own immune response to foreign invaders. Also, the mice belong to a special breed of lab mice which already has a partially defective immune system.

Kamel-Reid's partner in the HID mice experiments was Dr. John Dick, a molecular biologist in the department of genetics at the Hospital for Sick Children. Funding for the research was provided by the Medical Research Council and the National Cancer Institute of Canada.

Researcher rewarded for paint-watching research

"Watching paint dry" may be a byword for boredom for most people, but that's how chemist Sarah Eckersley spends her days.

Eckersley, a graduate student at the University of Waterloo, has been studying the paint drying process in the hopes of devising new paint formulas that will dry in all conditions.

Manufacturers currently warn users not to use latex paint under certain conditions. For example, if the temperature is below 10 degrees Celsius, a new coat of latex paint will not dry to form a film. Instead, it becomes a powder.

Eckersley has been looking at the microscopic particles, or "polymeric spheres", that make up latex paint. When paint dries, these spheres lock together to form a continuous film, she says.

Eckersley has found that particle size is the most important factor in determining how well a paint dries and also how scuff-resistant it is. In general, the smaller the particles are, the better the paint will perform, she says.

Recently, Eckersley and Dr. Alfred Rudin, a chemistry and chemical engineering professor at the University of Waterloo, received the Ron Foundation Award at a meeting of the Federation of Societies for Coatings Technology. They were given the award for writing one of the two outstanding research papers in their field in 1988. —Canadian Science News

Dramatic rise in temperatures in last 100 years

By Belinda Atkinson
The region's temperature has risen dramatically over the past 101 years but the Edmonton Weather Office is not prepared to pinpoint the

"The weather office is sitting in a large city all the time and it produces a mini climate," says Ken Nelles, officer in charge of the Edmonton Weather Office.

Nelles explained heat rising from buildings and automobiles could have caused the rise from 0.8 degrees Celsius average temperature in 1886 to 6.2 degrees Celsius in 1987, the highest yearly average recorded over the past 101 years.

Nelles said the greenhouse effect, the gradual heating of the earth due to a breakdown in the ozone layer, would also explain the shift in temperature.

But Nelles will commit to neither the mini-climate theory nor the greenhouse effect as an answer.

"It's going to take five to 10 years to determine," he said, explaining experts must see the effects of the shift before they can define the causes.

Nelles also failed to confirm whether a full greenhouse effect, as described with dim predictions of ice caps melting to cause floods, would occur over many generations or a short period of time.

Louis, Balen, 88, like many seniors, remembers a colder Drayton Valley.

"I imagine it would take a few generations, anyway," he said.

While the cause is uncertain, the gradual rise in temperature has been noticed by more than "weather experts."

"It used to get down to 30 or 40 below zero," said 89-year-old George Bedick. "It was a lot colder back then."

He said farmers used to pile straw bales around barns to keep animals from freezing though he doubts such a task is necessary now.

"It's gotten a lot warmer," said another senior. "We never had rain in the winter like we do now."

The woman, who would not give her name, said Tomahawk would receive a foot of snow per night at certain times of the year.

"Oh yes, dear, there's less snow...quite a bit less snow."

Are today's thermometers better?

Remember that sensation of the cool glass rod sliding under your tongue?

It had the power to determine whether or not you got a warm drink and a holiday from school. Today's kids are more likely to recall the feel of metal and plastic.

The CAC testing labs pitted 10 digital thermometers and three brands of fever strips against five oral mercury-in-glass thermometers. They found the digital and glass models were equally accurate, but the former were easier to use. However, the fever strips were about as accurate as a parent's hand.

All of the thermometers were reasonably durable and safe, if used as instructed. All could be washed to prevent transferring germs from one patient to another. Glass models can be washed with warm water and soap; fever strips wiped with a damp cloth and digital units by wiping the probe and shaft, with soap and water or rubbing alcohol.

Are today's thermometers better than those Mom used? The mercury-in-glass ones haven't changed much since those days. The digitals cost more, but they take less time to record temperatures. Those will small children will appreciate their speed. They are also easier to read. Seniors and disabled persons will find their clear, large numbers and easy resetting useful.

Check with CAC's product information office for the complete report on the test - phone 420-0747.

Inspection forces change

A couple of preventative measures have been taken at St. Anthony school.

Two heat-activated fire detectors were installed and connected into the building fire alarm system and the doors to the furnace room of the portables will be locked, preventing unauthorized entry by students.

The action was taken following a visit by D.G. Fulmer, fire prevention officer, out of Edmonton.

The inspection was carried out to determine whether the school met the intent of the Alberta Fire Code, as amended, and to ensure a reasonable degree of life safety was provided for the occupants.

Taxpayers may be hard hit with 'unreasonable increases'

By Christine Vansella
Stony Plain Reporter

A number of local municipalities have come out in support of the County of Parkland board of education's request for provincial transitional funding.

Safe driver honored by Breton RCMP

A Winfield woman was honored as Breton's Safe Driver of the Day by the Breton RCMP and Breton Chamber of Commerce recently.

Const. Heaslip said he searched the highways for a safe driver for more than two hours before he found Sandy Doyle who was exhibiting good, safe driving habits.

Heaslip and Bob Parkyn (chamber of commerce) presented Doyle with a plaque.

Sandy Doyle accepts a safe-driving award from Const. Heaslip and Bob Parkyn.

The mayors of Spruce Grove and Wabamun have both sent letters of support for the grants to Alberta Education Minister Jim Dinning.

"On reflection, I believe my reaction to the report was justified."

The county school board is asking for transitional grant assistance from the provincial government to ease the financial burden resulting from the loss of revenue associated with the formation of the Twin Rivers school division around Drayton Valley.

The split took part of what was once the County of Parkland public school jurisdiction and removed a considerable amount of lucrative power and pipeline tax assessment from the county's revenue coffers as well.

The council for the City of Spruce Grove certainly supports the County of Parkland school system in their request for assistance," said Spruce Grove Mayor George Cuff in his letter to Dinning.

"The citizens of the City of Spruce Grove, already faced with higher levels of taxation, cannot bear the brunt of a further substantial increase in their property taxes," Cuff added.

School board officials have indicated school taxes could increase by 35 to 40 per cent in 1989.

Wabamun Mayor Bill Purdy said his council also supports the county.

"The immediate and short-term financial shortfall (resulting from the split in the school jurisdictions) is alarming," he said.

"Taxpayers in this village will be hit with totally unreasonable increases to meet the supplementary school requisition unless some financial relief is provided by the province," Purdy added.

The minister of education reacted unfavorably to a presentation by the county school board in January, regarding the need for transitional grants.

In a recent letter to the board, Dinning said, "On reflection, I believe my reaction to the report was justified."

"Having said that, however, I assure you that any legitimate problems referred for my attention will receive every consideration."

What do you think?

The town is looking into the possibility of installing traffic lights at the 46 Ave/Turbo corner and also at the corner of 54 Ave/Industrial Road.

Oats group organizing

The assorted group of commodity organizations that represent the interests of everything from beef and wheat to goats and pulse crops could soon have an oats group added to the list.

Ken Motiuk, a Mundare area oat grower, is a member of an ad hoc committee working to establish an oat growers' association. An organizational meeting is planned for late June in Edmonton.

Motiuk says now is the time to "run with the ball". Oats have been thrust in the spotlight in the last three years. A health conscious public began wanting oat products creating a demand for quality oats and bringing premium prices to producers. The oat market was already changing when the Canadian Wheat Board announced in late January oats would be removed from its jurisdiction and become an open market commodity.

Motiuk says an organization is needed to speak for oat growers. Not only would the group deal with grower concerns, but look at the best way to cash in on the demand for oats and how to build the industry.

Dave Vellutini led the Colts at the plate with three hits in five trips. Kevin Hutchinson, Trent Pankewicz and Keith Bills all had two hits.

Tonight (Tuesday), Warburg is scheduled to play in Drayton Valley. On Thursday Easyford travels to Warburg.

This will give all parties involved adequate time in which to make arrangements to install natural gas service to their premises.

The "Buck Mountain Gas Co-op" now serves more than 1200 farms and urban residences, who are enjoying the warmth, convenience and savings of heating their premises with natural gas.

Lee and Sandy Paley paid their fifth visit to Buck Lake school where their songs entertained students from both the school and kindergarden. Students already had their lists of favorite songs, in which they loved to join, and also learned several new ones. Lee and Sandy have recently recorded their television show, Balloon Landing, which will be aired in the fall on CPAC. The show will later be syndicated and will, hopefully, be seen in this area not too much later.

Oil Wives pay tribute to moms

By Darlene VanEmber

The Oil Wives club began its May meeting with a tribute to mothers. It was given by Jeanette Miner.

Members were asked to bring one outfit (no longer desired) from their closets, to the meeting in a plain bag. These were distributed to each table. Commentaries were made up for the high fashions. Members paraded in a very hilarious and humorous fashion line.

The new executive was elected. They include president Eunice Lyle; first vice-president Sherry Monsour; second vice-president Connie Dusterhoff; treasurer Janice Melnyk; secretary Judy Ferrey; membership Arlene MacDonald; reservations Delia Duperron; constitution Gerry Greschner; historian Carolyn Ness; publicity Darlene VanEmber; program chairmen Theresa Stubbs and Candace Anderson and past president Jeanette Miner.

Congratulations to all new executive members and good luck in the coming year.

The next dinner meeting will be held Monday, June 12 at 7 p.m. in the Elks Hall.

Helpful hints for job-hunting

By Tracey Vatter
Coordinator

After a student has remembered all the important points before he begins, he then must start looking for a job.

Personal contacts: Tell your family and friends you are looking for a job and to tell you if they hear of any openings.

Employer canvassing: Consult the phone book and develop a list of the companies you would like to work for and begin phoning and inquiring whether or not they have any job openings.

Newspapers: Both the classifieds and the career sections of the paper have job listings.

Other media sources: Trade journals, radio and television are all other helpful sources.

Employment agencies: Like Hire a Student, employment agencies are a referral service to the job seeker and employer.

Create your own job: Being your own boss can help you gain experience in all aspects of running a business or providing a service.

Volunteer work: Working as a volunteer is not measured in terms of dollars, but in terms of the value of the experience in your field of interest but also provides you with contacts and references that can be used in the future.

Work experience programs: These types of programs very often can turn into full-time or summer employment.

Viruses may cause infertility, say Toronto scientists

By Hugh Westrup

A remedy for human infertility and a more effective form of birth control are two potential by-products of research by scientists in the microbiology department of Toronto's Hospital for Sick Children.

Currently, about 15-per-cent of Canadian men and women are infertile for unknown reasons.

The researchers, Drs. Clifford Lingwood and Pat Quinn, have zeroed in on a group of germs, called mycoplasma. Lingwood describes these as "primitive bacteria" whose size is midway between viruses and bacteria.

The scientists found that when mycoplasma come in contact with sperm cells they attack a certain part of the sperm's cell membrane. Specifically, they destroy a group of molecules on the membrane, called glycolipids.

This finding is significant because these glycolipids seem to hold a key to reproduction. As if drawn by a magnet, the glycolipids attach themselves to certain proteins on the surface of an unfertilized egg. This process of attraction between the glycolipids and proteins enables fertilization to then take place.

The particular mycoplasma that the two scientists have been examining is found in the reproductive tracts of many mammals. Lingwood says he is now trying to purify the substance in the animal mycoplasma which destroys the sperm glycolipids. If this can be done, he might have the basis for a new contraceptive substance, perhaps one to be used as an ingredient in a spermicidal jelly.

"We're studying the mycoplasma, trying to find out at what stage of their growth they are most effective against the sperm," says Lingwood.

The mycoplasma that Lingwood and Quinn have been studying is found in rats. Though these germs do not colonize the human reproductive tract, the degrading enzyme in them appears to be equally effective on any mammalian sperm, and could be used for the birth control substance.

"Our research wasn't originally directed towards contraceptive research, so this is a sort of spinoff," says Lingwood.

Lingwood and Quinn's research also has obvious implications for studies of infertility. It's estimated that the reproductive tracts of 30 to 40-per-cent of Canadians are colonized by mycoplasma. Of course, not all of these men and women are infertile — perhaps. Which strain causes infertility may vary from person to person. — Canadian Science News

2. The Committee will address problems with a view to developing solutions that are acceptable to all parties involved.
3. The Committee shall promote good public relations between Pelican Mills, Council and the Community-at-large.

Mr. Olson has informed the other members of the Committee that the Mill has been looking at ways of reducing the noise and dust emissions and a number of projects have been undertaken or proposed in this regard. These projects are as follows:

1. The Mill has recently shut down for two days and discovered a fan which was emitting a great deal of noise. A muffler system was purchased to overcome this problem.
2. The Mill will be selling chips to Hinton in the near future, which will reduce the tee pee volume problem, which in turn will help diminish the emission problem, as the Mill will soon be finished processing wood resulting from a forest fire last summer. This will also reduce a great deal of the black ash emitting from the tee pee burner.
3. The Mill is proposing to increase its dryer capacity and replace all of their secondary airlock systems, which should reduce the amount of particulate emitted as a result of the dryers plugging up, as well as reduce the smoke from the Mill.

Representatives from Alberta Environment and the West Central Health Unit have been present at the Committee Meetings on an advisory basis. They have agreed to provide high volume dust samplers, to be placed in the Hillcrest area.

Pelican Mills has also agreed to place two of their emission samplers within the Hillcrest area along with the already existing samplers around the Mill. The samples are contained in canisters and will be sent away for analysis on a monthly basis.

The Committee will continue to look at ways of overcoming the problems that exist in residential areas with regards to the Mill. We will keep you well informed!

Any residents interested in submitting a written response to the Committee regarding their mandate can forward them to the Committee through their Secretary.

Minimum tillage conservation farming viable alternative

By George Mackle
From an operational standpoint, minimum tillage conservation farming is a very viable alternative to traditional crop summerfallow rotations.

We have also found the system we use is a viable alternative from an economic standpoint. As long as we stay relatively cost efficient, at least we have a chance to grow a good crop every year. Granted, there will be some poorer years too, but when you summerfallow, you'd better have a good crop every time, because you don't have any crop half of the time.

Conservation farming, to me, means minimum tillage and continuous cropping.

Conservation farming doesn't require enormous outlays for specialized equipment. We apply our fertilizer and pre-emergent herbicides when doing the first tillage operation in the spring.

I'd like to explain our operation step by step. The 3,000 acres we farm is in six separate parcels that span twelve miles. Because of this, we must have capacity and "wing up" mobility. Most of our land is worked once prior to seeding and we start our field work on or about May 1.

We cultivate, fertilize and pack in one operation as early as we can in the spring. We use the airseeder unit, deep tillage cultivator and coil packers.

At that time, we apply 34-17-0 granular fertilizer at 150-pounds per acre with the airseeder. This gives 51-pounds nitrogen and 26-pounds phosphorous. Coil packers hitched behind the cultivator roset the residue and firm the soil to hold moisture in.

I really want to emphasize the importance of packing as part of the initial tillage operation. It's a simple fact: packing conserves moisture! The seeding operation is just that, no starter fertilizer is applied with the seed. This has the added advantage of only needing one truck and drill fill which speeds re-fill time and helps when moving to another field.

We straight cut all of our crops because they are usually short, especially the barley. Straight combining really saves a lot more grain than swathing a short crop.

I don't think enough emphasis can be placed on straw management, and harvest time is when to do it. Make sure your combine chopper is cutting and spreading evenly. Thick rows of poorly spread residue are no picnic next spring.

Snow trapping is also important. I think our fall stubble catches more snow and saves more moisture than summerfallow. A good example came in 1984 when we straight cut our winter wheat. It was a good stand and we cut it really high.

The standing stubble was 12 to 14 inches tall. In the next field, we had barley stubble that we had to cut very short.

In the spring of 1985 when we were cultivating and fertilizing the barley stubble, we couldn't drive across the winter wheat stubble with a 4-wheel drive truck. The tall stubble naturally caught more snow, but also, I think, significantly lowered the wind velocity at ground level so evaporation was much less.

When considering using soil conservation techniques on your farm you just have to remember one thing: your land is like cash, don't blow it.

Stewart takes first place

Alder Flats News

By Joan Elmont

Funeral services were held May 30 at St. Anne's Catholic Church in Buck Lake for John Batiuk, who died suddenly at his home May 17.

Sandi Stewart was first in javelin and shot, Melanie McKay was first in javelin, Clayton Skinner placed second in the triple jump and Mark Stenber took first-place honors in pole vault at the high school track meet May 30. These young people are in the zone finals in Red Deer today (May 30).

Jean and Dale Sargeant spent a few days up north visiting his cousin Delbert and wife Lynne. They also visited Norman and Sue Aldridge and Bob and Annie Blackhurst at Sunset House, and Leon and Esther Poudrier.

The weather must have had a hand in the poor turnout for the Alder Flats school and PAWS band concert May 18. In spite of lack of audience and players, those who did attend had an enjoyable evening.

The fashion show held at the Fairways golf course was well attended with about 60 ladies in attendance. Thirty-two different outfits were modelled.

The weekend weather put a damper on the golfing but not on the spirits of the patrons. They enjoyed dancing to the Starlighters from Rimbey and entertainment by local singers Corby Miller and Barry Allen.

'Browser' and 'Retriever' search ocean

'Browser' and 'Retriever' may sound like a pair of hunting dogs, but they are really two new vehicles designed to search and study the murky ocean waters.

Designed by Brooke Ocean Technologies Limited of Dartmouth, Nova Scotia, Retriever is a propeller-driven underwater vehicle which is connected to the underside of a ship. As the ship moves forward, Retriever sweeps out a circular search area, looking for submerged oceanographic instruments.

All submerged oceanographic instruments are equipped to return to the surface following a time delay or after an acoustic signal is given from the ship. Occasionally, however, these systems fail, and that's when Retriever is called in.

Retriever's cousin, Browser, also made by Brooke Ocean Technology, was designed to connect not with the bottom of a ship, but rather to a tripod anchored to the ocean floor.

Tethered to the tripod by a coil of cable, Browser moves outward in a spiral path as the cable spools out, taking pictures of the ocean floor with a television and a still camera. Then it spirals back to the tripod for recovery.

Already, Browser has been used to take snapshots of the site of a historic shipwreck at the fortress of Louisbourg, and to study seabed waves and scours near Halifax Harbour.

Jake stands in the recreation room where the boys relax after a long day's work.

This cosy cabin is home to Jake and Irene Baergen until they return to Edmonton later this summer.

Picture-perfect setting provides home for young offenders

By Belinda Atkinson

Looking past Jake Baergen and the cherry pie in the window to the rolling green hills and lush farmland, one would think his first comment is way off base.

"The idea is to get (young offenders) back into society," says the director of Youth Orientation Units (YOU).

But as picture perfect as the setting is — a cluster of log cabins overlooking the North Saskatchewan River — Jake and his predecessor Peter Rempel have prepared over 300 offenders for the not-always-so-kind streets of the world.

Jake is quick to point out the program does not attempt to rehabilitate criminals.

Instead, he says 11 volunteer staff members provide a home-like atmosphere, ensure each does his share of the work and encourage the boys to look inside themselves to see why their lives aren't working.

"If they want to live in a free society or if they don't care to live in a caged society for the rest of their lives then they have to make the decision on their own," he says.

He says counselling is available, either in town or from the volunteers, but most progress comes when the boys find pride in a duty they've seen come to completion.

Jake says the boys are given full-time duties on a rotating basis. Eight hours per day, five days per week, 12 young offenders hone their skills in mechanics, welding, farming, carpentry, woodworking and general maintenance.

"We try to have the boys involved with as much as possible. If they show potential in one particular area then we try to have them in there more," he says.

"We also have living skills which could include how to apply for jobs, what is involved in taking care of household duties, developing some hobbies..." he says.

"We have stiff rules, mind you," he adds. "They need to understand why rules are there. If we can't give a good reason then it's time to start examining our ideas."

Strict curfews and a structured duty roster have left more than one young offender running for the city.

Jake admits the farm has little in the way of security. He says its seclusion — 112 kilometres northeast of Drayton Valley with only a few scattered farms nearby — is the key to preventing most runaways.

However, Jake says the purpose of the seclusion has far more to do with founder Peter Rempel's ideas about treatment than about punishment.

Back in the 1960s when Rempel was a minister in Edmonton amid rebellion and discontent, he decided a ranch would be a perfect place for people to sort through their problems.

After begging and borrowing to get the project off the ground, Rempel quit his job and began clearing land in the spring of 1970 while taking university psychology

"For the first period of time they lived in a small log cabin near the river. With five boys it was pretty crowded."

The Mennonite Central Committee, a major source of funding, eventually purchased the land and hired Rempel on as director.

Rempel passed his work on to Jake and his wife Irene five years ago and now the Baergens have decided it's time to return to Edmonton and allow a new director to take their place.

Irene seems eager to return to the city and Jake to his business career.

As he has found from the boys who've called back months after their sentences ended, YOU is a short stop on a very long path forward in life.

Two young offenders share a room, unlike in the beginning when six people crammed in to a single cabin.

A third housing and kitchen unit is nestled in the trees.

Energy efficiency helps environment

If the potential impact on your pocketbook doesn't convince you of the value of energy efficiency, think of the environmental benefits.

The burning of fossil fuels produces carbon dioxide emissions, which contribute to the greenhouse effect, acid rain and other serious environmental problems. So by decreasing the amount of energy we use, we automatically reduce environmental damage.

You can do your part to protect the environment by using energy more efficiently in your home. In addition to such basic measures as upgrading insulation and draftproofing, consider installing a new high-efficiency furnace or a heat-recovery ventilator. Active solar energy systems, which have absolutely no environmental impact, are also widely available for use in heating domestic hot water.

It doesn't stop there.

Drivers of high-use automobiles can help the environment by converting their vehicle(s) to run on propane or natural gas. With the help of catalytic converters, these gaseous fuels can completely eliminate lead emissions, and reduce carbon monoxide and hydrocarbon emissions by as much as 99 per cent.

Alberta Press Council upholds paper's view

At a meeting May 12 in Fort McMurray, the Alberta Press Council dismissed a complaint from Adolf Duesterhus of Yellowknife against the Yellowknife News North.

Duesterhus had complained the News North had not published a 2,200-word response he had written to a series of articles by Annelies Pool. Pool, managing editor of the News North, had written four articles describing a visit to Russia.

Mr. Sigvaldason, publisher of the News North, responded to the press council in a letter of Feb. 16, explaining that the newspaper's letters policy limited length of letters to the editor to a maximum of 750 words to allow other readers to express their opinions in the letters' column.

Sigvaldason informed the council that exceptions are made to this policy when editorial judgement concludes the writer has a valid point which cannot be made in fewer words. However, these exceptions usually only occur when letters are a few hundred words over the maximum.

The newspaper had offered Duesterhus the option of either having its editors cut his letter to the accepted word length or re-submitting a shortened letter. Duesterhus insisted his letter be printed in its entirety.

The newspaper claimed that just because another writer had been invited to submit a lengthy piece for its "Guest Opinion" column, it was not obliged to extend the same invitation to Duesterhus, since decisions about who writes in its columns are editorial decisions made by its editors.

The press council upheld the newspaper's view that a newspaper is not obliged to give equal space to readers, and dismissed the complaint.

HATS OFF TO OUR LOCAL HEROS

Doug Deacon admits being an emergency medical technician (EMT) has its unattractive moments but the Wainright native says the good far outweighs the bad.

"I know I'm helping people. I find it very satisfying, very fulfilling," he says.

The former army medic came to Drayton Valley a year ago, after discovering his hopes of working as an EMT in Victoria wouldn't be realized.

Some emergency workers have to wait years, he says, before securing a position with the government-run service.

Although he misses Victoria and scuba diving, his favorite sport, Doug says he may have found a permanent home here.

"I've never been much of a nomad," he laughs.

Community picnic on June 4

Sympathy is extended to the Walter Lainchbury family on the death of Walter's mother.

Carol Neigam has moved into Drayton Valley and is now working at the MD office.

The Smithinskys were fortunate in having a whole field full of golden plovers. The plover is a migratory bird which spends its winter in Argentina then migrates in the late spring to the Arctic where it nests.

Violet Grove By Sylvia Davidson

A clean-up of the hamlet took place on May 24 by members of the community club.

A picnic is scheduled for June 4 from noon to 5 p.m. at the 4-H hall.

There will be lots of activities for the children and a horseshoe tournament for the adults. In the case of rain, the picnic will be postponed until June 18 at the same time.

Anyone interested in playing slow-pitch on a one-night weekly basis for the Violet Grove Pick-Ups is asked to call 542-4378.

The next general meeting is on June 6 at 7:30 p.m. at the 4-H hall.

Joyce Mathers of Calgary was out to spend a week with her parents, Harold and Lillian Smithinsky.

Not looking good!

Are you tired of the mid-May snow storms?

Well, if you follow the weather in the 1989 edition of the Farmer's Almanac, you might have been prepared.

They were predicting rain for May 16-18. Their only mistake, was that the rain turned to snow.

Hot weather is predicted for the first three days of this week.

Then, unfortunately, next month doesn't look all that promising.

Here's how June shapes up according to the Farmer's Almanac:

1-5.....	Cold, rain
6-8.....	Showers
9-11.....	Rain, cool
12-18.....	Warm, showers
19-21.....	Rain, cool

St. A's to strike up the band

St. Anthony school plans to offer a band program next year.

The program which is being made available through Frank Maddock high and the Twelfth Rivers school division, should be in place for the 1989-90 term.

"I'm very pleased to see this. It's really needed at the junior high level. It will help students as they move into high school," says St. Anthony's school board chairman Joan Anderson.

Next term, the program will be available for Grade 7 and 8 students entering the beginner level with students from

H.W. Pickup.

The assumption is that about 10 students per year would sign up for the band program, and that about 30 additional students would eventually continue on with the senior band. Students will be encouraged to purchase their own instruments or to make arrangements to borrow or rent them.

At the current time, Frank Maddock budgets $21 per student to cover the cost of music texts and other supplies. Exact costs to St. Anthony students haven't been worked out.

Parasite plagues province's bee-keeping industry

By Steve Fletcher
It may only be a matter of time before a parasite plaguing the world's bee hives makes its way to Alberta, says Barrie Termeer, a Leduc-area beekeeper.

Termeer said "the potential is there" for the parasite - known as the tracheal mite - to devastate the province's honey-producing industry.

The mite was recently discovered in B.C., where hundreds of bee hives have had to be destroyed.

The mite probably reached B.C. through the importing of packaged bees from California - a practise that was officially banned in early 1987, said Termeer.

He added that Alberta, the largest producer of honey in Canada, also received a large number of packaged bees from California.

"We expect we're going to have to deal with it sooner or later," said Termeer, who's vice president of the Alberta Beekeepers Association.

"We've just been lucky it hasn't turned up in Alberta yet, but only time will tell."

Area beekeeper Kelly Braitenbach says the parasite is a "very serious problem" for the industry.

"If one person brings it in (from outside the province) then we all have it," he said.

Prohibiting the importing of bees from everywhere except Australia and New Zealand has forced honey producers to "winter" their bee colonies - meaning they, keep their bees throughout the year rather than replenishing their hives annually with new stocks.

Ron Howatt, an area beekeeper until he retired a year ago, says this wintering program could bring on its own harmful effects.

"A cold winter and we could lose our stocks and then we're in trouble," said Howatt. "It could destroy Alberta's industry."

Termeer said the provincial apiarist's department is now attempting to establish a policy on dealing with a possible tracheal mite infestation.

"The practicality of closing the B.C. border is not a good one," added the beekeeper, who noted it would be difficult to control truck traffic between the two provinces.

Termeer believes the department will either opt for an eradication of Alberta bee colonies that become infested or seek some form of quarantine system.

And he pointed out the tracheal mite is "peanuts" compared to another parasite now infesting hives in 15 U.S. States.

Termeer called the Varroa mite a "much more serious" problem that may be on the horizon.

Officer leaves for Redwater

Tom Turner, a member of the Drayton Valley RCMP detachment for the past eight years leaves this week for Redwater.

He will assume the position of detachment commander Jan. 23.

His family will stay in Drayton Valley until their house is sold.

A recent trip to Redwater by Turner indicated a serious shortage of rental space. All he could find was a house and motel.

Turner, who has been very involved during his eight years in Drayton Valley attended town council last Thursday. He thanked the town, council and the mayor for their support.

He also said he had reaped a lot of benefits from his years of involvement.

Mayor Bob Mayhew thanked Turner for the contribution he had made to the community.

Hike 1

We're barely through hockey season but some local boys disregarded the chilling winds recently and set out to prepare for a rough, tough, action-packed summer of football. Once the weather warms up and the boys have had some more practice, maybe they'll start drawing fans to their front-yard display.

Parkland population down half-percent

By Christine Vanzella
Stony Plain Reporter

Parkland's population has dropped by 108 people, according to the latest county census.

The total population for the County of Parkland is 20,640, down by half a percentage from the 1984 census.

The statistics takes into account the loss of residents from the formation of the Municipal District of Brazeau.

The April 1, 1989 census asked county residents questions about age, number of family members and what geographical regions people are employed in.

The census also found 52 per cent of the county's population is male, a drop of one per cent from 1984.

Females are outnumbered by 892 males.

The age bracket with the largest population is the 25 to 44 year olds.

Fish and wildlife officer receives recognition

Catching people who illegally market fish can be difficult.

However, that situation is changing, thanks to the perseverance and dedication of Milt McKee. He has been named fish and wildlife officer of the year for the new techniques he developed to deter illegal harvesting of fish. McKee of Barrhead, received his award from the Ahikar Safari Club International at the annual conference of the fish and wildlife division in Lethbridge.

Working on his own initiative for the past five years, McKee monitored numerous lakes and individuals in the Barrhead district. He was able to develop intelligence information on the methods of taking and disposing of illegally caught fish.

McKee also established a notable first. He perfected various means of marking fish while still in the nets to allow for future identification.

As a result of McKee's efforts, the development and use of unique surveillance and investigative techniques improves the division's enforcement capabilities in dealing with illegal fisheries activities.

Ignore what you can't control

By Bev Brooks
District Home Economist
Modern farm life can be like living in a pressure cooker and stress management skills can help keep the lid from blowing.

A factor that makes farming stressful is the uncertainty involved — the uncertainty of weather, crop or machinery failure, livestock disease, farm accidents and commodity prices. As well, farm families are faced with planting and harvesting deadlines, the tension of working side by side with family members, dealing with farm and off-farm work, and transferring the farm from one generation to another.

Developing stress management skills are essential to the successful operation of a modern family farm.

Stress management can be thought of as the "3 Cs": control, cognition, and coping.

Control refers to anything we do to directly influence our stressors or stress. Cognitions are the way we think about our stressors. The often-heard comment, "I can't do anything about it, so I'm not going to worry about it" is a good example of the use of a cognitive strategy to reduce stress.

Learning to ignore what you can't control is an important principle of effective stress management. Some people though, fall into the "ain't it awful" trap. These people look for the negatives and see the awful and catastrophic possibilities in everything. This type of thinking is sure to increase your stress level.

The words you use in describing a situation can even make a difference. For example, rather than thinking of something as a problem, try labelling it as a challenge. The word challenge suggests excitement and adventure and generally a positive reaction. The word problem, however, suggests a threatening event, therefore a negative reaction.

In farming, the family that is able to maintain some sense of optimism and hope for the future has lower stress levels than families who are more pessimistic and discouraged about their future in farming.

Coping involves using our strengths and resources to help avoid or reduce the threat of a stressor. There are many different ways to cope and there are wide differences among people in how they cope with stress.

Taking time to communicate and to become an effective listener are important coping skills. Farm research shows that poor communication is rated as being most highly related to overall stress.

Proper nutrition and physical exercise are important mechanisms in coping with stress. Many farmers take better care of their machinery than they do their own bodies. Taking care of your body is like giving it a tune-up — it runs more efficiently and will serve you longer.

Recognize your limits. Some people thrive on high pressure. Others are more comfortable with fewer demands. Recognize your personal stress limits, then examine your life for stressors that can be eliminated.

Even gold is tested by fire

By Pastor H. Heinemann
Emmanuel Lutheran Church

I once read about a boy who went to a silversmith to learn how silver is refined.

The boy had been reading his Bible and came across this verse in Malachi 3:3 where it says: "He will take His seat, refining and purifying silver." The young lad had many times watched the local jeweller heating and pouring silver so he decided to ask the jeweller if he could observe him and understand what the prophet was saying.

The silversmith explained the silver had to be heated to a certain temperature and kept there for a certain length of time. The boy asked why? And how do you know when the silver has been heated to just the right temperature and for just the right length of time?

The silversmith replied: "If the silver is overheated and left too long, it is ruined and will make only worthless jewellery. So I must sit and watch the silver until it is just right. When I can see my face reflected in the molten silver I know the process of refining is completed and the silver is ready to pour into the mold."

The young boy learned something that day about life. He learned God is like the silversmith who refines silver. When God can see His likeness — His thoughts and plans — reflected in our everyday lives, then we are refined by the troubles and hardships of life we have experienced because of our faith in Jesus.

From the Pastor's Pen

But like the boy, we have difficulty with that idea. It would seem to us that having faith in Jesus should protect us from all the troubles of life.

But God did not call us out of life when He sent his Son Jesus to suffer and die for our sins. He called in life and to faith in Jesus.

St. Peter says it quite eloquently in his first letter: "Be glad about this, even though it may now be necessary for you to be sad for a while because of the many kinds of trials you suffer. This purpose is to prove that your faith is genuine. Even gold which can be destroyed, is tested by fire; and so your faith, which is much more precious than gold, must also be tested, so that it may endure."

St. Anthony enrollment may be down next year

Early indications point to just one Grade 6 class at St. Anthony school next term.

A recent board meeting was informed that at the present time, there's just 31 students earmarked for Grade 6.

If that happens, the number of teachers required will be cut in half.

In all, immediate hiring plans call for 24 teachers for the 1989-90 school year, down from this year's 25.

Valerie Keates, acting superintendent, says a number of families have indicated they are moving out of town during the summer which is expected to affect the Grade 6 enrollment figures.

Besides the loss of one Grade 6 class, the board is looking at the loss of a half-time position in early childhood services (ECS).

MP confident VIA can be viable

Yellowhead MP Joe Clark has met with VIA rail people in Jasper, Hinton and Edmonton to discuss the future of the line.

Clark was looking at ways of maintaining VIA's service on the rail loop connecting Vancouver, Jasper, Edmonton, Calgary and Banff.

Canada's debt has forced the government to cut the subsidy to VIA by $100-million this year. That means VIA will have a subsidy of $541-million this year, which will decline in the future.

VIA has been asked to prepare a business plan to indicate how it will operate with that lower budget. That business plan is being prepared now, and should be released next month.

"That business plan will let VIA design its own future," Clark said.

"Interested communities like Jasper and Edmonton, should be in touch with VIA to present the facts about the use of this run, particularly the tourist impact," Clark added.

Clark says he has viewed the traffic patterns, and particularly the high tourist demand.

"Personally, I am confident that the loop through the mountains can be made profitable and viable, and should stay in operation. But, in the final analysis, that is for VIA to decide in their business plan," he stated.

In Memoriam

GEBHARDT, Ross Howard
June 2, 1924
He died peacefully at his home, but it was only gotten better. The only thing that keeps me together, in my memories. Of walking in the park, Lunch times, Christmas's, Your last call, My Birthday, All those phone calls, Your last call, But most of all, All those times, That's the hardest, Not having you here. I Love You Ross, always & forever, Your Baby Sister, Belle-Jo

McCOLMAN, Clinton
In memory of Clinton McCollman who passed away May 20, 1987. No one knows how much we miss him. No one knows the bitter pain. We have suffered since we lost him. Life has never been the same. Our hearts are aching in longing, Sincerely, tender, fond and true. There is not a day bright or true, That we do not think of him. Forever remembered by Mom, Pat, Marilyn, Elaine, Marie, Marie, and Family. We Love You Dad

The three Drayton Valley residents killed were in the vehicle on the left.

Mother, two children killed in weekend highway tragedy

A Drayton Valley mother and two of her children were killed in a two-vehicle accident last Saturday night on Highway 22, about six and a half kilometres off Highway 16.

The accident claimed the lives of Margaret Doreen Henriksen, 32, her six-year-old daughter Laura and four-month-old son Dallin.

According to the RCMP, the three occupants of a station wagon were pronounced dead at the scene.

The driver and lone occupant of the other vehicle (a late model pick-up), Edward Mark Borle, 35, of Pallis, Alberta was taken to the hospital in Drayton Valley and later transferred to the University of Alberta hospital with leg and facial injuries. He was listed in stable condition.

Cause of the accident, which happened at approximately 6 p.m., is still being investigated.

Traffic was detoured around the accident scene as Highway 22 was closed for several hours.

The Henriksens and their five children moved to Drayton Valley about one year ago. Kelvin Henriksen works at Woodland Chrysler.

Funeral services will be held at 2 p.m. today (Tuesday) at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Baby Dallin will be buried in his mother's arms.

President Alan Smith will handle the service. Interment will follow at the Riverview Cemetery.

Man reserves plea on 19 theft, fraud charges: trial rescheduled for June 15

By Belinda Atkinson

The former executive director of a local handicapped association reserved plea June 1 on 19 statements of charges of theft and fraud totalling more than $140,000.

Andrew J. Dornan asked Drayton Valley Provincial Court Judge M.S. McInerney for a two weeks' stay before pleading his guilt or innocence, reasoning his lawyer could not be present on the first day of trial.

Judge McInerney rescheduled the trial for June 15 at which time the former administrator of the Drayton Valley Association for the Developmentally Handicapped will head in to what could be a lengthy trial.

Dornan is charged with 12 counts of theft over $1,000, six counts of theft over $1,000 and one charge of uttering a forged document while working at the association commonly referred to as the Beehive Workshop.

Dornan was relieved of his duties April 25, 1988 after a one-year stint at the government-funded vocational and educational institute.

RCMP officers later laid charges for offences they say occurred between April 9, 1987 — 38 days after his employment commenced — and March 30, 1988.

Some benefit, others pay more taxes

By Frank Ryan

The town has both good and bad news for property owners.

For 75 per cent of the residential owners, their taxes will be going down.

For the other 25 per cent, taxes will go up.

Some commercial taxes are up while most industrial taxes will drop.

The residential mill rate is 23.6 while the commercial/industrial mill rate has been set at 34.5. One mill is worth an estimated $120,000.

Manny Deol, the town manager, says council wrestled with the mill rate since Christmas and the budget for the next 45 days.

One of the biggest concerns may be amongst homeowners who were building last year. If your home wasn't completed, it may not have shown on the 1988 tax notice.

As a result, Deol says it's hard for those people to compare their 1988 tax notice to this year's.

One of the biggest jobs council faced in deciding on the mill rate, was a 23 per cent increase in the Twin Rivers school division requisition.

Deol says the mill has been a great saviour. They contribute about a half-million dollars in taxes yearly.

More housing and more development also helped.

One influencing factor this year, was the assessment, the first done in town in seven years.

With council holding the line on the municipal taxes for a fifth straight year, some projects have been tabled.

Over $1.5 million in paving, that could've been done this year, has been delayed until 1990.

This includes paving of the sports centre parking lot.

Deol says this will be a planning year for the town.

This includes a walkway (Cont'd page 2)

The municipal district plans to paint the traffic line on the Poplar Ridge Road shortly.

However, it will have to wait until any cracks in the pavement have been sealed.

The town has changed the look of its business licence.

It's because of their new computer system.

But Robin Wenbourne, municipal secretary, says an effort will be made next year to make them look more official.

Forty clients who work at the Bessie were scheduled to attend Monday's Edmonton Trapper baseball game.

The tickets were provided by the Credit Union.

Parade organizers don't know one way or another if Yellowhead MP Joe Clark will participate in Saturday's event.

A spokesman in Clark's office in Ottawa had earlier indicated the minister of external affairs would ride in the Lions Evergreen Rodeo parade.

A new fence has been constructed around the sun deck at the back of the Park Valley indoor swimming pool.

Municipal district residents are reminded that June 30 is the deadline to pay taxes without facing a penalty.

A May 28 travel section in the Edmonton Sun included a feature on the Battle River Tourist Association.

Three golf courses... Birchwood Village Greens, Breton and Drayton Valley were named.

The tourist action plan committee will hold a two-day retreat June 13 and 14 in town.

Information about Nova Scotia has been in demand at the tourist booth. During the first two weeks there were nine inquiries about that province.

Rain, rain go away (for Evergreen rodeo)

Members of the Drayton Valley Lions are keeping their fingers crossed the weatherman cooperates for the weekend Evergreen parade and rodeo.

It rained throughout last year's parade which eventually led to the cancellation of the rodeo and wagon races.

Rain has plagued the June classic.

Eleven times, including 1988, the rodeo has been hit by rain.

The final performance was also rained out in 1986.

However, organizers are looking for a repeat of 1987 when good weather blessed the three-day event.

The midway opens at 4 p.m. Thursday which officially kicks-off the action.

It picks up Friday with the heavy horse pull at the rodeo grounds starting at 6:30 p.m. A ladies powder puff pull will follow.

The fireworks, which has always been a popular event, will start at 11 p.m. Friday. Traffic has lined the highway and the grounds to view this in the past.

On Saturday, there's the United Church pancake breakfast at 7 a.m. to kick-off the day. This will be followed by the parade at 11 a.m., the rodeo at 1 p.m. and the pony and chuckwagon races at 6 p.m.

The Drayton Sports Centre will be the scene of a rodeo dance Saturday night.

The United Church will hold another breakfast on Sunday at 7 a.m. followed by the final rodeo performance at 1 p.m. and the wagons at 6 o'clock.

Entries in the hour-long parade that want to be judged must pre-register at the town office.

All entries are asked to start assembling at 10 a.m.

The Edmonton Klondike

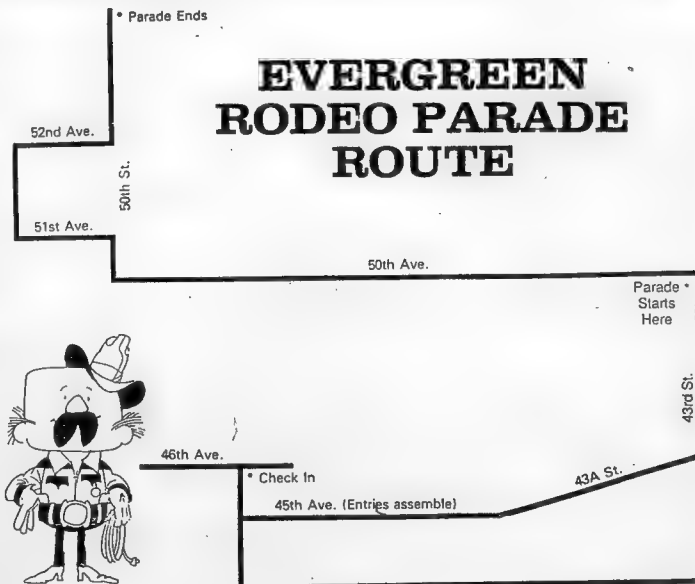

Posse plans to ride in the parade and also perform at 1 p.m. on Saturday prior to the start of the rodeo. The Shriners have also confirmed their entry in the parade.

Dress up for rodeo

Businesses and staff are urged to dress western this week in conjunction with the Lions Evergreen Rodeo.

The chamber will be awarding prizes for the best dressed in the industrial and commercial/retail sectors.

One option people have, if they are not happy with their tax notice, is the Court of Revision.

All property owners are reminded of the 18-per-cent penalty if taxes are not paid by July 26.

Mobil layoffs feared

By Belinda Atkinson

Mobil Oil employees who didn't accept an early retirement package are beginning to worry, according to local operations manager Gerry Jelinski.

"There's a certain amount of apprehension and concern," he said last week.

The concern follows a report last Saturday that an offer of enhanced retirement benefits attracted only half of the 300 employees Mobil had hoped for.

Mobil then laid off 30 Calgary employees as part of a well publicized commitment of reducing its 1,500-name payroll by 300 to 375.

Tom Cooney, public affairs manager for Mobil, said two weeks ago more layoffs will follow.

In an interview last Wednesday, he said further action will not be taken until after the company has sold off some of its assets and determined its position.

"Assets will be identified and sold and from that we will be reorganizing," he said.

Jelinski is optimistic the 100 local employees will not be among future staff reductions.

"If the company is committed to reducing 25 per cent of its employees then that doesn't necessarily mean Drayton Valley will be hit the same," he said.

He suggested exploration might be an area where cuts are made rather than Drayton Valley's established producing operation.

Meanwhile, approximately 15 local employees who opted for the retirement package will leave on a staggered basis between now and Dec. 1.

Construction blues

Traffic along Highway 39 has been disrupted, sometimes with waits of 15 minutes as construction crews resurface the road.

ASSESSMENT ROLL 1989

Notice is hereby given that the 1989 Assessment Roll for the Town of Drayton Valley has been duly prepared and will be open for inspection during office hours for a period of thirty (30) days, to June 30, 1989.

Persons whose names appear on the assessment roll, or their agent, may inspect the assessment roll under the supervision of the Municipal Secretary during office hours and if they wish to object to the entry or omission of any names or any assessment, their objections must be submitted in writing to the Municipal Secretary of the Town of Drayton Valley on or before June 30, 1989.

1989 ASSESSMENT AND TAXATION GOOD NEWS & BAD NEWS

By now, all rate payers, in the Town of Drayton Valley, should have received a tax notice and assessment notice. The GOOD NEWS is that approximately 75% of the ratepayers will receive a tax notice either equal to or lower than the previous year's property taxes.

However, 25% of the ratepayers may experience an increase in their property taxes.

The general assessment, completed every 7th year, is determined by the Provincial Assessment Branch, based on specific legislation.

Town Council's property tax policy has been to hold the line. In the interest of all ratepayers, Council finds the method of general assessment to be unfair to the improvement of our Town. It is their intent to lobby the Provincial Government for a change in how the assessments are arrived at. Council feels this to be a serious concern.

If you have any questions or concerns regarding your 1989 assessment or tax notice please contact our Taxation Hotline 542-5327 and ask for Linda, Joanne, Sharon or Amber.

In addition we are holding an Open House for assessment and taxation on June 20 & 21. Members from the Assessment Branch and Town Council will be in attendance to give you an opportunity to discuss your concerns on an informal basis. (See our display ad for further details on the Open House.)

Council, mayor unhappy with Canada Post

Town council's plea for relocation of the Canada Post office has fallen on deaf ears.

And if that wasn't bad enough, a four-member delegation that met privately with council indicated parking is not one of their concerns either.

Mayor Bob Mayhew says he's very unhappy with Canada Post.

And with good reason.

The Drayton Valley post office is always a bottleneck when it comes to traffic. Having the new fire hall just across the street doesn't help.

Town council was hoping that with the reported $60,000-per-year rental agreement up for renewal, they would be able to talk to Canada Post about relocation.

But they're having none of that. They apparently like their present position, and that's that.

With that issue out of the way, council tried to get some extra parking. But, once again, they ran into a stone wall.

Council was informed Canada Post is only obligated to provide two parking stalls — one for the manager and the other for loading/unloading.

If that is the case, they are not being very considerate of the public.

This latest turn of event doesn't come as any surprise.

Some folks have been pushing for a new post office for the past couple of years without success.

The mayor plans to send a letter of protest to MP Joe Clark. But, it's unlikely he will be able to change Canada Post's way of thinking.

NHL crackdown on stick-swingers having little effect

Ron Hextall, the Philadelphia Flyers goaltender is upset with the 12-game suspension he's received from the NHL for his playoff performance against Montreal defenceman Chris Chelois.

He's lucky it wasn't more.

If you'll remember, this is the same guy who got eight games for slashing a member of the Oilers a couple of seasons back.

Hextall says it wasn't his intention to hurt Chelois, just to get into a fight with him.

But if you happened to be unlucky enough to watch it on the tube, it sure appeared that he was out to get the Montreal blueliner, as he left the net with stick in hand.

Hextall's reasoning for the attack, was to

Frankly Speaking

By Frank Ryan

even the score with Chelois, who had almost beheaded the Flyers Brian Propp in the first game of the Wales conference final. In that instance no penalty was given to Chelois.

If the NHL ever wants to clean up its game, they had better start getting just a little tougher with players who continually swing their stick. It seems their crackdown this past season of eight and 12-game suspensions is having little effect.

Believe it or not, a lot of what the NHL seems to be getting away with is filtering down through the ranks.

That's obvious from the rough style of hockey we can see at the Drayton Sports Centre.

If I see it on the tube, I can simply turn the set off. If I go out to a local midget or junior game and see the same stuff, I simply don't go back again.

Finally, the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association says they plan to clamp down on stick offenders. I'll wait and see before making any further comments.

It will be interesting to see just how tough the CAHA get.

Strip shows present 'strange twist'

Dear Editor,

Where do bars get the special rights? They can use beautiful, nude, 18-year-old girls to lure customers into their premises.

There is not another business in Alberta that can do that. Appliance dealers can't, nor can car salesmen, nor men's clothiers. It is the exclusive "right" of bar operators.

Strip shows in Alberta present a strange twist of justice, if you can call it that. A girl can dance in the nude before a bar full of men, and the police will not lay charges. The reason—such charges have not been upheld in the courts.

However, if a male in the audience takes off his clothes, he would stand a good chance of being charged with indecent exposure. Is it any worse for a man to be naked in the audience than it is for a girl to be naked on the stage?

The Alberta Liquor Control Board controls the sale of alcoholic beverages. They regulate hours, specify types of glasses, and determine how far patrons must stay from nude entertainers, but say to set rules on nudity would be outside their jurisdiction.

The New Brunswick law forbidding nude entertainment in bars was challenged by a hotel. The case went to the Supreme Court. The Supreme Court ruled that provinces can control conduct in bars, and dismissed the case.

The Alberta Liquor Control Act states the ALCB does have authority to control conduct in bars. From the viewpoint of the Alcohol-Drug Education Association of Alberta, dancing in the nude is conduct of sorts.

Premier Getty has stated he is against strip shows, but that he has no desire to impose his views on the majority.

A Stettler hotel owner, who has shut down his shows says they only appeal to a 'select few.'

Strip shows appeal to the operators who make money out of them, and to the 'few' customers who want to see them. There are hundreds of thousands of people across this province that don't go to them, and don't want their unsavory influence in their communities.

The shows will go when the people of Alberta let the premier and their MLAs know they will not put up with them any longer.

It seems likely that Ms. Getty, with her influence, could get a job almost anywhere and that numerous well-qualified people were passed over when Ms. Getty was hired. Thus, even the appearance of wrong doing could easily have been averted along with the controversy.

New tourist brochure now in final stages

The chamber's new tourist brochure is in its final stages.

Tourist committee chairperson Natalie Gibson says last minute changes are being made before the final printing.

Five hundred copies of the brochure, an update from last year's edition, were prepared and distributed during the recent visit of two caravans.

When the final draft goes to press 7,000 copies will be run off.

They will be available at the chamber's tourist booth and several hundred will be sent to the Battle River Tourist Association who will send them out to their numerous information centres.

This is the fourth straight year the chamber's tourist committee has produced a brochure.

Hi-tech computer equipment replaces crystal ball, cards

By Belinda Atkinson

Foretelling the future has long been synonymous with trashy magazines, Gypsies and strange decks of cards.

But one organization's predictions influences airlines, electric companies, forestry services, even little Elmer, who hopes to build a snow fort on the weekend.

It's the Edmonton Weather Service. Instead of crystal balls or voices from beyond the grave, employees use $5-million worth of high-tech computer equipment to see the future.

Radar, satellites and a globally-linked team of men and women send and receive information through the wall of computers that makes up the system's mainframe.

So massive is the system that two air conditioners run constantly, summer and winter, to prevent equipment meltdown.

The cost is exorbitant but the results are astounding.

Meteorologists are able to track a storm's location up to five days before its arrival, more than enough time to warn electric companies of extra demands, airlines of possible closures and citizens of impending hazards.

Ken Nelles, officer in charge of Edmonton's contribution to the world-wide network, admits the system is less than magic, and, occasionally fallible.

"Five days is maximum for an accurate prediction. We can get rough information up to 30 days but it's not useful for the average person," he said.

(Long-range forecasts) would only be good for gas and electric companies so they know what to expect."

According to statistics, long-range forecasts are 50 to 60 per cent accurate whereas short-range reports (up to 48 hours) are 85 per cent accurate and gospel to pilots flying out of 12 airports in Alberta and two in British Columbia.

Air traffic is determined by the aviation report which relays the speed of clouds, their height, temperature, the presence of precipitation, in solid or liquid form, and the rate of fall.

Photographs from space are vital to an accurate prediction. Satellites placed over the equator and the north and south poles transport heat-sensitive pictures to 400 receiving stations in Canada and hundreds of thousands around the world.

Translated, these infra red images show the presence of high pressure — characteristic of warm weather — and low pressure where clouds accumulate.

High pressure areas are seen as dark masses on the photograph which signify low cloud warmed by land and water. Low pressure areas are seen as white masses.

In layman's terms, a dark mass is a go-ahead to pilots and a white mass means

Elmer will be the king of his castle provided the snow doesn't skip over town.

But Elmer's not the only private citizen who makes his plans using weather service information.

In 1988 alone, 1.4 million area residents called the Edmonton office, an average 3,846 per day.

Combined with 55 radio and television interviews daily, aviation reports and a full-time lightning watch, meteorologists and weather service specialists are constantly retrieving, translating and dispatching information.

The office has cut some of the workload with Weather Radio Canada, a radio station devoted entirely to weather information.

Using a digital voice announcer, the station broadcasts 24-hours per day with an update every hour.

In the event of a natural disaster, such as Edmonton's tornado July 31, 1967, the station will sound a special warning alarm that can be heard whether the VHF radio is on or off.

However, this device is not a standard feature. Had the VHF radios in Edmonton's television and radio stations sounded a warning alarm 15 minutes prior to touch down, casualties could have been prevented and lives saved.

"When the warning went out, no one was listening," said Ken Nelles, adding only one radio station received the warning signal.

After the tornado, he said every station in town purchased the alarm device.

If only the city's media had the foresight of the Edmonton Weather Service.

Ken Nelles points to a chart tracking the average annual temperature for the past 101 years.

Understanding the forecast

Many a farmer has glanced at the evening sky and predicted the next day would be a fair one.

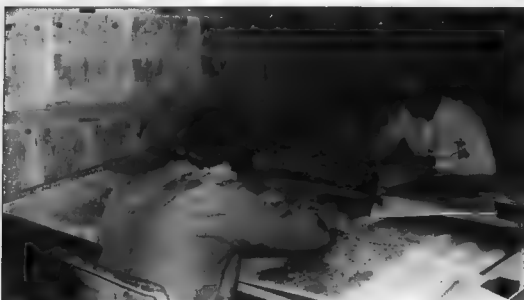

Weather lore will never die, but people do depend on the weather forecasts they see or read daily. Those forecasts come from a sophisticated mix of technology that is interpreted for the general public.

While the daily forecast is usually easy to understand, sometimes the terminology can be confusing. Alberta Agriculture has developed a simple guide to weather information. The four-page pamphlet on weather forecasting and terminology provides explanations of terminology, and also describes weather warning conditions, how forecasts are made, forecast limitations and interpretation, and how forecast information is disseminated to the public.

Copies of Weather Forecasting and Terminology are available through Alberta Agriculture's publications office. Please quote Agdex 070-1 when asking for the brochure. You can write the office at 7000-113 Street, Edmonton, Alberta, T6H 0T6.

Computers send and receive information around the globe.

Spray those crawly critters now

By Susan Mosciak
The time to spray forest tent caterpillars is now, according to Rob Van Eyk, a biologist at the Alberta Environment open house at H.W. Pickup school last week.

Van Eyk had two sealed jars crawling with caterpillars he had taken from trees in the Drayton Valley area. One jar held caterpillars approximately one-half inch long, and the other held pests already one inch in length.

"They will hit their peak period (in Drayton Valley area) in about two weeks," he said.

Bt is currently the only product approved for aerial application. "What people don't like about Bt is caterpillars don't die right away, it takes a couple of days." He said the product basically disintegrates their stomachs. It causes cessation of feeding, tissue breakdown, and death.

Van Eyk also noted that Bt requires a second application because caterpillars emerge at different times.

"This Bt will only harm caterpillars," he said, adding that it is natural in the environment.

For people choosing ground application, Van Eyk's advice was to read the label of the product very carefully, and in almost all cases to wear rubber gloves. And remember, he said, twice as much of the product doesn't mean it's going to be twice as good.

Rob Van Eyk displays a branch, covered in caterpillars, taken from a back alley in Drayton Valley.

Public works employees sprayed park trees last week.

More directional signs needed, says committee

The chamber's tourist committee wants to get more directional signs for the area.

But the chamber's tourist committee, who is handling the task, is running into a lot of red tape.

First they called Alberta Transportation. They said any request had to come from the town. The chamber says they sent a letter to the town and that's where it sits.

The tourist committee wanted to get some directional signs for the airport, ski hill, the hospital and on Highway 11, just outside of Rocky Mountain House.

At the present time the only sign outside of Rocky at the junction of Highways 11 and 22, gives the mileage to Alder Flats. There's no mention of Drayton Valley.

Natalie Gibson, chairperson of the chamber's tourist committee feels more signs are needed for the hospital. "I feel it should be better marked," she says.

Gary Hanson of Penney's Drug Mart says the drug roundup was a success.

Positive response to drug roundup

By Belinda Atkinson

The Great Annual Drug Roundup was so successful one local pharmacist thinks the campaign could become an ongoing service.

"Response was excellent. I think we could probably see the Alberta Pharmaceutical Association endorsing this year round," said Laurie Tkachuk, pharmacist for Value Drug Mart.

Pharmacists from all three Drayton Valley drug stores said involvement in the month-long program was far better than last year.

By May 31, the final day of the campaign, over 38 litres of "dead drugs" and at least 60 boxes of old pills and over-the-counter medicines had been collected.

Ron Nikiforuk of Valley West IDA said people were more conscious this year of substances that might otherwise be left in the house for years.

"The people who were involved were much more thorough," he said.

"Somebody brought in a box of suppositories."

Gary Hanson of Penney's Drug Mart said one individual brought in rat poison.

Tourism minister to officially open Birchwood Village

By Frank Ryan

It was 53 weeks ago that the sod was turned for the new $750,000 leisure centre at Birchwood Village Greens.

Tourism Minister Don Sparrow will officially open the 10,000-square-foot facility that includes an indoor pool this Saturday at 2 p.m.

"It's the best feeling I've ever had," Birchwood president Doug Bucar said last Thursday after surveying what had been accomplished during a 48-hour span.

While he was tending to family business in Calgary, the parking lot and tennis courts were paved, the ground had been prepared for the practice green and the sod was about to be laid around the leisure centre.

After a quick tour of the grounds, Bucar praised the work of project manager Gary Lewis. "He's been everything a developer could be. I can't say enough about him."

Bucar, who along with his father Stan and brother Brian, purchased the nine-hole golf course and resort (640 acres in all) in September 1987 had an idea of what things would look like when he originally saw the drawings.

But, he's truly impressed with the finished product and everyone who worked on it.

The Bucars purchased the golf course and resort from Nova Scotia Savings and Loan after hearing about it from a friend.

After touring the site, the Bucars were very impressed.

"It was so different from what we had done in the past. It was so spacious. We saw a lot of potential," Bucar admits today.

May 25 - SAUDER, Bryan and Beckie, Drayton Valley, girl, 4200 grams, 9 lbs. 4 oz.
May 28 - PINK, Randy and Joanna, Winfield, 3580 grams, 7 lbs. 14 oz.
May 29 - TRADEWELL, Don and Valerie, Drayton Valley, girl, 4060 grams, 8 lbs. 15 oz.

The winner of this week's spoon courtesy of The Gold Poke is Mrs. Sauder with her daughter weighing 4200 grams.

Sell your storage shed where the buyers are.
The buyers are looking for it in classed.

Developing and operating a resort was nothing new for the Bucars at that time.

They were the marketing arm and limited partner of Carefree Resorts near Innisfail. They sold that four years ago.

Besides acquiring the new golf course and resort, the Bucars operated a realty and RV business in Calgary. Just recently, the family sold their RV business after a 30-year association.

That decision will give the family more time at Birchwood.

Besides the new leisure centre and golf course, Birchwood has 600 resort sites. About 100 of 175 that are currently available in the first phase have been sold.

People from Toronto just purchased a lot last week. And, Bucar says people from all over the province have been doing the same thing.

Now that the leisure centre, built for the convenience of the resort owners is completed, the Bucars will concentrate on improving the golf course.

It has just been officially rated and certified.

Sparrow will get a chance to find out just how tough a course it is this Saturday when he tees off prior to the opening.

Leisure centre and grounds will be ready Saturday.

Wilneff cops third Oilmen's championship title

By Paul Cudla

Mark Wilneff made a triumphant return to Drayton Valley last weekend, as he captured his third Pembina Oilmen's golf tournament.

Wilneff outdueled Jim Jarrell in a final round match play of 18 holes.

Wilneff works for Esso Resources in Devon. He moved from Drayton Valley about a year ago.

Both players pointed to putting as the major factor in the final round.

"I made a lot of seven and eight-footers to tie up holes and that was a key."

"Capitalizing on opportunities in match play is important. If you get the chance to win a hole you've got to take it," Wilneff said.

Jarrell, reservoir engineer for Texaco, pointed out his inability to putt effectively as reasoning for his second place finish.

"I was hitting the ball okay, but I couldn't count on the putter. The putter was shaking every time I put it in my hand."

"He sank everything he needed to sink and that made it hard for me to catch up," Jarrell said.

Both Wilneff and Jarrell singled out the 12th hole as the turning point in the round.

Wilneff hit his second shot on the par 4, 408-yard hole, into a sand trap but recovered to save par by sinking a 15-foot putt.

Jarrell on the other hand, was safely on the green in two shots but three putted from 50 feet away to take a bogey.

Wilneff won the hole and went up by three holes. Jarrell eventually conceded after the 15th hole, as he was down by five holes, with only three left to play.

The Oilmen's tournament attracted 184 golfers. Jerry Anderson, a director on the Pembina Oilmen's Association, was quite pleased with the tournament which was blessed with sunshine on all three days.

"It was really good. The course was in good shape and the good weather only helps that," Anderson said.

Anderson added the Drayton Valley golf course's expansion from nine to eighteen holes helps the competitiveness of the tournament.

"The back nine has some of the best holes around. All the new holes in general are really good," Anderson said.

The winners of the other 22 flights in order from first to 22nd were: Blain Shea, Dave Boulter, Wayne Tedrick, Ross Kjerfvi, Larry Farkas, Lee McDonald, Jim Crough, Jerry Anderson, Roger Ganske, Roy Sired, Gerry Mastro, Albert Young, Dwight Kuzek, Doug Alloway, Rich Erwin, Mervin Miller, Bill Miller, Roy Cabel, Peter Rowe, Russ Greenshields, Ted Beath and Rick Zelman.

Mark Wilneff hits a short-iron shot on the 15th hole.

New eight-lane bowling alley in the works

A new eight-lane bowling alley is being planned for Drayton Valley.

Dan Sieben says he has an offer to purchase the land, located behind the Derrick Mill at 5205-52 Street.

Sieben wasn't saying last week when contacted by The Western Review, whether the new lanes would be ready for September bowling or not.

Local named president of amateur boxing association

By Frank Ryan

A Drayton Valley man has been elected president of the Alberta Amateur Boxing Association.

Doug Boliannatz, well known for his work with the Derrick Boxing Club was elected president at the association's annual meeting held recently in Red Deer.

He takes over from Jim Kirby of Lloydminster who held the position for two-and-a-half years.

"I'm a little nervous about the whole thing," Boliannatz admitted last week.

"It's a big job," he added. Boliannatz has been getting lots of encouragement.

"The phone's been ringing off the hook. Presidents from the different provinces have been calling offering their congratulations," he says.

Prior to accepting the volunteer duties as president, the Drayton Valley boxing coach had given up his reins as director of athletes.

The new president has some concerns as he prepares for the national meeting in Montreal later this month.

"I'd like to see a little more input for the association from the clubs. Instead of thinking we're there to help them," he explains.

He also wants all the clubs in Alberta to work together, which will make the provincial association all that much stronger.

Doug Boliannatz
"Little bit nervous"

One major change he will be pushing for at the national meeting is to allow non-competitors to get back into the sport.

Amateur boxing used to allow six and seven year olds in the sport. That was changed four years ago.

Now, boxers have to be 11 years old.

However, the U.S. is going back to the old system and Boliannatz is hoping Canada will follow suit.

That way, boxing will always have a crop of boxers coming up through the ranks.

Despite his new position, Boliannatz wants to continue working with the Derrick Boxing Club.

"I hope that's not off. It's what I enjoy the most," he admits.

Knights still on top

The Knights maintained their lead atop the Evergreen Men's Fastball League last Thursday with a pair of wins. They downed cross-town rivals Mobil Oil 4-2 and 5-1 in two five-inning double headers.

Soccer offers exercise

Neil Smith is coaching under-12 soccer and he has great hopes for the newly formed Drayton Valley Golden Eagles.

"We haven't won a game yet but we will," he says. Smith says the youngsters are still just learning and one of the problems soccer in the area has is that so many children are pushed towards playing baseball rather than soccer.

"Our biggest competition is with baseball. The good thing though about soccer is there is far more exercise involved. These kids run continually for 60 minutes," he said.

The other concern Smith has is the lack of adult soccer in the area for the kids.

"Most adults now play baseball or some other sport. There are not many adult soccer teams for the children to watch and learn from," said Smith.

He hopes next year there will be an under-14 team in Drayton Valley and eventually an under-21 team.

The Drayton Valley Golden Eagles will be playing tournaments this month against district teams.

Hockey teams need help

Drayton Valley's new junior hockey team is still looking for a manager, trainer and more directors.

The latest addition to the board is Janice Fedorus.

Last weekend, club president Bill Ballas attended the Alberta Amateur Hockey Association meeting in Red Deer.

Various family situations can lead to childhood stress

By Val Boyko

The lifestyle of the family is a nontraumatic source of stress.

Because the family is a social system, each person in it is affected by the others. Dissatisfaction of one family member can create stress both for that person and for others. It is these patterns and habits that may be a source of stress for children.

Family standards are stressors as well. It is often difficult for children to try and please their parents while, at the same time, maintaining their own individuality.

The place each person fills in a family will have its own stressors. While an only child may thrive on being alone, another may find that being an only child is a source of stress. The arrival of a new baby may create stress among family members. With more than one child in a family, favoritism becomes an issue and a stressor to the children. Being the eldest, the middle child or the baby of the family each has its own potentials for stress.

Children of a one-parent family face the same stresses as children of a two-parent family, plus a spectrum of stresses unique to their status.

Being a single parent is often lonely, and it is not uncommon for the parent to turn to the children for companionship or emotional support. Children are forced to take on these adult responsibilities, forfeiting childhood.

Remarriage often creates a family situation in which there are two mothers, two fathers, eight grandparents and so on. Children are forced to form new relationships and are often under great stress because they are expected to adjust quickly to their new stepfamily.

Interagency presents...

The scars children suffer as a result of divorce and separation depend on the children's constitutional makeup and their childhood experiences, including the actual circumstances of the conflict situation. The damage is not caused by the divorce or separation itself but by the tensions leading to them and the events that follow.

The stress associated with permanent separation or death is one of the more severe children have to endure. Death is a part of the everyday world, and children cannot be shielded from it.

The way children react to the situation depends upon their age and stage of cognitive functioning. Research has shown children who have happy and healthy relationships prior to the separation enter the stressful situation with a sort of immunity. Their good years have provided them with effective ways of facing and handling problems.

On the other hand, children who have been sheltered from the facts of death are often confused, angry and fearful. They hide their feelings because they realize their own grief hurts others.

Violence and abuse are the most traumatic stresses children face, and have the greatest impact on them. Physically abused children are beaten, burned, tortured and locked in closets. They are deprived of food, shelter, clothing and education. In a family where the abuse occurs, the children who are not abused suffer the consequences just as do the ones that are. Though they may not be physically abused, they suffer emotional abuse.

Emotional abuse occurs with physical abuse. It occurs when parents try to shape children's behavior through the use of humiliation, rejection, guilt or fear. The children are criticized, told they are no good and held to impossible standards. Emotional abuse is far more difficult to detect in children because its scars are not visible.

Sexual abuse of children takes two forms: abuse and exploitation. Both cause severe stress to the children. Sexual abuse is a "sexual act that is imposed on a child," while in sexual exploitation, the children are used by adults to prostitute or in pose for films, photographs or tapes (Brenner 1984, 143).

FREE TRADE AND THE TRAVELLER

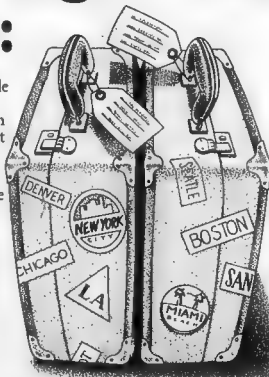

The Free Trade Agreement will gradually eliminate customs duty between Canada and the United States.

Some things change: Some things don't:

■ The duty on some Free Trade goods will be eliminated immediately while the duty on other goods will be phased out in stages.

■ Only goods which are of U.S. or Canadian origin will be eligible for lower Free Trade Agreement duty rates.

■ The goods must have been acquired in the U.S. and must have no mark or label indicating the goods were produced in any country other than the U.S. or Canada.

■ Current personal exemption levels do not change.

■ Restrictions on the duty and tax free amounts of alcohol and tobacco remain in effect.

■ Free Trade goods exceeding personal exemption levels remain subject to federal sales and excise taxes as applicable.

■ Before your next trip, we'll be glad to tell you the duty payable on the goods you intend to bring home. We're here to help, that's something that will never change!

Blowouts spawn industry survey

By Sue Kenyon

Due to planned expansions by national oil companies in the area, industry and the community are working together to conduct a study of sulphur emissions into the atmosphere.

David Stuart, supervisor of production operations and Surface moisture generally adequate

Surface soil moisture was generally good across the province as seeding got underway last month says an Alberta Agriculture specialist.

"Some areas will soon require rain, particularly for germination of canola crops. Precipitation would be especially advantageous in the east-central and southern regions of the province," says Dick Heywood.

East-central Alberta, particularly in the Wainwright, Vermilion areas north to Lac La Biche, is drier than normal, he says. The south-eastern area of the province, from Wainwright south to Lethbridge, is still feeling the effects of soil moisture storage between the fall of 1987 and the fall of 1988.

Western areas of the province have positive crop outlooks. Heywood says some of the North Saskatchewan and west of Edmonton, Red Deer and Calgary, all had high stubble soil moisture at the beginning of May drilling for Petro-Canada in Calgary, says Amoco, Petro-Canada, Texaco and Chevron are all sharing the cost of the three-to-five-year study and are trying to get permission to have a provincial monitoring station in Drayton Valley.

The whole concern originates from two past sour gas blowouts which occurred near Drayton Valley in 1982 and 1977. Stuart says farmers are concerned with the expansion Petro-Canada is planning at their Brazeau plant and the effects that sulphur, if enough is released, would do to crops. Stuart says basically there is no health risk but it can decrease the quality of crops especially in alfalfa.

The companies have hired a soil specialist from Calgary. Jim Lore, who has chosen six plot sites in the Drayton Valley area where the testing will be done. Testing will take place all year round. Wet samples will be taken 12 months of the year and dry samples will be studied during the summer months.

"Basically we are trying to get a handle on this. We want to find out if industry is creating a problem and if there is a problem, find solutions to it," Stuart said.

The total cost of the study will be in the vicinity of $200,000.

Spring sing

Eldorado school held its spring concert with approximately 60 parents in attendance. The singing of children of all ages lasted about one hour and songs ranged from well-known Beatie hits to nursery rhyme style. The evening started off with everyone singing O' Canada and drew to a close with a salute to Eldorado. Eldorado usually holds four concerts a year. This was their last concert for this school term.

Choir leader Lili Ross helped with the singing, too.

McDonald joins juniors

A complete changeover in management has taken place with Drayton Valley's new junior B hockey team. Grant MacDonald, the new assistant coach, says there were problems with the former junior team, so much so, the club was disbanded and this year the yet-unnamed new entry, will have an entirely new look.

"The most important thing now is to get a well disciplined, competitive team," MacDonald said.

MacDonald who is a constable with the Drayton Valley RCMP detachment has been coaching for the past seven years. He says he has coached all age levels and the last hockey division he played was senior A.

Including MacDonald, the new executive of the junior B club includes Bill Ballas, president; Randy Rook, head coach and Laurie Tkachuk, John Dyck and Janice Fedorus are on the board of directors.

Tryouts for the team will be held in early September.

Local poet's midnight pursuits may pay off

By Belinda Atkinson

A local resident has been sneaking out of bed in the middle of the night for many years.

Up until now, she kept these midnight pursuits to herself and seldom woke her husband.

But Wes Bouck is going to have to sit up and take notice because Betty Jean is becoming a poet to be reckoned with.

The 67-year-old mother of three has accomplished, during these 4 a.m. poetry sessions, to write four poems worthy of publication in the American Poetry Association's National Anthology for 1988.

Betty never really thought of herself as a professional poet but this 472-page, goldembossed, hard-cover book is proof the local woman's work ranks high amongst American and Canadian talent.

Betty has written over 100 poems, some of which have appeared in The Western Review, and often reads her poetry to the congregation at Drayton Valley Missionary Church.

"They love my poetry. They ask to bring it in every so often," she says, adding much of her work is about religion and nature.

Betty is heading off to San Francisco in July for a poets' convention and could return with the illustrious title of "APA Poet of the Year."

The poet since 13 years of age has already received distinction as "Poet of Merit," which itself doesn't warrant a cash prize, but would take home $5,000 and a free book contract if selected over other finalists.

If Betty's poetry is among the top nine finalists, she'll still carry home a whopping $1,000.

She's not counting on a prize or book contract. Instead, she says it will be a great trip and a chance to participate in a number of seminars over the three-day event.

She's also excited about the prospect of meeting host Mike Douglas and entertainer Rosemary Clooney.

"It's going to be fun," she says.

In the meantime, Betty is writing poetry and may enter a few more contests before her big flight.

Betty Jean Bouck is the author of four poems featured in the American Poetry Anthology.

Boxers to host camp and tourney

A two-week boxing training camp is scheduled for Drayton Valley this summer.

The camp, being coordinated by Lawrence Duperron and the Derrick Boxing Club will be held from June 6 to 19.

Duperron is expecting about 20 boxers from across the province.

It's sponsored by the Alberta Sport Council.

A similar one-week camp held last year attracted about 18 boxers.

In other boxing news, Duperron says the local club plans to put in for the Bronze Gloves. The tournament, held in Drayton Valley for the past three years, is usually held in November.

Families invited to take a hike

For the third year Women of Uniform are inviting Alberta farm families to take a safety hike around their farm.

A new farm safety hike guide, aimed at pre-schoolers and their parents, will be unveiled June 12 by Agricultural Minister Ernie Isley and associate minister Shirley McClellan.

Potential danger areas on the farm are identified in the guide. We hope families will walk through their yard and look at these areas. Our guide has an activity, with questions, for the children at each area. There are also helpful hints for the parents," says Jacqueline Galloway, vice-president of Women of Uniform.

The guide-directed hike takes families through the farm yard by water wells and dugouts, into the barn and by machinery. Alberta Agriculture's farm safety program has supported and assisted the Women of Uniform with this continuing project.

Families can also win prizes by participating in the hike. The last page of the guide can be colored and entered to win a variety of farm safety equipment.

Grazing rates vary in province

Initial 1989 grazing rates survey results by Alberta Agriculture's statistics branch show a wide range of rates based on local conditions. Grazing rates on private grass range from $5 to $16.21 per cow/calf pair per month or animal unit month (AUM) basis. The most common rates are between $10 and $12 per pair per month with the average rate at $10.50.

Conservation emphasized

Several projects are planned during the month of June related to protecting the environment.

The Pembina Institute will be distributing audit kits to households in Drayton Valley this week.

The kits include information on the various environmental projects that are planned.

Emphasis this week is on conservation of energy and water.

Week two will encourage people to either re-use or trade used items such as paint, toys and books.

On June 21, a major toxics round-up is planned for Drayton Valley residents.

And, week four will concentrate on the newspaper recycling program that is already underway in town.

As part of its conservation program, the Pembina Institute has council's permission to include a list of water conservation tips in the next water bill.

Witnesses and Alliance churches being planned for this summer

Two churches in Drayton Valley are planning on building a development chapel on land south of the Conch Motel.

Jehovah's Witnesses hope to start construction in September on a 225-sent hall on Highway 22, across from the Valley Inn.

Once approval is received, plans are to use the 'quickly built' system and put up the new hall in two days.

A spokesman for the group says finances and a design haven't been finalized.

The Jehovah's present hall, which can accommodate 120, was built 10 years ago.

The Alliance Church is Registrations up at St. A's

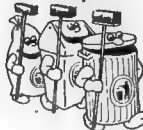

Early registrations are up at St. Anthony school.

Advance registrations indicate 54 children have signed up for ECS (early childhood services) and another 69 for Grade 1.

This compares with 51 Grade 1 registrations last year.

There are currently 79 students in the ECS program.

Hall of fame salutes several athletes

By Alister Thomas
Alberta Sport Council

The Alberta Sports Hall of Fame and Museum, a program of the Alberta Sport Council, is a tribute to this province's athletes and builders.

It honors those who have brought distinction to Alberta and to themselves through their achievements in competition or through years of meritorious service.

This year there are seven inductees — five athletes and two builders. One builder is the late William George Hardy, the first Canadian to be president of the International Ice Hockey Federation, who died in Edmonton in August 1979, at the age of 84.

The other is Bert Knibbs, a sporting legend in the Bow Island area for his outstanding contributions to hockey, slow-pitch and baseball.

The athletes include baseball player Glen Garbous, who is in the Guinness Book of Records for throwing a baseball 445 feet 10 inches.

Trapshooter Vera Holdsworth, who was Canadian ladies' champion 13 times and North American ladies' champion in 1959, is another worthy athlete inductee.

Stan (Sparlin) Solberg, who has covered amateur sports throughout Alberta, is recipient of the Bell Memorial media award.

Rob Van Eyk holds up a piece of carpet and plant pot made from recycled plastic pop bottles.

Environment says cleaning up starts with people

Cleaning up the environment starts with you, was the message conveyed by representatives of Alberta Environment at the open house held in H.W. Pickup school last Thursday.

The purpose of the open house, and six others to be held in Alberta communities during an eight-day tour, is to let the public know there are choices they can make from day to day that can influence the environment, according to community affairs coordinator Bruce Mihne.

A recycling display had samples of carpet, fibrefill, a plant pot, etc., all made from recycled pop bottles. As well, there were samples of jogging mats made from recycled tires, angle iron made from recycled tin cans, and recycled motor oil.

Motor oil is a non-renewable resource, said Pam Korslake, recycling technologist. "Use recycled. It doesn't wear out, why dump it?" She said the recycled oil is as good as the virgin product.

Regarding water conservation, said economist Terry Dzan, "the issues are quantity and quality."

Many household cleansers are just typically tossed down the drain, he says. They eventually end up in the water supply and the water has to be purified.

To conserve water, he suggested using toilet dams (a method of reducing the quantity of water being flushed), and turning down the water temperature on the hot water heater so cold water doesn't have to be used to cool the hot water.

"Consider alternatives to pesticides," said biologist Rob Van Eyk at a pesticide use display. "Use pesticides only as a last resort."

He suggested farmers could rotate crops and summerfallow when possible, and homeowners dig up those dandelions rather than use pesticides if at all possible.

Other displays showed the effects of acid rain, the effect man's extra emissions have on the environment (the greenhouse effect), and the result that chemical contamination has on the ozone layer.

Hello, Tomahawk!

Changes You Will Notice June 7, 1989

AGT will be installing new digital switching equipment in your telephone exchange June 7, 1989.

Because of the new equipment, customers using touch tone equipment who are not registered with AGT as using the service, and have not paid the monthly charge for the service, will not be able to make out-going calls. To avoid this, if you have touch tone phones in your home or office, please call AGT at 1-827-3500 (toll-free) and make the necessary arrangements.

Sounds Differently — Computerized equipment is quieter. The dial tone may have a slightly different sound.

Partyline Calling — A called party who currently hears two long rings will now hear two short rings. Called parties who hear one long ring will continue to hear one long ring. However, the people placing the calls will now hear a single ring only. Please advise people calling you of the change.

Pay Phone Coinless Access — No coins are required to contact the operator (dial 0), or information (dial 411).

New Dialing Instructions — Coins must be deposited before placing a local call instead of when the called party answers. No coins are required to call the operator (dial 0). Please read the instruction card on the pay phone.

Repair Service — If you require telephone repair please call 611.

Directory Service — Please call 411 to obtain directory assistance.

Custom Calling Services are now available. Please call your Business Office, or visit your nearest Phone Centre for details.

Please note — Although every effort has been taken to ensure this procedure is completed without incident, there is a remote possibility a brief interruption of telephone service may occur in the early morning hours. Should such an interruption occur, your patience is appreciated.

Please call the Grande Cache Business Office at 1-827-3500 (toll-free) if you require further information.

Budget constraints nix new chapel

By Sue Kenyon

Designs for a new chapel to be added to the health complex had to go back to the planning stages due to tenders coming in way over hospital budget.

Jim Jansen, hospital administrator, says the budget for the new chapel is $150,000 and tenders came in at $270,000.

Jansen says the tenders were way over because plans of the new chapel were too extensive.

"We had an architect draw up the plan. We then had the same architect scale the plan down and it was still over budget, so we are probably going to speak with engineers," Jansen said.

He did say categorically that the chapel will be built and they plan to go to tender again this fall.

The hospital auxiliary gave a cash donation of $100,900 towards the construction of the chapel, and Jansen says that money is included in the $150,000 budget.

Jansen says the board has also received private donations and they will go towards beautifying the chapel.

A $100,000 cheque was presented to the new chapel.

Pastor's love is helping people

Valerie Harris

By Sue Kenyon

Even though she loves Drayton Valley, if Valerie Harris's dreams come true she will be thousands of miles away from here once she finishes school.

Harris is an intern pastor with the Pentecostal Church. Although she has only been here since May 1, she loves the area and was glad her request to come was approved.

Her long-range goals though include going to Eastern Europe, preferably Russia, to do missionary work.

"It's funny because I have some relatives who are in the missionary field and I've heard of the horror stories they tell, but you know, it only makes me want to go and help people more and more," Harris says.

Harris is originally from Lethbridge. She grew up with the Pentecostal Church as her father was a minister. She says her family fully supports her missionary work plans.

During her time in Drayton Valley, Harris will be doing some sermons and "taking a bit of the work load off the pastor." She says her main energies will be spent on running the children's educational programs.

"I really love working with children, especially the younger ones," she says.

She will also be involved in running the youth clubs.

Harris has just completed her second year of bachelor of religious education at Northwest Bible College in Edmonton and she has two more years to go.

She will be in Drayton Valley until Aug. 31.

Drivers overlook security measures

Even though auto theft is on the increase in Alberta, many drivers are overlooking basic security measures.

"Cars are being stolen while owners are in telephone booths, at bank machines or paying for gas at gas bars," reports Conits, John Ellens, Crime Prevention Unit, City of Edmonton Police Department.

"The first and most important step in avoiding the theft of your car is to lock the car and pocket the key," says Al Wood, spokesperson for the Insurance Bureau of Canada.

Police estimate that over 55 per cent of car thefts are joyrides. Joyriders steal vehicles for pleasure rides or for use in other crimes.

"Joyriders are not familiar with your vehicle and they're in a hurry," says Wood. "Because they're not used to the car's handling, they often damage it by colliding with telephone poles or light standards. It's not their car; they don't care."

The majority of joyriders are amateurs who take advantage of open or running vehicles, usually taking the first one they find.

"If a car is not recovered within a few hours then it normally won't be found for weeks," said Wood.

If your car is stolen, call the police immediately and provide them with a licence plate number and description of the vehicle. Remarkably, most people don't know their licence plate numbers.

Between 1977 and 1986, the number of vehicles stolen and not recovered rose by 64 per cent. By 1986, the proportion of vehicles stolen and not recovered had risen to 26 per cent.

Highland dancers take eight gold

Just because you're the host, doesn't mean you can't be in on the action.

That's the attitude local highland dancers took two weekends ago when they hosted — and took eight first place finishes — at the eighth annual open highland dancing competition.

Heather Cunningham put competitors from across the province to shame in the beginner 11-years-and-over category with a first place finish in lilt dancing.

Cunningham also took a second in sword and a fourth in fling.

Christine Thesen finished first in the novice intermediate B category for fling, nabbed a second in flora and two third-place spots in sword and seann triubhas.

Shannon Bredin, Drayton Valley's star dancer, beat out nine competitors in the open D category with a first place in fling, sword, reel of tulloch, village maid and flora.

Bredin also finished first in a special event called Tribute to J.L. McKenzie for competitors 15 years and under.

Amanda Town received recognition for a fifth-place finish in lilt dancing under the novice intermediate B category.

Paulette Davidson took a third place in Lilt under the beginner 10-years category and local dancer Marie Kjollien was chosen fourth for fling under the beginner eight-year-old category.

Regardless of winners, one organizer said the girls had a great time and were able to test their skills against over 100 highland dancers from across the province.

Dancers from across Alberta competed in the annual event in Drayton Valley.

Dusters take nine games

The Dusters chalked up their eighth and ninth wins of the season last week in the Drayton Valley Ladies Fastball League.

They whipped Alder Flats 45-6 last Thursday after defeating the Combos 13-5 two nights earlier.

The Dusters hold down top spot in the ladies league with a perfect 9-0 win/loss record.

In other games last Thursday the Combos downed Paul Band 39-21 and Wildwood defeated the Panthers 28-15. Two other games saw the Lin-ettes take a pair from the Panthers by scores of 13-7 and 17-16.

Hammerlindl, Romano to be delegates at conference

Members of the Women's Institute and their guests enjoyed a pot-luck supper and a talk by Merilee Kostuik on May 30.

The WI extends their thanks to Shirley Hood and the IGA for providing space for the annual plant sale. In spite of the snow and wind, the sale was a success.

Plans have been finalized for the 35th anniversary of the WI in Drayton Valley.

There will be a tea in the Anglican Parish Hall on Thursday, June 16 from 2 p.m. to 4:30 p.m. All forms, WI members are invited to attend.

Delegates to the provincial conference at Olds College will be Florence Romano and Winnie Hammerlindl.

Rowing clubs to start

Young people who like to take on new challenges are encouraged to think about signing up for rowing at the Zone 5 Summer Games.

Since there are no active rowing clubs in Zone 5, the Games will provide any interested athletes between the ages of 13-18 the opportunity to learn how to row.

Equipment and instructors will be on hand Friday, July 14 to teach the basic skills and give participants the opportunity to practice their knowledge. On Sunday, July 16 a series of "fun" races will be held with the instructors using these races to select the rowing team for the 1989 Alberta Summer Games in Brooks.

Rowing is a sport that demands both physical strength and coordination. If you think you'd like to give this exciting event a try, register for the 1989 Zone 5 Summer Games. Registration forms are available at the local recreation department.

Clark evades Via Rail dispute

Vague responses by Yellowhead MP Joe Clark concerning the fate of the profitable Jasper to Vancouver VIA Rail corridor could mean two undesirable scenarios could be developing, says the Reform Party of Canada.

The first is that VIA Rail is allowed to continue to operate the line without any consideration by the government to turning the line over to private enterprise.

The second is that the Tory government is delaying any public decision on the route's fate, so they can hand-pick and reward a private operator loyal to the party.

"There seems to be something auspicious going on here. MP Clark is insisting that presentation of VIA's business plan is fundamental before the route's fate can be decided. Why?" asks Reform Party leader Preston Manning.

According to a Reform Party press release, ex-Tory MP, and now vice-chairman of VIA, Hugh Horner, is saying he is sure the route isn't dead and that it will operate one way or another.

Manning says just about every day we are reading about these mysterious proposals being put together by members of the private sector.

Steering committee formed to get highway issue results

By Michelle Bjornson
Whitecourt Star

The Whitecourt Chamber of Commerce has decided to take destiny into their own hands.

At last month's meeting, members unanimously voted in favor of establishing a steering committee to pressure town council and the provincial government to redesign Highway 43.

Steve Wilcox told fellow members that Highway 43 is 'intolerable' the way it is now. He does not want to see the highway twinned, but create four lanes instead of two complete with over-unders.

Wilcox said the highway is a hazard, and must be redesigned to avoid potential tragedies. "There is going to be a tragedy soon if we don't do something about the problem. If we don't do this while we have a chance, then we won't do it at all," he said.

Wilcox contends that redesigning Highway 43 would be cheaper than constructing a bypass road which would severely affect the local tourist industry.

Wilcox, who was nearly involved in a serious accident on Highway 43 this past winter strongly urged members to make this issue a prime objective.

Don't toss — recycle

Each year, the average Canadian throws away an estimated 500 kilograms of garbage at home, work or school. That's two metric tonnes a year for a family of four.

It's expensive to get rid of. $1.5 billion is spent each year in Canada on garbage disposal and it can cause serious environmental problems.

That's why it makes sense to recycle or re-use whenever you can.

Environment Week (June 4-10) is your chance to 'recycle it' at the office, at school and at home. It takes just a few minutes.

● Become your own household waste control board. Don't throw out newspapers. Utilize the local newspaper recycle operation.

● By recycling your paper, you help preserve our forests.

● Every time you use a recyclable container instead of a plastic or metal can, you can reduce the amount of environmental pollution caused by refining and strip mining.

● By recycling, you provide materials for new products. One family's yearly supply of newspaper can be recycled into almost enough insulation for one house.

● Recycling helps lower product costs, and that keeps consumer prices in check. It takes less energy, and therefore involves less expense for manufacturers to produce products from recovered materials than to process new materials.

● By recycling and re-using, you help keep your municipal taxes low, through reducing the cost of waste disposal and treatment.

WORKING FOR ALBERTA

HATS OFF TO OUR HEROS

Conroy Shokoples is an Edmontonian at heart but the 24-year-old emergency medical technician (EMT) says Drayton Valley is a nice place to live too.

At least that's his first impression since coming here four months ago.

Conroy still returns to family in Edmonton on days off but says he's gotten used to the rural lifestyle and thinks it might be for him — permanently.

"It has its attractions," says the former youth worker.

Conroy's first posting in Fort Saskatchewan two years ago — where he became active in hockey and tennis — was a lot of fun, he said.

Mayerthorpe, the next stop, was too small and Conroy found himself asking for a transfer here after three months.

Now the single emergency worker is hoping to find a tennis partner and may volunteer for the Boy Scouts.

Community bus keeping busy-

The change in seasons hasn't affected business for the community bus.

Manager Jim Enyedy says he already has bookings in August.

"It's pretty hectic," he admitted.

In fact, Enyedy says the bus has been on the road steady since January.

Most of his trips this month involve schools. Other bus users include baseball teams, church groups and seniors.

Later this month a local church group will bus to Hay River for a youth rally.

While most groups are just heading into summer, Enyedy says it's not too early to start booking those winter dates.

Time to change views about graduation

Every year at this time we offer the same warning to our graduating students: Enjoy your graduation day and celebrate your accomplishment but do it in a safe, responsible manner.

Some of the graduates listen to the warnings and they are to be congratulated for being responsible young adults, but unfortunately, there are too many others who do not listen and do not act responsibly.

We have been fortunate here in that there have been very few incidents in recent years. The Barrhead Lions Club can take a lot of credit for this. Their efforts on 'Safe Grad' have been welcomed and appreciated.

But how long will our luck last? It only takes one young celebrant to get out of hand and cause a lot of heartache and damage. The material damage can be fixed or replaced but the heartache will last forever if someone is seriously injured or even killed.

It is about time we took a serious look, as a society, at what we do and do not allow in terms of graduation celebrations.

The topic is a political hot potato at all levels of government but sooner or later it is going to have to be addressed. Hopefully, that time will come because of responsible thinking and not as a result of a catastrophe.

As adults, we must lead our children by example. We must be the leaders and we must take a stand.

— Barrhead Leader

Hello, Lodgepole!

Changes You Will Notice June 7, 1989

AGT will be installing new digital switching equipment in your telephone exchange June 7, 1989.

Because of this new equipment customers using touch tone equipment who are not registered with AGT as using the service and have not paid the monthly charge for the service, will not be able to make out-going calls. To avoid this, if you have touch tone phones in your home or office, please call AGT at 1-827-3500 (toll-free) and make the necessary arrangements.

Sounds Differently — Computerized equipment is quieter. The dial tone may have a slightly different sound.

Partyline Calling — A called party who currently hears two long rings will now hear two short rings. Called parties who hear one long ring will continue to hear one long ring. However, the people placing the calls will now hear a single ring only. Please advise people calling you of this change.

Pay Phone Coinless Access — No coins are required to contact the operator (dial 0), or information (dial 411).

New Dialing Instructions — Coins must be deposited before placing a local call instead of when the called party answers. No coins are required to call the operator (dial 0). Please read the instruction card on the pay phone.

Repair Service — If you require telephone repair please call 611.

Directory Service — Please call 411 to obtain directory assistance.

Custom Calling Services are now available. Please call your Business Office, or visit your nearest Phone Centre for details.

Please note — Although every effort has been taken to ensure this procedure is completed without incident, there is a remote possibility a brief interruption of telephone service may occur in the early morning hours. Should such an interruption occur, your patience is appreciated.

Please call the Grande Cache Business Office at 1-827-3500 (toll-free) if you require further information.

Thank you

Let's make it a safe summer

Spring is finally here, and the bicycles are out in force on the streets of Red Deer and the trails of Waskasoo Park.

Let's make it a safe summer.

The city and police are doing a credible job to that end, creating a bike safety advisory committee and helping stage events like the recent Petro-Canada bicycle rodeo.

But parents bear ultimate responsibility for teaching children to bike safely. And there's one thing they can do above all, that will help protect their children: insist they wear helmets while cycling.

Across North America, at least one child dies every day in a bicycle accident. Three-quarters of the kids die from head injuries.

In Florida, a 14-year study found even more striking numbers: head and neck injuries accounted for 86 per cent of all cycling deaths studied. But not one of those killed was wearing a helmet.

A neurosurgeon at a Washington, D.C. hospital says he has yet to see a child who was wearing a helmet with a head injury.

"Children must be provided with helmets and taught to wear them on every ride, starting when they get their first bike," says the American Academy of Pediatrics.

There are a few things parents can do to encourage helmet use:

- Ensure you get one that fits.
- Let kids help pick out their helmets.
- Praise them for remembering to wear helmets.
- Show them a good example.

The last tip may be the most important of all. Wearing a helmet while cycling should be the same as buckling up when you get in your car, or wearing a life jacket when you get into a boat.

Children take their cues more from what parents do than what they say.

So use your noggin — put on a helmet.

Consumer information 'answering service' deals with child restraints

The Alberta Motor Association's consumer information department acts as a kind of "answering service" on issues relating to child restraint systems (CRS) and their proper use.

AMA members and non-members alike may have access to information on the proper installation of CRS, what to look for when purchasing a new or used CRS, where to anchor tether straps, and the proper type of CRS for a child's weight and muscle development.

Since being designated last year by Transport Canada as the official source of information on CRS in Alberta, AMA's consumer information department has fielded more than 700 enquiries.

Since November of last year, the department has served notice on safety defects in three brands of CRS: Stroler GT 2000, the Bo-Peep Hi-Rider and the Cocon Auto-Trac. The department receives notice of recalls from Transport Canada and passes the information on to the public.

AMA members and non-members alike may contact the AMA's consumer information services on child restraints, toll-free, at 1-800-222-6578.

Prepare soil for bedding plants

The rush is on now to buy bedding plants and get them in gardens and flower boxes so summer can be filled with color.

Before you buy bedding plants you should prepare your soil and also consider what type of annuals are best suited for your location.

Every two years organic matter should be added to the soil. Add at least a half-inch of peat moss or well-rotted manure. Also apply an all-purpose garden fertilizer like 16-20-0. Ideally, a soil test should also be done.

Before choosing annuals, consideration should be given to their location. If the garden is in a shady area, choose begonias, impatiens and violas. Geraniums, marigolds, petunias, zinnias, snapdragons and portulaca thrive in bright sunny areas.

"There are lots of new and unusual annual flowers. It's nice to try something new, say browallia, gazanor or schizanthus (butterfly flower)," says Pam North, information officer at the Alberta Tree Nursery and Horticulture Centre in Edmonton.

"The nice thing about annuals is that you can change them from year to year."

When buying plants choose stocky, dark green vigorous plants with no yellow leaves. Choose compact plants, rather than spindly ones.

Evenings or a cool day are the best times to transplant

"There are lots of new annuals to choose from."

bedding plants. "If you transplant when it's hot and sunny, it may cause the plants to suffer from transplant shock," she adds.

North has several other transplanting tips. First, dig a hole large enough to accommodate the root system. If the plants aren't grown in cell packs, gently separate the plants keeping as much soil around the roots as possible. Leave a slight depression or well around the plant to hold water and the plant well.

Bedding plants can be fertilized when they are transplanted. North suggests watering them with a high phosphorous fertilizer starter solution like 10-52-10.

North also warns if there is a risk of frost to be prepared to cover plants to protect them. Tarps, burlaps or old sheets suspended over stakes can be used to shield plants from frost.

For more information about bedding plants, contact North at the Alberta Tree Nursery and Horticulture Centre at 472-6043.

Moderation, not martyrdom key to successful weight loss

For years diet researchers, health care professionals, government agencies and other "experts" have looked for ways to make our diet more healthy, says Alberta Agriculture's provincial food and nutrition specialist.

"Many people have rushed from one diet promise to another without satisfaction in the quest for easy answers," says Aileen Whitmore.

"Now, after all those years of experimenting with diets, health officials are still recommending an old-fashioned balanced diet eaten with restraint."

"Moderation, not martyrdom, is the best advice when selecting a diet. Eat everything, and not too much of anything. No single food causes or cures a disease. Your whole diet and lifestyle makes the difference," she adds.

Too many calories, and not particular foods, are now widely recognized as the health culprit, she says. "Caloric intake has more impact on blood cholesterol levels than the intake of either dietary cholesterol or fat. One of the most effective, but not necessarily popular ways to lower cholesterol is to lose weight."

Some authorities say by lowering the fat content of your diet, you also lower the cholesterol level of your blood.

"Keep in mind that fat is the richest source of calories, however, it's not so much the source as the total caloric intake that makes the difference," says Whitmore.

We too have made mistakes in our life

By Pastor John Martens
Dr. Pentecostal Assembly
"Nobody's perfect"
 Haven't we all said that at one time or another?

The words roll off the tongue so easily when we are faced with a mistake or fault. At such times, perhaps when embarrassed about a public blunder, we often use the phrase as an excuse to get out of an awkward situation. (After all, anyone could have made the same mistake.)

Too often though we live as though we are perfect. Only when the spotlight of attention is drawn to our faults, when we can no longer avoid the detection of our errors by others, we admit what everyone else knew was obvious — we too have made mistakes in life.

The apostle Paul teaches about the nature of man in the Bible in a letter to the church in Romans. In the first three chapters he comes to the conclusion all mankind is sinful; that there is no one who has lived to please God; that man is destined in himself to depravity and ungodliness.

These are perhaps hard truths to accept for the romantics and the humanists who believe mankind is actually bettering himself. A quick look at society reveals an affirmation to the Biblical testimony about mankind. Despite all the advances in technology and knowledge man has not been able to conquer the sinful nature which is at the root of all his problems. The result is decay in the fibre society that is not held back by any amount of education or scientific breakthrough. Man is decadent.

Fortunately Paul did not stop writing his letter after summarizing the character of man. There is hope, and there is a means of transforming individuals.

The first step is recognizing the character inherent to all of us — we are sinful, selfish and corrupt beings who do not deserve to have God love us. We are powerless to change our own nature. We need God to work a miracle on our behalf.

That is the next step. Ask God to work a miracle in your life, give your life to Him and ask Him to begin changing you from the inside out. God has already done a lot on your behalf towards this. The Bible says God demonstrated His own love for us in this: While we were still sinners, Christ died for us." He paid the penalty for our sins.

Not only did Christ die for man, but He was also raised back to life so that we also, in Him, could have eternal life. The Bible teaches that all who believe in the resurrection of the Lord Jesus, who turn their lives over to Him 100 per cent, will have the transforming power of God available for their lives.

The Christian life is not a matter of trying to portray perfection. The lie of hypocrisy doesn't impress God. But as we honestly and humbly walk with Jesus He produces an ongoing transformation. Once He has begun to work He doesn't stop.

Communities invited to contribute logo-shaped birdhouses to Tofield

Did you know Tofield is the 'Bird Capital of Alberta' and that Tofield is collecting and will display the largest collection of birdhouses in the world?

Battle River Tourist Association members were the first to learn about the unique birdhouse project in a recent association meeting. In making the first public announcement about the project, Wm. Schoeman, Tofield's BRTA official representative, says Tofield hopes to have thousands of birdhouses on display as a tourist attraction. Anyone can contribute a birdhouse and will be recognized for their donation.

Every Alberta community is being invited to contribute a birdhouse in the shape of their community logo.

BRTA manager Sylvia Clemens highly commended Tofield on dreaming up such a unique project that ties in perfectly with the Beaverhill Lake Bird Watching Sanctuary located near Tofield. Clemens urged members to get behind the project — "the sooner we can fill Tofield with birdhouses the sooner droves of people will come into the area to view the collection. It will be a real family draw," concluded Clemens.

For further information contact Schoeman at 662-2989 or 653-3730, Tofield.

Stony Plain hosts Summer Games

Charlene Seeman, Zone 5 coordinator for the Alberta Sport Council was in Drayton Valley last Thursday promoting the Summer Games to be held July 14-18 at Stony Plain.

She left student handouts at Evergreen elementary and H.W. Pickup junior high and also placed posters in several outlets in town.

She also met with recreation director Paul Nielsen, facilities manager Charlene Jenkins, Mike Townley, head professional at the Drayton Valley golf course and George Bergquist, who is coordinating the baseball playoffs at the Games.

"More so than promoting the Games, the visit was an attempt to get some Drayton Valley participation," she said.

Three local golfers participated in the 1988 Summer Games at Strathcona.

Seeman would just love to see a repeat of that at the Stony Plain Games.

First impressions important for stuents seeking employment

By Tracey Vatter
When handing in your application form or filling one out, look presentable; remember first impressions are formed within 30 seconds so be impressive.

Make your application form neat and legible or it may be the first to be thrown out, even if it has the best qualifications. Bring your personal fact sheet along when filling out the applications. It will be a lot easier to fill out if you have the information there in front of you.

Application form: Do not leave a space blank if it does not apply to you — put N/A. Most application forms tell you to put your last name first and please read for these types of things, because it shows you can follow directions.

If your home and mailing address are the same, write it out twice; do not put "same" in the second space.

If you do not work but the form says business phone, cross it out and write in messages and a second number where the employer can leave a message. This is important because you want to be able to be contacted. You don't want to miss a job because you could not be reached.

Are you bondable? This means have you ever been convicted of a felony. If you have you cannot work with money or valuable goods.

A competition number is for larger companies that have advertised for more than one job which people are applying for. If there is no competition number, put N/A

Always remember to sign and date your application, as this makes it a legal entity which holds you liable if you lie on the form.

Broken toy parts dangers to infants

Parents and caregivers are advised to take particular care to keep small items — especially broken toy parts — out of the reach of small children.

Children under the age of three have a tendency to put all types of objects into their mouths. Small objects, such as pins, batteries, buttons and parts of broken toys are particularly dangerous as a child may swallow them or choke on them and suffocate.

Recently, a 22-month-old boy died after a cone-shaped piece of broken finger crayon lodged in his throat. Most crayons are intended for use by children aged three and older. However, certain types — specifically finger crayons — are used by children under the age of three. These children should be supervised when they are playing with crayons. Any broken pieces of crayon should be disposed of immediately.

When it comes to child safety, it's good to keep a few points in mind. Any area where young children play should be kept clean and safe. Toys used by older children should not be left within the reach of young children. Parents and caregivers should always read the manufacturer's instructions and follow age recommendations generally indicated on a package.

Today's teenagers trust this complex instrument:

A parent's ear. It can collect information easily and impartially and these days, it's doing so very well. The proof is in the way teenagers and their parents are talking things out. More than ever before, teens are giving their parents the opportunity to listen. Parents are letting kids know that they care, that they're interested and informed. And that's important, because when it comes right down to it, you are the major influence in their lives. You should feel encouraged to hear that your teenagers agree.

Rodeo, parade a hit

In spite of a few rain showers the Alder Flats rodeo was a great success. The quick wit of announcer Rod Blades and the slick handling of the events by all the helpers kept the pace moving rapidly all day.

The fact that Harvey Miller was "unhorsed" in the morning was drawn to the attention of all throughout the day...especially when his riderless horse was spotted later helping to corral two wayward steers which had decided to head for safer pastures than the rodeo grounds.

Alder Flats

By Joan Elmont

The parade, led by Doyle Seely and Ray Tomkins, was larger and more varied than previous years with several horse-drawn entries and Marvin Long's immaculate 1958 Oldsmobile.

The Alder Flats Legion held a pancake supper on Friday prior to the rodeo. The door prize, a telescopic fishing rod, was won by Vic Forchuk.

Beef prices expected to increase

Sharp reductions of fed cattle put on the market increased prices in all North American cattle markets in the first quarter of 1989 says an Alberta Agriculture market analyst.

"For several weeks early this year Canadian output was running four to six per cent below last year's volumes. Cold weather hindered the performance of cattle being fed over the winter," says Ron Gietz in his quarterly livestock situation and outlook report.

Alberta slaughter cattle followed the same general trend. Steer slaughter was four per cent less than last year and heifer slaughter dropped two per cent. Average carcass weights for fed cattle were about three per cent lower than in the first quarter of 1988.

"Prices for fed steers increased almost steadily from January through March reaching a top range of $86.50 to $90.50/lwt. during the week ending March 17. This likely will be the price peak in 1989," he says.

Gietz says it's expected that beef output will decrease in both Canada and the U.S. and result in higher annual average fed cattle prices this year compared to 1988.

In the short term, two factors will also contribute to better prices. Retail demand for beef is expected to start a seasonal improvement this month. Hog prices are expected to improve in the second quarter, and a more typical price spread between the two commodities is favorable for the cattle outlook, he says.

Retail Postal Outlets across the country offer Canada Post customers more access to postal products and services. On average, hours of postal service operation have more than doubled in communities where service has changed from a post office to a Retail Postal Outlet operated by local business. Thousands of rural Canadians can now purchase stamps or pick up mail in the evening or on weekends.

Clairmont Town Manager Clare Songer says the Retail Postal Outlet established in his town, when postal services were converted to a local business, has had a positive impact on the community.

Aw, do I hafta?

Daniel Lyon, 4, was a little shy about letting his efforts be put in the newspaper but the Drayton Valley had deserved credit after taking time out from play to help his mom's friend with some planting duties.

Spring runoff has improved

Most areas in Alberta and the extreme southern regions of Saskatchewan and Manitoba experienced improved runoff this spring, according to the latest water supply conditions report issued by PFRA (Prairie Farm Rehabilitation Administration).

In the remaining areas of the grainbelt, however, there was little or no runoff and surface water supplies remain low or dry.

The report says shallow aquifers across the Prairies will not receive much recharge this spring and, as a result, water levels in these sources will remain among the lowest recorded this decade.

In addition, the combined effects of lack of rainfall in April, strong winds and rising temperatures are causing surface soil moisture levels to deteriorate.

The information for the PFRA report covers the period up to May 1 and was supplied by the Prairie drought monitoring network, which includes a number of federal and provincial agencies and private sources.

Flows in rivers originating from the mountains are expected to be normal except the Milk River where the flow should be 65 to 80 per cent of normal. Irrigation districts anticipate the availability of a normal supply of water, assuming average summer weather.

On-farm surface supplies are improved throughout the province with most locations having at least a one-year supply on hand. The exceptions are some locations in the east central and northeast areas of the province where supplies are rated as inadequate with significant shortages expected.

Despite improved runoff, shallow aquifers are not expected to fully recover and some people using shallow wells likely will again experience water shortages.

No communities are expected to experience drought-related water shortages this year.

Surface soil moisture levels are poor throughout the eastern half of the province and good to excellent in the western half. Subsurface moisture is low in the area east of a line running from Lethbridge to Vegreville. In the rest of the province subsurface moisture is fair to good.

Certificate Career Programs

In Alberta's expanding economy, it's people with skills who get the jobs. And there's no place like NAIT for acquiring job skills. Why not look into enrolling in one of the following one-year certificate programs this fall?

- Diesel Mechanics
- Millwork and Carpentry
- Welding

Consider the advantages of a certificate program

- The programs are only 34 weeks in length
- You don't need a high school diploma to enroll - Grade X English, Math and Science are required
- Job opportunities for graduates are expanding
- Credit toward apprenticeship training may be granted
- Financial assistance may be available for qualifying applicants

Programs begin in late August, 1989. Enrolments are limited by quotas. Apply now to avoid disappointment. For additional information, call Hello, Drayton Valley!

Changes You Will Notice June 7, 1989

AGT will be installing new digital switching equipment in your telephone exchange June 7, 1989.

Because of this new equipment, customers using touch tone equipment who are not registered with AGT as using the service, and have not paid the monthly charge for the service, will not be able to make out-going calls. To avoid this, if you have touch tone phones in your home or office, please call AGT at 1-827-3500 (toll-free) and make the necessary arrangements.

Sounds Differently — Computerized equipment is quieter. The dial tone may have a slightly different sound.

Part-time Calling — A called party who currently hears two long rings will now hear two short rings. Called parties who hear one long ring will continue to hear one long ring. However, the people placing the calls will now hear a single ring only. Please advise people calling you of this change.

Pay Phone Coinless Access — No coins are required to contact the operator (dial 0), or information (dial 411).

New Dialing Instructions — Coins must be deposited before placing a local call instead of when the called party answers. No coins are required to call the operator (dial 0). Please read the instruction card on the pay phone.

Repair Service — If you require telephone repair please call 611.

Directory Service — Please call 411 to obtain directory assistance.

Custom Calling Services are now available. Please call your Business Office, or visit your nearest Phone Centre for details.

Please note — Although every effort has been taken to ensure this procedure is completed without incident, there is a remote possibility a brief interruption of telephone service may occur in the early morning hours. Should such an interruption occur, your patience is appreciated.

Please call the Grande Cache Business Office at 1-827-3500 (toll-free) if you require further information.

Aseptic packages Are they the wave of the future?

They are known in the food industry as 'aseptic packages' — clever boxes that are quickly replacing cans and bottles.

The brainchild of the late Dr. Ruben Rausing, the system originated in Switzerland in the 1940s. Large-scale use in Canada dates back only to 1979. Aseptic packages are made of six to eight layers of cardboard, aluminum foil and plastic bonded together. The rectangular boxes are conveniently stackable and take up less space than bottles or cans.

They won't break and they are disposable. Perhaps even more importantly, beverages taste fresher because they can be processed much more quickly. To be sterile, the product undergoes UHT (ultra-high temperature) treatment — a kind of superpasteurization. The liquid is raised quickly to about 140 degrees C and rapidly cooled.

Because exposure to heat lasts only 10 to 15 seconds, the product loses little of its taste or nutritional value. Tin cans, on the other hand, are 'boiled' for as long as 20 minutes before cooling. Foods contained in clear glass jars are subject to deterioration due to their exposure to light.

The food industry considers aseptic packaging the wave of the future.

Environmentalists are not as enthralled, however. This is because the packs are totally unrecyclable.

Committee informs public of progress

By Joan Elmont

The West End Education Committee, formed earlier this year, would like to inform the public of its progress.

Intent: to pursue the best possible options concerning educational boundaries, programs and facilities in the west end of the county of Wetaskiwin.

Concerns: To prevent further deterioration of the school population, programs and facilities.

Mandate: To see this proposal gets implemented fairly and justly to the west end.

Progress: Support of more than 300 people in favor of the proposal; support of the county councillor; support of the Wetaskiwin school board and agreement with the Wetaskiwin school board to implement a grades 7-12 central school in Buck Lake and a kindergarten to Grade 6 school in Alder Flats, with the Winfield high school attendance area to join.

Together with the county of Wetaskiwin the West End Education Committee set up a joint committee to pursue the goal of this new school.

For further information contact Bill Duffy (Lake/Maywood), Debbie Schwengler, Regan Seely or Linda Mackinnon (Alder Flats), Darrel Wennerstrom (Buck Lake), Doug Goltz or Zena Blackmore (Winfield)

Circus coming

West Pine celebrates 13 years

Vera and Rudy Brzus, Muriel Weber, Jean Doty and LeOpal Larsson were hosts to 125 people in 50 RVs at the Buck Lake Hall Saturday, May 27.

They provided liquid refreshments to accompany the lunch brought by members of Battle River Tourist Association who were on their way to a rendezvous at Drayton Valley.

Another segment of RV tourists passed them on their way from Drayton Valley for an overnight stop at Em-T Town.

The paving of Highway 22 is making it a busy thoroughfare for tourism in this province.

Public urged to report suspicions of animal abuse to Alberta SPCA

Winter is here and the problems involved in feeding and caring for livestock are greatly increased.

Every year the Alberta SPCA investigates hundreds of situations where animals are subjected to severe hardship, and in extreme cases starved to death, because of poor management and feeding practices.

As Neil McDonald, executive director of the Alberta SPCA points out, "Winter weather conditions are always difficult for livestock, particularly for those animals that are not in good health or satisfactory body condition at the outset.

"A deficiency of nutritious feed or access to water for a prolonged period invariably leads to unnecessary suffering and loss of valuable animals."

While the vast majority of Alberta farmers and ranchers conscientiously care for their livestock throughout the year, there always exists the few that do not. In order to prevent such unfortunate circumstances from developing, it is essential the general public respond by reporting situations where animals are not receiving adequate care, to the Alberta SPCA or the RCMP.

The Alberta SPCA urges all citizens to report any cases regarding neglected animals to their office—471-2020.

DRAYTON VALLEY, ALBERTA, TUESDAY, JUNE 13, 1989

The impact from an explosion at the Pembina Educational Consortium forced out garage doors, the roof, and caused extensive damage throughout. Adult students in class at the time were forced to flee the building.

Lives miraculously spared in explosion

By Susan Moseicki

A powerful explosion as a result of a torch lighting vapors from sour water residues in a tank truck put the lives of more than 30 people in jeopardy Saturday morning.

The blast in the garage attached to the Pembina Educational Consortium caused the ceiling in a classroom occupied by 20 adult teacher's aide students to crash down over their heads.

Harry James Gibson, 50, (Crocus Holdings Ltd.) was changing a valve on his truck when it got stuck and reportedly tried to use heat from the torch to loosen it. He had been carrying sour water in the truck the previous day, and when the flame hit the vapors it resulted in the massive explosion.

At the time of the blast there were two courses being taught in the building. The teacher's aide course was underway in the room immediately adjacent to the garage, and a pipefitters class (approximately 10 people) in a room farther away.

No serious injuries incurred, but many occupants of the building suffered from shock and some were treated in hospital for minor injuries.

The building and 10 vehicles in the garage bays suffered extensive damage estimated at one-million dollars.

"It's just miraculous," said Joe MacLellan, executive director of the consortium. "There could easily have been several fatalities. I'm so relieved that there was nobody seriously hurt."

A shaken office clerk, Sherry Tedrick, said, "I heard a boom" and I looked at the door, and it shattered, and I got out."

"The ceiling just came crashing down on the girls on the east side," said one of the victims, Deb Hines. "It's unbelievable! You don't really know what happened. Everything comes crashing down around your ears and you don't know why."

Rob Bedard, who lives about a block and a half away from the building, said, "All my clocks and pictures are gone. It sounded like an airplane hit a roof, it was that bad.

Drayton Valley RCMP and Occupational Health and Safety are still investigating the cause of the blast.

Highway fatalities spark investigation

Evansburg RCMP are still investigating the tragic accident that claimed the lives of three Drayton Valley residents recently.

Margaret Doreen Henriksen, 32, her daughter Laura, 6, and four-month-old son Dallin, were killed June 3 when their station wagon was involved in a two-vehicle collision on Highway 22, about six-and-a-half kilometres south of Highway 16.

Edward Mark Borle, 35, of Fallis, Alberta, the lone occupant of the other vehicle (a Ford half-ton), suffered leg and facial injuries and was taken to hospital in Drayton Valley and transferred to the University of Alberta hospital. Borle has since been released.

Kelvin Henriksen delivered a touching eulogy during the funeral of his wife and children at The Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints last week.

Baby Dallin was buried in his mother's arms. Henriksen has three other children under eight years of age.

No charges have been laid to date. The police investigation is continuing.

B&E suspect turns gun on self

A 29-year-old man, formerly of Drayton Valley, shot himself in the head last Friday following a high speed chase by RCMP in North Battleford, Sask.

As reported in the Edmonton Journal, Kevin Laughlin, 29, was wanted in connection with robberies in Jasper and Stony Plain, and a string of break and enters in a community west of Edson.

RCMP attempted to stop Laughlin's vehicle in North Battleford and a high speed chase followed. The police eventually used a spike belt to blow out the tires on the vehicle.

Laughlin's car crashed into a ditch and the RCMP surrounded it, but Laughlin killed himself before they reached him.

New budget $7 million

The Drayton Valley Health Complex's audited budget is completed and the hospital is sitting with a $132,600 surplus.

They are also looking at a 1989/90 budget of $7 million.

Jim Jansen, hospital administrator, said the auditor's statement was compiled from March 1988 to March 1989.

"The board is very pleased the audit is completed and we have this surplus," Jansen said.

The total budget for this coming year will be $7,540,000.

Jansen said all of the money will go towards the operation of the hospital. An added $32,000 will go towards purchasing new equipment.

Centre opening

The official opening of the town's new $1.6 million Civic Centre is scheduled for this Saturday.

The official ceremonies including the ribbon cutting will take place between 1 and 2 p.m. More 300 invitations were sent out to invited guests.

The Twin Rivers school board approved the memorandum at their meeting last Wednesday.

The agreement, for one year, takes effect Sept. 1.

All employees subject to the agreement will receive a five-per-cent increase in their salary effective Sept. 1 as well as an increase in their benefits package.

The negotiations involved amalgamating parts of two existing agreements (County of Parkland and Leduc) into one Twin Rivers school division agreement with the ATA Twin Rivers local.

According to one teacher, it has been a long time since an agreement of this nature was agreed to and signed prior to the end of the existing agreement (that expires at the end of August).

It also bodes well for future issues and concerns and is due mainly to the positive attitude of the teachers and trustees.

Two of the participants in the negotiations were Wayne Donner, negotiations sub-committee chairman for Twin Rivers Local 82 and Jim Reid, vice-chairman of the Twin Rivers school board.

RCMP target offenders

By Susan Mosicki
The Drayton Valley RCMP will be maintaining a higher profile in traffic enforcement in problem areas, according to staff sergeant Jim Humphrey.

"We are trying to prevent accidents and educate people in proper driving procedures," he said. "Hopefully higher police presence will serve that purpose."

Humphrey said the police are going to target certain areas that have proven to be a problem. Some problem areas include the Poplar Ridge Road, Poplar Ridge trailer court, Country Style trailer court, school zones, MacKenzie Avenue, and the four way stop at 46 Avenue.

"We will be targeting additional areas that come to our attention as they are identified."

The major complaints in problem areas are excessive speeding and in some cases stunting, said Humphrey.

Discussion held over

A special budget meeting will be held tomorrow, (June 14) to discuss the school board budget at the Twin Rivers board office at 9 a.m.

It was recommended the budget discussion be held over until that date as there was too much in last week's agenda to deal with budget issues.

The budget meeting will be open to the public.

Breton/Lindale students to stay home

By Sue Kenyon
In order to keep the population numbers up in both Breton and Lindale schools, it has been recommended boundaries be made preventing those students from attending Drayton Valley schools.

The recommendation by Dr. George Bevan, superintendent of the Twin Rivers school board, at last Wednesday's meeting was tabled until the next board meeting.

Many trustees had problems with the recommendation. Trustee Carolyn Strand wanted to see an exception added to the existing two.

Presently, the only exception where a Breton or Lindale student would be exempt from such a deal would be in the event they are a special needs student or that they are already attending a Drayton Valley school.

"I'd like to see an exception where students already attending can attend and visa versa."

The award-winning photo, 'A small step for man', taken by reporter/photographer Michael McQuillan appeared in The Western Review last May.

We done good

The Western Review has won two awards in the Canadian Community Newspaper Association annual competition.

The paper earned a third-place finish in the best sports photo category for papers with a circulation between 4,000 and 12,499.

Barry's Bay, an Ontario paper took first place followed by Fort Hawkesburg, Nova Scotia and The Western Review.

The Western Review also earned a blue ribbon in the general excellence category for papers with a circulation between 3,400 and 4,999.

The Leduc Representative, another Lynard Publishers paper, took first place for best all-round paper and best editorial page in the general excellence tabloid, circulation 5,000 to 9,999. They also claimed second place in the best front page category.

The Spruce Grove Examiner, another Lynard paper, was second in best all-round paper, behind The Representative.

Secretary treasurer Bill Weber said the boundary rule would not affect Drayton Valley students wanting to attend Breton or Lindale schools.

Weber stressed the boundary proposal is really a transportation issue more than anything.

"We are saying that the board will not bus these students out of Breton or Lindale to attend Drayton Valley schools. Certainly if parents make their own arrangements for children's transportation we cannot tell them they can't attend," Weber said.

Trustees decided they would like to examine the existing boundaries, to see where they lie and bring it back to the next meeting.

"I agree fully with the recommendation but I know we may get a lot of pressure from this. Some parents are pretty adamant about sending their children to Drayton Valley, some will even offer to pay to send them," Weber said.

More excitement than meets the eye

The Drayton Valley fire department's involvement in the Lions rodeo parade had a little extra excitement this year.

About 10:20 a.m. fire chief Sheldon Fuson who acts as the parade marshal and his crew, who organizes the entries, were called away to an explosion at a warehouse across town.

However, some of them returned in time to get the parade rolling at its scheduled 11 a.m. start.

Overcast skies and rain kept the number of entries down.

It only took the parade about 20 minutes to pass any given point along the route. However, the unsettled weather didn't seem to bother the spectators as they lined the entire route.

Yellowhead MP Joe Clark and his wife Maureen rode in the parade.

Another participant from out of town was the Klondike Days sheriff's posse from Edmonton.

The Kinsmen float, which was relegated to the rear of the parade due to a brief mechanical problem, won the judge's eye as the best entry.

Koko's Hair took first in commercial followed by Woodland Chrysler/Jeep and Kelly's Flower Garden.

The 1st Drayton Valley Boy Scouts got the red ribbon amongst clubs and organizations. Second went to the Oil Wives followed by Drayton Valley minor ball.

Drayton Farm Mart took first in the agricultural class followed by Mary Lauer.

Flowers by Fay got the judges' vote for the best entry in the novelty section followed by Beaver Lumber and Venture Realty.

The Drayton Valley pipe band and the air Cadets finished one-two in the marching groups and band category.

BRS Rental Service was first in industrial followed by Home Hardware and the Town of Edson.

Allen Ganske was first in antiques with Jade Oilfield next and Aaron Fuson, with his miniature fire wagon, third.

Hodgson Enterprise Ltd. got the nod in equestrian with the sheriff's posse second.

Top spot in bikes went to the Twin and Triplet Club.

Kinsmen/Kinette float caught judge's eye as grand entry.

Town could bottle tax formula

It's been a hectic 12 months construction wise in Drayton Valley.

Especially for the town itself.

One immediately thinks of the $1.6-million Civic Centre, the $1.4-million Drayton Sports Centre and expansion of the water treatment and sewer system.

Despite all this, 75 per cent of the residential property owners in town won't see any increase in this year's tax notice.

Besides all of the construction of the past 12 months, an increase of 23 per cent in the requisition request from the Twin Rivers school district coupled with federal and provincial budgets, had most property owners expecting some sort of increase.

The very fact that 75 per cent of the taxes won't go up, is very uncommon in Alberta this year.

For example, property owners in Spruce Grove have to find the funds to handle a 37-per-cent increase.

Residents of Edson are looking at a $103-increase in taxes. In Brooks, taxes are up on the average of $71 and $50 in the county of Lacombe.

The mill played a key role, as it contributes about a half million dollars in taxes yearly.

Members of town council and the administration staff are to be commended for, the fifth year, holding the line on municipal taxes.

Whatever their formula is, they should bottle it and put it on the market. There's undoubtedly a lot of communities out there that would like to know their secret.

Thank you, Kinsmen

Son's night out was a learning experience

Most parents experience it at least once. If they have children that is.

I'm talking about the annual Grad Bash.

As a parent, with a son graduating this year, it meant more concern about the event than I had ever given before.

The pros and cons were carefully weighed. Should we let him go, or, somehow discourage him from attending?

In the end...it was a go.

Just about the time he was to leave the house, I got a call about an accident on Highway 22. Any thoughts of my son going to the Grad Bash were put on hold.

It wasn't for several hours later that I got around to thinking about my son.

Frankly Speaking

By Frank Ryan

By then, I was driving home from an accident scene that had claimed the lives of three Drayton Valley residents.

The thoughts that go through a father's head after witnessing something like that, made me nervous.

I'd always commended the Kinsmen for their participation in providing a Safe Grad in past years. But more so this year.

When I finally got home from the accident, my son had left, and in my own mind, visualized that the Grad Bash was well underway.

The pros and cons of letting him go dominated my thoughts.

It wasn't until the wee hours of the morning that I awoke to hear him talking to his mother.

It was at that point, I just chalked up my son's night out as a learning experience.

And quietly thanked the Kinsmen Club for providing a safe ride home for the Grad Bash participants.

Safe grad committee commends volunteers

Dear Editor,

We would like to take this opportunity to thank all the people who helped make this year's grad party a success.

First of all, a big thank you to Don Regenwetter, the Kinemen and parents for making sure we arrived home safely, Brian Winder for allowing us to use his field and miscellaneous items, and to First Choice Entertainment for the music.

Also to the Elks club and the bus drivers for providing transportation, the Ambulance Association for standing by in case of unexpected emergencies and the few people who came to clean up: Anita, Garret, Jan, Lesage, Monique and Stacey.

This year's Safe Grad was very successful due to the maturity of the senior class and other participants who, for the majority, abided by the rules set out in order to minimize accidentals.

We tried to make this year's grad party as safe as possible and feel we succeeded as we had no major problems as in past years. We hope this example will curb the negative response generated by the graduation party.

Again, thank you to everyone involved and congratulations to the graduation class of 1989!

4-H thanks A&W

Dear Editor,

On behalf of the Easyford 4-H Frontier club I would like to commend the A&W for once again providing exceptional service to the community.

Thank you to the management of the A&W, Oscar and June Szewc, for the free teenagers, fries, drinks and popicles supplied to each member of the 4-H highway crews. Thank you also for your continued support of the 4-H movement. We appreciate it.

Thank you to the staff of A&W for their patience and courteous service especially when we arrived in groups of 28. You are to be commended also.

Once again, thank you to the local RCMP detachment for patrolling and to the motorists who adjusted their speed for the clean-up crews.

Thank you especially to all those motorists who keep our highways clean by not littering.

Council evades home occupation issue

Council went around and around on the home occupation issue last Thursday.

It all started when council was informed that Peter Jacobs wanted to place a concrete pad over an easement and place a garage on the site.

The garage will apparently be used for a shop.

Municipal planning chairman Charlie Miner admitted that some residents would undoubtedly be concerned.

Mayor Bob Mayhew wanted to know what would happen when complaints started to come in about noise and dust.

"There are a number of situations like this in town," Miner stated.

He also clarified for council, that Jacobs already had a shop on his Northview residential lot. "It's just a new building," he added.

"I don't agree with this. I wish MPC would give this further consideration," the mayor stated.

However, Miner informed council there was nothing in place to prevent this.

Al Chesterman, the town's building inspector, shed some more light on the home occupation issue when he stated there was a full-fledged garage and a welder operating within a block of Jacob's place.

"We have almost any business you can name in our residential areas," Chesterman added.

The discussion was dropped at that point.

Some Bo Peep restraint seats unsafe

Defects in certain models of the Bo Peep Hi-Rider XL seat restraint have been discovered, says the Alberta Motor Association (AMA).

A Transport Canada investigation of a motor vehicle collision in which the harness of the combination infant/child restraint system came apart revealed the safety defect. Under a contract with Transport Canada, the AMA is responsible for alerting the public and provincial organizations dealing in child restraint issues.

Eight hundred seats which do not comply with the Canada Motor Vehicle Safety Standard were incorrectly manufactured in 1986. Owners of Bo Peep Hi-Rider XL child restraints should: Locate the date of manufacture on the label on the back of the seat and, Call Totkins Bo Peep Co. collect at 416-252-7787 if the seat was manufactured between Jan. 1 and May 31, 1986, or if the date is illegible or missing.

Replacement equipment will be sent, free, within 24 hours.

No Cynthia residents showed up

By Susan Mosicki
A public meeting held by Canada Post recently to discuss the fate of the Cynthia post office failed to attract even one town resident, said Lloyd Mildon, Canada Post spokesman.

Henry Rondeau, MD Brazeau reeve, was the only person to attend the meeting. Mildon praised Rondeau for his attendance.

Mildon said the meeting "did give residents of Cynthia a chance to come down and talk to us," but residents did not take advantage of the opportunity.

Canada Post made a decision to put the new post office in one of two local businesses, however, he said the final choice has not been made regarding which one will house the facility.

"It will be a terrific improvement in service," said Mildon.

The hotel postal outlet was open four hours a day, five days a week, and the new retail postal outlet will be open whatever hours the business is open. This will probably double the number of hours it will be open, he said.

Mildon stressed all postal services at the hotel postal outlet will be available at the new retail outlet.

A decision will be made before the end of the month on the location of the new postal outlet in Cynthia.

The post office has been located in the Cynthia Hotel for years, but when owner Dorothy Anderson resigned as postmaster, Canada Post was forced to find another location.

FCSS service may be implemented

Town council has decided to investigate the possibility of establishing a Family and Community Support Service (FCSS) in Drayton Valley.

Councillor Jean Saunders made two recommendations to council last Thursday.

They include an investigation of the functions of an FCSS program and the role of council in such a organization.

Saunders says the investigation in no ways commits town council to anything. "Not until we have carefully investigated it," she added.

Glen Lonie, who is one of the supporters of an FCSS program in town, was elated with the news.

"I'm quite pleased to hear that," he stated.

"It's a program that will benefit the town," he added.

An FCSS program gets 80 cents on the dollar from the provincial government.

Council met recently with the municipal district to see if they were interested in setting up a joint board.

However, the MD has decided to go it alone.

Recently, they hired a part-time FCSS coordinator.

Kindergarten issue is finally resolved

It appears the Twin Rivers school division and the Drayton Valley Community Kindergarten have settled their differences.

The school board announced last Wednesday it has entered into an agreement with the community kindergarten for transfer of operations and assets under terms mutually agreed to in a letter of May 24 and June 5.

The agreement comes on the heels of several meetings between the two parties.

Contents of the two letters were not made public at last week's school board meeting.

'I'm glad my wife is not alone'

By Paul Cudla

"They will be greatly missed, but I know they are needed on the other side."

"They're gone but they're not lost. They'll always be an important part of our lives."

Kelvin Henriksen has been through a tragedy which has taken the lives of three of his family members, but his strength and courage has become a tribute to the eternal love he shares with his family.

Kelvin's wife Margaret, 32, daughter Laura, 6, and son Dallin, four months, were killed in a two-vehicle collision June 3.

Margaret, Henriksen was returning home from picking up some mattresses via Highway 22 when the collision occurred at around 6 p.m.

"She expressed that she didn't feel right about going. She said she wanted her little helper with her. Laura easily decided she wanted to go with her mother."

"I'm glad my wife is not alone," Kelvin Henriksen said.

Services for Margaret, Laura and Dallin were held June 6.

The Henriksen family. Margaret, Laura and baby Dallin are pictured at left.

"I couldn't have asked for a better service...for a more sincere and personal service."

Henriksen's faith is overwhelming. His belief in his family, and love for his wife of nine years is everlasting.

"Our marriage will survive. We'll be together after this life; for time and all eternity."

Henriksen is extremely appreciative of the support he has gained through the community.

"I want to emphasize that I've very grateful to the community."

Food bank organizers in need of building

Over 300 signatures have been gathered in support of a proposed food bank in Drayton Valley, say organizers Eva Flanders and Catherine Meredith.

The women are planning to present the papers supporting the food bank to town council June 29. "Just to prove to them there is a need," said Flanders.

She said people from Drayton Valley, Cynthia, Lodgepole, Alder Flats, Buck Lake, Evansburg, and other areas have signed these papers.

Flanders said the major problem right now is not having a building. "People want to know where to drop off food, but we don't have a building."

The women will be discussing this problem with town council later this month.

MD employees to use vehicles for work

At last week's council meeting, it was decided some MD employees will be able to utilize municipal vehicles to go to and from the workplace during the summer season.

Due to the additional requirements of vehicle use throughout the summer season, council was told it would be beneficial for employees, such as the agricultural fieldman to be allowed to use the vehicle for travelling to and from the work place May 1 through Oct. 31.

From little cart to gift shop in 20 years

Marlene Samis

By Sue Kenyon

Marlene Samis of Drayton Valley has received a life membership from the hospital auxiliary after 20 years of service.

Samis says a lot has happened in the 20 years she has been involved in the organization and major achievements have been made.

"We've gone from a little cart to a gift shop," she says.

Samis says one of the major achievements she has seen is the building of the thrift shop and she is waiting with anticipation for the construction of the chapel which the auxiliary donated $100,000 towards.

Samis says she originally joined the auxiliary to "give something back to the community" and she has stayed as long as she has because she felt it is a good service.

Samis served four years on the provincial hospital auxiliary and also received a certificate of merit from the provincial hospital auxiliary organization.

Samis is the second person within the local organization to receive the life membership.

RCMP studies show significant traffic accident increases

By Susan Mosciak

A recent traffic analysis completed by the Drayton Valley RCMP finds traffic accidents were up significantly in 1988 compared to 1987.

There were 233 total accidents in Drayton Valley in 1988, 14 of them involving injuries. In the rural areas, there were 311 total accidents last year, including 26 injuries and three fatalities.

In Drayton Valley in 1987, there were 217 total accidents, with only five involving injuries. In the rural areas there were 21 injuries in a total of 252 accidents.

There is no real explanation," said staff sergeant Jim Humphrey, adding perhaps the increases were due to bad weather and increased traffic volume.

The purpose of the analysis, said Humphrey, is to adjust manpower to have maximum coverage (police presence) at peak periods.

Humphrey said 42 per cent of all accidents were a result of hitting fixed objects, such as fence posts, etc.

Twenty-eight per cent involved other motor vehicles, and 24 per cent of all accidents in rural areas were animal-related.

Other accidents, such as those involving pedestrians, made up about six per cent.

Locals impress at Evergreen rodeo

By Susan Moscicki
Local cowboys and cowgirls certainly didn't pass the buck at the 20th annual Drayton Valley Evergreen Rodeo last weekend.

They took an impressive three top spots out of the nine events.

Garry Ness won $418.95 for his outstanding performance in bull riding, Roger Lacasse won $249.38 in bareback bronc riding, and Kerri Meston won $148.20 in the junior barrel racing.

Other first place winners were: Kelly Giesbrecht of Rimbey, saddle bronc; Dallas Burns of Elnora, junior steer riding; Sean Senos of Ledus, calf roping; Lenny Lawes of Vermilion, steer wrestling; Dawn Halstead, ladies barrel; and Jim Henry and Todd Livingstone, team roping.

"It's a good feeling winning a home town rodeo," said 24-year-old Garry Ness.

The flank fell off the bull on his first ride, so Ness was awarded a re-ride.

He said he just recently started riding bulls again after a four-year stint as a bullfighter. As for the rodeo, Ness said, "I was raised in it."

Edmontonian wins junior golf title

By Frank Ryan
Richard Lemieux of Edmonton fired rounds of 39 and 37 to win the championship flight at the Drayton Valley junior golf tournament last Saturday.

It was the first time on the course for the 18-year-old who was extremely happy with his 76 score.

Ten shots off the pace was Jason Kossanvich who had rounds of 40 and 46.

Craig Warren, who told Lemieux about the Drayton Valley junior tourney, finished a disappointing fourth in the flight with an 18-hole score of 90.

Rob Skrypnik had rounds of 40 and 45 in winning the first flight.

Jason Hutchison took top honors in the second flight with an 86 that included rounds of 41 and 45.

Bryan Skrypnik captured the third flight followed by Tony Swendsen in the fourth, Lee Swendsen in the fifth, Des Parenteau captured the sixth, Darryl Sandquist topped the field in the seventh and Bonnie Erickson won the eighth.

Sparrow opens Birchwood

The $750,000 Family Leisure Centre at Birchwood Village Greens was officially opened last Saturday.

Minister of Tourism Don Sparrow along with Birchwood president Doug Bucar unveiled the plaque to signal the official opening.

About 200 people took part in the opening, held upstairs in the leisure Centre.

"I'm sure you will agree this is a first class facility," Bucar said.

"It turned out better than expected," he added.

Bucar praised the work of project manager Gary Lewis, Walter Franche, the coordinating engineer and all the contractors who worked on the 10,000-square-foot facility.

Sparrow, who said he trailed at Moebuck about 15 years ago, called it an amazing facility.

"I didn't realize I was coming to see such a fine facility. It will be looked upon by others in Alberta," he stated.

Chucks provided ground-thumping action.

Hardens take wagon titles

By Paul Cudla

It was better late than never for the chuckwagons at the 20th annual Evergreen Rodeo Sunday.

After being cancelled due to rain, a heavy track Saturday, nine heats of chuckwagons competed against the clock for the title.

A total of 23 wagons raced on a heavy but bearable track which was groomed repeatedly before post-time.

Robert Harden, with a time of 116.37 seconds, took the first-place trophy. Second place went to Chris Spreen in a time of 117.19. Spreen barely edged third-place finisher Merv Evans who posted a time of 117.49 seconds.

In the cart category, Chad Harden took first place in 112.35 seconds; Brown Simole was second with 113.43; and Jack Mackinaw finished third, timing 113.80 seconds.

FMHS student wins golf title

By Paul Cudla

Corina Kelepouris took full advantage of her school's participation in the provincial high school golfing championships by winning the girls' competition.

Kelepouris, a Grade 10 student at Frank Maddock high school, beat out competitors from all across Alberta for the title.

She shot an opening round of 87, followed by a final round of 85, which was good for a four-stroke win.

"Basically I just played steady. It was a tight match the whole way, but she collapsed before I did," Kelepouris said.

The FMHS girls' golf team won the zone playoffs May 29 in Stony Plain, to gain the right to play in the provincial playoffs from June 2-3 in Wetaskiwin.

Kelepouris said the turning point to the final round came at a par 3 where she scored a five and her closest competitor birdied the hole, putting Kelepouris down by one stroke.

"Then I said to myself, 'I'm gonna get them back.' And on the next hole (a par 5), I shot a five and she got an eight."

Kelepouris has been playing golf since she was nine, and dreams of playing as a professional on the women's tour. For now though, she's working on finishing high school and obtaining a golfing scholarship at an American university.

HATS OFF TO OUR HEROS

Don Kurylo didn't think he would like living in Drayton Valley when he first came here, but after four months, he has changed his mind.

"It's different, I like the small-town atmosphere," he says.

The 26-year-old emergency medical technician (EMT) was born and raised in Edmonton where he previously worked for Interhospital Transfer Services (a hospital-to-hospital transfer service) and as a lifeguard.

Although his job involves being on call in case of emergency much of the time, Kurylo still manages to find time to play the occasional game of tennis, or go for a quick swim in the local pool.

Kurylo is still single, but local girls can only dream. He already has a girlfriend.

Grad bash 'was great'

Don Regenwetter couldn't be happier.

This year's Kinsmen participation in the annual grad bash went off without a hitch.

"It was great," stated a happy Regenwetter, who organized the event on behalf of the Kinsmen.

"It's the best I've attended in three years. It featured good organization and a lot of self-control by the participating students," he added.

Regenwetter had special praise for the three-member organizing committee of Joanne Mankow, Andrea Hill and Lisa Manger.

"They sure made our job easier," Regenwetter admits.

The Kinsmen were also very appreciative of the parental assistance in driving the grads home.

A limit put on the number in attendance at the grad bash also made it easier for everyone concerned. Regenwetter estimates about 300 attended the all-night party compared to 630 last year.

The all-nighter started about 10 p.m. and ended around 5 a.m.

The Kinsmen are already making plans for next year's event.

Kinsmen to produce cystic fibrosis poster

The Drayton Valley Kinsmen are busy producing a national poster for cystic fibrosis.

The full-color 18-by-24-inch poster is expected to be ready in September.

One poster will be given to each of the 630 Kinsmen and Kinetic clubs in Canada. After that, the posters will be sold by the Drayton Valley club, with all the proceeds going back for cystic fibrosis research.

It's a project the Kinsmen have been working on for the past two-and-a-half years.

According to Don Regenwetter, who is heavily involved in the design and production of the poster, they took the idea to cystic fibrosis first. However, they already had a national poster.

Next, the Kinsmen took the poster idea to their district fall council meeting.

Bingo. Instant success in the form of $12,000 for the initial run of 10,000 posters and to assist with the marketing.

Contributing to cystic fibrosis has always been a major priority with the Drayton Valley Kinsmen. For the past two years they gave $5,000 annually.

1989 ASSESSMENT AND TAXATION GOOD NEWS & BAD NEWS

By now, all rate payers, in the Town of Drayton Valley, should have received a tax notice and assessment notice. The GOOD NEWS is that approximately 75% of the ratepayers will receive a tax notice either equal to or lower than the previous year's property taxes. However, 25% of the ratepayers may experience an increase in their property taxes.

The general assessment, completed every 7th year, is determined by the Provincial Assessment Branch, based on specific legislation.

Town Council's property tax policy has been to hold the line. In the interest of all ratepayers, Council finds the method of general assessment to be unfair to the improvement of our Town. It is their intent to lobby the Provincial Government for a change in how the assessments are arrived at. Council feels this to be a serious concern.

If you have any questions or concerns regarding your 1989 assessment or tax notice please contact our Taxation Hotline 542-5327 and ask for Linda, Joanne, Sharon or Amber.

In addition we are holding an Open House for assessment and taxation on June 20 & 21. Members from the Assessment Branch and Town Council will be in attendance to give you an opportunity to discuss your concerns on an informal basis. (See our display ad for further details on the Open House).

Danny Nero did a good job in his role of Chief Foster in the Frank Maddock high school production, Saturday the 14th. Grades 11 and 12 students practiced for the play for close to six weeks before last Thursday's performance.

High school horror spoof proves a hit

By Sue Kenyon

Grades 11 and 12 students of Frank Maddock high school performed their last major production of the year to a full house last Thursday.

William Gleason's Saturday the 14th is a spoof on the many horror episodes of Friday the 13th.

The costuming, timing of the dialogue and characters in this play were excellent.

Lisa Kuhn who portrayed the psychopathic killer was superb in her role.

Darcy Berger who portrayed the character Bob and Virgil, did just a good a job although it was Virgil that came through powerfully and who the audience seemed to love.

Jay Gavigan played the victim who got out alive. Some of her parts were hilarious. Perhaps one of the favorite scenes was when Patsy has a toilet plunger stuck in her face.

The rest of the cast included: Missy Lee, Danny Nero, Andrea Groulx, Janis Johnson, Christine Manning, Trevor Grinde, Sheldon Greanya, Angela Maik, Cora Boliannatz, Teena Freeman Darcy Berger, Sheldon Greanya, Catherine Deswarie, Cora Boliannatz, Teena Lorenz, and Yuko Hirakuchi.

This was an emotional time for theatre teacher Murray Arnold.

"This is the last performance of the year. It's going to be really hard, especially to let some of the Grade 10 years," he said before the play.

No pain, just lots of cold cream and itching when Darcy Berger played 'Bob,' — covered in poison ivy rash in "Saturday the 14th."

Resume tips from Hire A Student

By Tracy Vatter
Hire A Student Coordinator

There are four steps to producing a good resume:

Research: Use your personal fact sheet and collect all the information necessary.

For example, all your past employers and addresses, your volunteer work and the related skills you have gained. Also include your education, name and address, social insurance number and hobbies or activities you are involved in.

Development: There are two general types of resumes. The 'blanket' covers your basic skills and is used to apply for a variety of jobs. It is very general and forces the employer to choose the relevant information.

In the 'specific' you must prepare a new resume for each job you apply for. You must tailor each resume to show related strengths and experience particular to that job. It shows the employer at a glance, the important qualities you have for the job.

Production: Type your final copy on good quality paper. Proofread for errors, use only good, clean photocopies. Remember if resumes are not neat and free of mistakes, they will be the first to be screened out, even if you are the most qualified for the job.

Distribution: Make a list of the possible job you would like to apply for. Include a covering letter and address it to the person in charge of hiring if at all possible. A covering letter should include an introduction that tells what position you are applying for. A brief paragraph on why you are the right person for the job. Then a conclusion that says you look forward to hearing from them.

Remember: You are being judged by a piece of paper, so what you put on your resume is very important.

Town council sets up hiring review board

Town council has set up a board to review all board member appointments.

The board will include Mayor Bob Mayhew, councillors Alex Salfi and Jean Saunders and town manager Manny Deol.

It will be their job to interview and recommend to council appointments to various boards.

"It's very important to interview. Some people have a misconception of their roles," Salfi stated in council last Thursday.

Councillor Tom McGee said it could well turn out to be an administration headache.

But, he did admit there had been some problems in the past. McGee did not elaborate.

Twin Rivers hires three

Two principals and a vice-principal have received appointments from the Twin Rivers school board.

Dennis Harris will be returning to the Lindale school as principal next year.

At Evergreen elementary, Chris Kelly has been re-appointed to a second term as principal and the appointment of his vice-principal, Alvin Rurks, has also been confirmed by the board.

Tourist booth now open to travellers

For beleaguered travellers weary and lost in the Drayton Valley area the tourist booth information centre is an oasis of travelling knowledge.

"We have extensive information on Alberta, some stuff for other provinces, and U.S. states and even Alaska," Cindy Walters, who works in the booth, said.

The information centre, located along Highway 22, has been open since May 23.

Since Walters has started working at the centre, she has had travelling inquiries from people who lived as far away as Malaysia and Holland.

The booth offers brochures and pamphlets for places as far north as Alaska, and as far south as New Mexico.

The centre is closed Tuesday and Wednesday

(allow travel days) but is open 8 p.m., Saturday from 11 Thursday from 10 a.m. to 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. and Sunday p.m., Friday from 11 a.m. to from 10 a.m. to 7 p.m.

Cindy Walters helps to keep travellers informed.

A NAME TO BUILD ON

Take care when using pesticides

While farmers wage battles against insects and weeds they should make sure they won't join the casualty list from the chemicals they use.

Farm chemicals are dangerous — they also are a part of modern farming, so farmers must protect their health while handling pesticides.

Studies have shown that wearing recommended clothing and following chemical-use directions reduce the health risk to farmers. Protective clothing acts as a barrier to skin absorption of pesticides. Several layers provide better protection.

Basic protective clothing includes a long-sleeved shirt, full-length trousers, coveralls, neoprene or unlined nitrile gloves, neoprene overboots or long rubber boots and a wide-brimmed hard hat.

There are three levels of toxicity among agricultural chemicals and protection should increase with the toxicity level. A 'caution' label indicates slightly toxic, 'warning' labels mean moderately toxic and 'danger' labels indicate highly toxic chemicals.

How the chemicals are used also plays a role in how farmers should protect themselves. When mixing or handling chemicals farmers should wear a waterproof or neoprene bib apron.

Protective equipment is also important. The amount of necessary equipment also varies with the toxicity of the chemical. Protective head gear includes a hard hat, goggles or face shield and respirator.

Goggles protect eyes from pesticide vapors, dust and splashes, while respirators prevent inhalation of dusts, powders and sprays into the lungs.

Along with wearing the clothing and equipment, farmers also must clean their non-disposable gear after each wearing. Special washing procedures need to be followed to ensure the farmer isn't reusing contaminated clothing.

There are a number of precautions to be taken when cleaning clothes and equipment. Pesticide-soiled clothing must be washed separately from regular family laundry. Protective clothing should be washed daily. It's also a good idea to wear rubber gloves when handling pesticide-soiled clothing.

Hot water, a full washer level, a normal cycle and heavy-duty detergent should all be used. Clothing should also be re-washed and line dried to avoid contaminating the dryer. After washing, the machine should be rinsed thoroughly by using the full wash cycle.

Equipment should also be washed in hot, soapy water. Gloves should be checked daily for pin holes and discarded if cracked or discolored. Respiratory cartridges or disposable respirators should be changed at the first sign of chemical odor.

Club honors old/ushers in new officers

By Paul Cudla

The Drayton Valley Kinsmen Club honored the old and ushered in the new at their annual installation meeting held June 6.

Past Kinsmen president Barry McQueen, and Kinetite president Kathy Reich were replaced by Ron Reich and Julie Dean respectively.

"I feel the upcoming year is going to be successful," Dean said, adding she was going to make an effort to "basically generate more enthusiasm," as Kinetite president.

"I feel we have a strong club and I would like to further strengthen it to increased enthusiasm and increased membership," Dean said.

Dean singled out the Kinsmen's second year of open membership as an important step in increasing members. Open membership means Kinetites can join the Kinsmen without having a husband in the Kinsmen.

Ron Reich, new Kinsmen president, also stated the importance of increasing membership. The club presently has 24 members.

"You always have to be looking for new members. The more people in your club, the easier it is to get things done; the easier it is to spread the workload around."

"I've belonged to the club for four years now, so I thought I'd take my turn at the helm," Reich said.

Bob Pittman, governor, and Rita Pittman, district co-ordinator were present at the Kinsmen installation to assist with the swearing-in ceremonies.

New Kinetite president Julie Dean (centre left with plaque) and Kinsmen president Ron Reich look forward to increased membership and increased enthusiasm at their annual installation meeting June 6.

Breton 'adequate' for doctors

Shortages of doctors in rural areas does not seem to be affecting the Breton area, according to Dr. Sukhdev Gill at the Breton General Hospital.

"For the time being, we are quite adequate," he said.

"It's not easy to recruit a physician for a small place," he admitted. "There is better schooling, more entertainment, more for children and wives to do in a larger centre."

"A small hospital has long hours, and if there is an emergency, you don't have as good a back-up as in Edmonton or Red Deer."

Gill said he is a general practitioner who has also trained in anaesthesia, and added that no surgery is done in the Breton hospital.

The 1989 Budget

The 1989 budget was presented by the Provincial Treasurer to the Legislature on June 8. This budget is committed to:

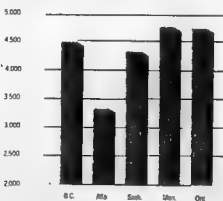

- A STRONG ALBERTA ECONOMY
- RESPONSIBLE FISCAL MANAGEMENT
- MEETING ALBERTANS PRIORITIES

Budget Highlights

- Our economy is strong. Alberta led the country in economic growth in 1988 and will stay ahead of the national average again in 1989.
- Education is a critical investment for the future. In 1989-90 total spending on education reaches $2.7 billion.
- Alberta has one of the best expenditure management records in the country and is determined to achieve a balanced budget.
- No increases in personal or corporate income taxes. Albertans continue to have the lowest rates of taxation and no sales tax.

- Diversification is working. Over $10 billion will be invested in forestry, petrochemicals and energy in the next six years. More Albertans were employed in 1988 than in any other year.
- Environmental protection, preventative health and choices for seniors are clear priorities.
- Albertans receive the highest level of health services in Canada. Senior citizens and low-income Albertans are protected from a small premium increase.
- Support for transportation infrastructure and farmers and ranchers increases. Albertans are protected from high federal interest rates.

Spruce Grove outraged over taxes

By Rich Goessen
Spruce Grove Examiner
City council is outraged by the school tax requisition submitted to Spruce Grove by the County of Parkland public education system.

An 80-per-cent increase in the overall requisition will result in a 37-per-cent tax increase for the average city homeowner.

Mayor George Cuff termed the increase "incomprehensible and totally unanticipated."

Council and city residents should register their strong opposition, he suggested.

City politicians had been told the split in the county school system resulting from the formation of the Municipal District of Brazeau would not have an impact on Spruce Grove, he reminded council.

City representatives were assured the loss of revenue to the school system resulting from the split would be cushioned by the provincial government.

Cuff said he can recall waiting for County of Parkland council to take the offensive and react negatively to the proposed formation of the MD, but he waited in vain.

County councillors indicated they anticipated a net positive impact as a result of the split.

Spruce Grove now has a limited capacity to respond to the disastrous consequences, Cuff says.

At the very least, however, he wants city residents to realize who's responsible for the hefty increase in their taxes this year.

Spruce Grove taxpayers write their cheques to the city but he wants them to direct their complaints to the county school trustees.

Public meetings have already been scheduled to discuss the reasons for the tax requisition increase and the city is sending letters of concern to Alberta Education Minister Jim Dinning and the Minister of Municipal Affairs.

Parkland municipality school taxes will rise substantially

By Christine Vanzella

Stony Plain Reporter

School taxes in Parkland municipalities will rise an average of 31 per cent for 1989-90 and could increase as much as 80 per cent after the Parkland school board passed its new budget May 23.

Taxes would be kept to a 31 per cent average increase if an overlevy of taxes from last year is used to cushion the mill rate increase.

Parkland was able to tax a portion of the County of Leduc and the ID of Yellowhead last year for one year, explained school board assistant of business services Walter Hepler.

Taxes could have been reduced last year, but the mill rate was kept the same and the overlevy saved, Hepler added.

The 31 per cent increase is based on the overlevy being used.

Although the board managed to chop $1.4 million from its proposed budget, required taxes will still increase by $2 million to $21.4 million for the 1989-90 budget.

The sharp increase in mill rates for the school board is also attributed to a loss in the tax base of $110 million.

"The changes result primarily from the establishment of the Twin Rivers school division in Drayton Valley," says board chairman Ken Fuhr.

Trustee Rianne Kulak also said the budget was a direct reflection of the separation during debate on the issue at the board's May 23 meeting.

"I think this budget is inexcusable and indefensible," said trustee Don Brandenburg, who voted against passing the budget along with trustee George Sewell.

Brandenburg added the tax increase is too big for taxpayers to swallow, noting other school jurisdictions are only raising their taxes five to 10 per cent.

Sewell said the board was faced with a difficult situation with the budget, especially since the board has not yet received any transitional grants from the provincial government.

He said the MLAs involved can't deal with the issue until mid-June, but noted taxpayers who have had the increase explained to them realize the quandary we are in.

The school board recently received a letter from Minister of Education Jim Dinning regarding their application for transitional funding due to the Twin Rivers split. Dinning said he will be reviewing the board's pleas for funds in the near future, along with the premier and his fellow cabinet members.

Camping with Cubs

Pillow talk gets a little loud — and hard.

That's the last time I kiss a frog.

Shaving water-filled balloons can be a little cool.

Home sweet home — but where's the garage?

Home of the Week

This immaculate, spacious family home is in a cul-de-sac bordering MacKenzie Park, offering privacy as well as convenience.

The kitchen has plenty of cabinets and a pantry with patio doors leading on to the deck. As well as an eating area in the kitchen, this lovely home has a large formal dining room separated from the sunken living room by a wooden railing. The living room features a brick masonry fireplace.

There are three good-sized bedrooms on the main floor—the master bedroom being very spacious with a three-piece ensuite and a large walk-in closet. The four-piece main has a marble sink and counter top and almost fixtures.

The basement entry is central with an open staircase and railing on one side.

Downstairs you'll find a family room with a wood stove, two large bedrooms, a bright large laundry/sewing room and a two-piece bath with roughed-in shower.

Add to all this a double attached front garage and concrete driveway.

This property can be viewed by calling Century 21 Hi-Point Realty Ltd. or drop in at the open house June 18 from 1 to 4 p.m. The asking price for this lovely home is $97,500.

Several out-of-towners enjoy 4-H breakfast

Moon Lake News

By Alma Johnson

The pancake breakfast cooked by the 4-H fathers recently was very well attended.

Some out-of-towners attending included Ralph and Colleen Johnson and family of Lloydminster, Alex and Helen Karvenon of Grande Prairie, Jean Cherrington and Florence MacLean of Drayton Valley, Kevin Woloszyn of Spence Grove and the Gary Woloszyn family of Wabamun.

The prizes of two barbecue aprons went to Ronette Kos and Haley Woloszyn.

Some of the Wojciechowski family camped at their farm on the cold, snowy long weekend.

Lloyd and Leona Redinger of Cold Lake visited her parents, Don and Blanche Cherrington, recently.

Some area folks braved the miserable long weekend weather and camped at the Brazeeau dam.

Congratulations to Frank and Jennifer Banks who were married May 27 at Drayton Valley.

Judging of the Moon Lake Thimbles 4-H club projects was held May 28 at the hall. Judges included Mrs. Hall of Evansburg, Lois Coward and Dorothy MacKenzie of Drayton Valley.

An awards night was held May 29 for the 4-H girls. The young ladies modelled clothes they have made. The fashion show was emceed by Donna Block. The club leader and assistants were presented with a token of appreciation from the club members.

Sandra Winchester (right) and her grand champion steer that sold for $2,418.

Achievement Day marks 25 years

This year's 4-H Achievement Day at the Drayton Sports Centre marked the 25th year of the cattle show and sale for local clubs.

Lin-Berry Buck, Lobstick, Tomahawk, and Two Rivers 4-H Beef Clubs were involved in the club show, interclub show, and sale.

Club members paraded their calves around the sports centre in hopes of earning top ratings in the show.

"It (the show) is a culmination of the year's project," said Drayton Valley district agriculturalist Gerald Laarhuis. "They learn how to feed and care for and show their animal."

Laarhuis said this is in keeping with the 4-H motto 'Learn to do by doing.'

The grand champion steer was sold to a local retail outlet for $1.95 per pound, earning a total of $2,418 for owner Sandra Winchester of the Lin-Berry-Buck 4-H.

According to Winchester, her secret to getting the grand champion was the feed consisting of oats and wheat mixed, and second-cut alfalfa.

Winchester intends to save the money for a college education. She wants to be a lawyer someday.

Other interclub winners include: for the supreme grand champion heifer, Steven Semeniuk (Lobstick); reserve grand champion, Lee Anne Vig (Two Rivers); senior grooming, Lisa Kuhn (Two Rivers); junior grooming, Sandra Winchester; senior showmanship, Tye Perrett (Lobstick); junior showmanship, Lisa Rogers (Tomahawk); purebred heifer, Steven Semeniuk; grade heifer, Evan Gavigan (Lin-Berry-Buck); grand champion cow/calf, Tye Perrett; best rate gain, Evan Gavigan; and best calf — first-year member, Bryan Martin (Lin-Berry-Buck).

Prior to the sale, the Sekura family (Sekura Auctions) was presented with a plaque honoring 25 years of support of the 4-H beef program.

Patience and a gentle touch helped this young lady keep her calf in line during the cow/calf show. For individual club results see page B7.

SPCA stresses precautions during rodeo

The Alberta SPCA is opposed to calf roping. Not only does this high risk event subject the calf to stress and harassment, but also to the possibility of pain, injury or death, says Joy Ripley, president of the Alberta SPCA.

"Causing unnecessary suffering to livestock does not demonstrate good husbandry practices and is certainly not an accurate portrayal of ranch work," she says.

The SPCA recognizes the event will continue in the future despite opposition. In order to minimize distress and possible injury to the animals used in rodeos; the society strongly recommends the following:

An independent veterinarian be present at all performances to provide immediate treatment for injured animals.

Strict enforcement of individual rodeo association rules and, only healthy, fit calves of the appropriate size and weight be used.

'We worship at altar of self'

As we begin 1989, we see a decreasing emphasis on Christianity in our society.

This occurs via such things as court judgements that outlaw school prayer or rulings that allow abortion under any chosen circumstances. We see the decreasing emphasis on God in the increasing incidence of divorce, abuse of many kinds and a prevalence of relationships that just don't last — family or friend.

All of these trends indicate that a subtle, but very fundamental shift has occurred in our society. We are now living in a world that pays nominal lip-service to Judeo-Christian values, principles and teachings, all the while worshipping at the altar of "self."

This focus on self is a fundamental tenet of something called "new age movement" or "the new consciousness." It is based on monism or "all is one." Everything is inter-related, inter-dependent and inter-penetrating.

Ultimately there is no difference between God, a person, a cabbage or a rock. The human being then becomes the ultimate inter-related being — the one.

From the Pastor's Pen

By Rev. Barry Parker
DV Anglican Church

This monism is manifested in everything from politics to transpersonal psychology, from Eastern religions to the occult, from the latest self-help book to the new-age guru herself, actress Shirley MacLaine. Isn't it interesting that all of these 'new' things are becoming more and more acceptable in our society? Also becoming more acceptable is the belief these 'new' thoughts are straightening out our troubled world once and for all.

However, a word of caution. This 'new' consciousness is based on monism and self is discussed in a book that is oft considered 'old.'

The Bible considers monism and the human tendency to focus on self from all perspectives. There is only one conclusion in our 'old' Bible regarding the 'new' age thinking.

God the Father created the world and all that is in it. Mankind knowingly and intentionally turned away from God. Yet, "...God loved the world so much that He gave His only Son, so that everyone who believes in Him may not die but have eternal life." (John 3:16)

Finally, the Holy Spirit was delivered to the world as a personal presence and a reminder of God's presence, love and power in our lives and in our world.

The new age will truly arrive for all of us when we get away from new and trendy consciousnesses and spiritual movements and get back to the timeless and ageless basic of all life — God Himself through a relationship with His only Son — Jesus Christ!

You can love and be loved

By Rev. Wes Herbert
DV United Church

"Don't worry...be happy."
Happiness is having a hand to hold and a heart to heal.

Happiness is leaning into tomorrow with love.

No matter what, you can love and you can be loved — you can be happy.

Love God, yourself, your neighbor and be happy. Make the connection, believe in yourself, discover you true identity, your dignity — your possibilities.

You have your own fingerprints and you can make your own unique impression on the world. God believes in someone special

From the Pastor's Pen

— you! Love God and be happy. Make the connection, believe in God.

The invitation to be happy was offered to everyone, everywhere, by Jesus Christ when He said, "Love God and your neighbor as yourself."

(Mark 12:29-31)
Make the connection with three love opportunities open to you and every person.
Three glorious opportunities to enter into a trusting, affirming relationship with yourself, others and God.

Don't worry...by happy,
make the connection with God and one another. Jesus put His body on the line to reach out to all of us, saying,
"I'm your brother and I love you; come let's be friends."

It's what life's all about — making the connection.

$1,000 prize money up for grabs

The deadline for entering the American Poetry
Association's contest is June 30. The contest is open to everyone and entry is free.

The grand prize is $1,000 and first prize is $500. There are 152 prizes worth $11,000 in all.

"Six Canadian poets won prizes in our last contest," said Robert Nelson, publisher for the association.
"We urge more Canadians to enter. Our judges look for new and unknown poets. You do not have to be a professional poet to win."

Poets may send up to six poems, each no more than 20 lines, name and address on each page, to American Poetry Association, Dept. CF-
43, 250-A Potrero St., PO
Box 1803, Santa Cruz, CA
95061. Poems mailed by June 30 are eligible to win. A new contest opens July 1.

Poems are judged on originality, sincerity and poetic feeling.

Each poem is also considered for publication in the American Poetry
Anthology, a leady collection of contemporary verse.

Hog prices on the increase

While hog prices were low in the first three months of 1989 there are indications prices will rally.

In Alberta, producers faced the lowest first-quarter market prices since 1974, not accounting for inflation. The average producer payment price for the first quarter of 1989 was $1.12/kg ($50.65/cwt).

A gradual price improvement began in April. A seasonal tightening of slaughter hog supplies across North America will result in a continued upward price trend during the remainder of the second quarter and prices should remain at higher levels through most of July through September, according to Ron Gietz, Alberta Agriculture market analyst.

Low prices are the result from still high hog inventories, he says. Although the Canadian swine herd is currently in a contraction phase, recent cullback decisions haven't affected hog output yet. Alberta leads all provinces in hog inventory deadlines compared to 1988 levels.

Committee meets with school board

By Joan Elmont

The West End Education Committee met with members of the County of Wetaskiwin school board and representatives of the Winfield area May 31.

The committee was formed to deal with the west end's perusal of the best possible options concerning the educational needs of the west end.

The West End Educational Committee will try to communicate all progress as it is made to the members of their respective communities as well as communicate any local input from the residents to the committee.

All committee members are in full support of the centralized grades 7 to 12 school at the Buck Lake site.

Drafts of the plans for the Alder Flats, Buck Lake and Winfield schools, prepared by PAA Architects, were presented and reviewed at the meeting. Bill McCarthy stated that distance learning is definitely something that must be considered in the future programming of the west end schools.

A meeting will be set up with the school buildings branch to state the case of the west end.

The West End Education Committee is also on the agenda to make a presentation to the Local Authorities Board June 20.

Tax increase sends shock waves

The recent revelation Stony Plain would pay 86 per cent more this year to the public school board must send shock waves through politicians and taxpayers alike.

The school board made the case the huge increase is all attributable to the split of the west end of the County of Parkland and the formation of Brazeau municipal district.

The loss of power and pipeline assessment (34 per cent less this year) has thrown the burden on the urban municipalities — hence the dramatic increase in town taxes. (Spruce Grove city council is irate over a similar increase.)

What seems to have happened is a major miscalculation by two government ministries. Neither Alberta Municipal Affairs nor Alberta Education predicted such a large requisition increase in their studies on the split. The school board can assure itself it acted in its ratepayers' interests by opposing the formation of a distinct school district. It argued in favor of a larger school district that could be run efficiently by Parkland.

Comment Stony Plain Reporter

Parkland county council, though it was mute on the formation of a new municipal district, can't be entirely faulted for not opposing it either. The new school district seems almost to have come as a hasty afterthought in the whole Brazeau municipal district controversy. What a big surprise.

Injured fawn found in bush

By Frank Ryan

A one-week-old fawn, fighting for its life was treated at the Rocky Rapids Veterinary Clinic recently.

It had been found wandering in the bush seven kilometres southwest of Violet Grove, about two miles from the North Saskatchewan River.

The carcass of a cow elk was nearby. Fred Kreiser, the local wildlife officer, was informed about the fawn and the carcass of the cow elk by Herb Scharr, an Amoco employee.

From the time the carcass was found until the time the fawn was retrieved, someone had returned to the scene and removed the front and hind quarters from the cow elk.

Kreiser believes the carcass was left as bait for a black bear.

The fawn, that had suffered some head wounds believed to be from wandering around aimlessly in the bush, had gone at least two days without liquid.

When the fawn was transported to the Rocky Rapids clinic, it was fed milk through a baby bottle. But that turned out to be a slow process.

So intravenous was hooked up to speed up the process.

The fawn was later transported to the University of Alberta for study purposes.

Fish and wildlife is asking for the public's assistance. The incident took place during the June 3-4 weekend.

During the entire time the fawn was being treated, a sparrow, who was also a patient, rested on the animal. It stayed during the entire recovery process.

$12 million allotted for school budget

By Sue Kenyon

The Twin Rivers school board passed a $12-million budget last week for the coming year.

But 10 per cent may have to be paid out immediately, leaving this district with a deficit and up to eight per cent increase in taxes.

Secretary treasurer Bill Weber said when Twin Rivers was formed the government gave the district townships 47, 48, 49, and 50, just west of Lodgepole. These townships had been in the Yellowhead district originally.

"The government just thought that if they gave it to us it would add to our tax base," Weber says.

Yellowhead then complained to the provincial government that until their tax base increases (which is what is expected) Twin Rivers should pay those taxes to them.

"The problem is that the government, in deciding how much we should pay to Yellowhead, examined the figures for 1988. Those figures showed we should be paying $550,000," Weber says.

He budgeted for $400,000.

"I don't think $550,000 is a realistic figure. Last year was when all the transitions were taking place, for example the MD of Braseau was being formed," Weber says.

The payments to Yellowhead will be phased out as its tax base increases and that is expected to occur in three years. For now though, it leaves Twin Rivers in a bad position.

"We have to pay the county of Parkland $215,000 due to the split from them, and if we end up having to pay Yellowhead $550,000, that is almost a million dollars. That is almost 10 per cent of the budget," Weber says.

As for the eight per cent increase in taxes, Weber says it is an estimate and he hopes it will be five to six per cent.

That eight per cent increase does not include the townships west of Lodgepole, that the dispute is over. Weber says once that area has been assessed the increase may fall.

Petitioners will be heard

Communities seeking annexation into the Braseau MD will be appearing before the Local Authorities Board today (June 20).

Among those seeking annexation are Alder Flats, Buck Lake, the south Moose Hill area, two owners from Ledoc, Moon Lake and the northern tip of the MD Clearwater.

The MD Braseau would be happy to see all accepted, according to manager John Eriksson.

"Those folks petitioned, and they deserve to be heard."

Eriksson said the annexation hearings could take as long as three weeks, but does not expect them to last more than two weeks.

The public hearing is being held at the Elks Hall in Drayton Valley from 10 a.m. till noon and again in the afternoon from 1:15 p.m. to 3:30 p.m.

Wet, cloudy, cool

Take out that umbrella because the Edmonton weather office is calling for a wet one this week.

Today there will be periods of rain, winds from the northwest with highs of 14 C.

Wednesday it will get a little warmer with highs of 18 C but it will be mostly cloudy with showers and an overnight low of 8 C.

Both Thursday and Friday will be mostly cloudy with scattered showers, highs of 20 C and overnight lows of 7 C.

The new superintendent of the Twin Rivers School Division has been chosen.

Dr. Alvin Anderson will replace Dr. George Bevan and will begin duties in September.

Anderson was chosen out of 38 applicants who applied for the position.

Anderson and his wife, Darlene will be coming from Vermilion River where Anderson was superintendent of schools in a school district of similar size to Twin Rivers.

The Andersons have two grown children. Their son Fraser attends Red Deer College and Kyla is in her final year at the University of Alberta.

Prior to working in Vermilion River, Anderson worked as an education consultant in Medicine Hat. He spent seven years with Alberta Education in Grande Prairie as a curriculum consultant.

Twin Rivers school board chairman Vi Helm says Anderson is looking forward to getting started in his new position.

Valerie Middlemiss's car suffered extensive damage.

Mother, son hurt in car crash

By Susan Mosicki

A 43-year-old local woman and her four-year-old son are listed in stable condition in the University of Alberta Hospital following a two-vehicle collision on Highway 22 last week (June 13).

Valerie and Mathew Middlemiss were proceeding south on Highway 22 when their vehicle struck another at the intersection of the Rocky Rapids/Cynthia (621) intersection.

The driver of the other vehicle, Garry Bullock, 21, of Drayton Valley, was westbound on Highway 621 before entering Highway 22. Bullock was charged with failure to proceed safely after stopping at a stop sign.

Middlemiss and her son suffered injuries and were taken to hospital in Drayton Valley prior to being transported to Edmonton.

Bullock was not injured. Drayton Valley RCMP are still investigating the incident.

Where should school board draw the line?

By Sue Kenyon

Twin Rivers school board deliberated for over an hour last week on altering school boundaries.

It was finally decided to take it to the people.

The board is interested in altering existing school boundaries to protect the Breton/Lindale areas. After boundaries are drawn up and policy is passed, it will no longer be possible for Breton and Lindale students to attend schools outside their boundary. That is, and still ride on Twin Rivers' buses.

Discussion of changes to existing boundaries included increasing Breton's boundary north and west. The board decided to abandon that idea but has tentatively changed the Lindale boundary so that it runs along Buck Lake Creek.

This Lindale boundary change is tentative and board members and administration will hold two meetings, one in Breton and one in Lindale to hear parents' concerns before making a final decision.

The decision to abandon the idea of increasing Breton's boundary came after the board felt the issue was too sensitive and although one school would benefit, another would be hurt.

"What we are talking about is a very precious issue. We are trying to preserve two fragile enrollment areas. One will benefit and one will be hurt (if the boundary change had passed). We are not increasing the student pools by anything we do here. This boundary change is just a question of who gets hurt," Dr. George Bevan, superintendent of Twin Rivers school board said.

"I think we should set a meeting with the parties affected by the boundary changes," Jim Reid, trustee suggested.

His suggestion received full support by chairman Vi Helm, secretary treasurer Bill Weber, superintendent George Bevan and the rest of trustees.

Reid then jokingly suggested the board hold the public meetings in July, during his vacation.

Meetings have been scheduled for June 26 in Lindale and June 29 in Breton.

The dotted line in area 3 is where the boundary used to exist. Area 1 is Drayton Valley, 2 is Breton, 3 Lindale/Breton and 4 is Lindale/Drayton Valley.

Sex education a must, says education minister

By Sue Kenyon

It is no longer the local school board's decision to approve sex education in their schools. The Ministry of Education has made it policy that it must be there.

In a letter to Vi Helm, chairman of the Twin Rivers school board, Jim Dinning, minister of education says that to ensure the "best possible education" the ministry wants students to be "knowledgeable, responsible, self-confident and committed to leading healthy, constructive lives."

"To achieve this goal most school boards are working hard to help parents and the community provide our young people with a frank, sensitive, and comprehensive education about human sexuality," Dinning says in his letter.

Along with this new policy, six other procedures have been implemented.

All schools shall provide the program to students from grades 4 through 9. And in at least one high school course, required by all students, the course be offered during regular school hours; that human sexuality courses may be offered through different instructional structures such as family life or religion; that parents shall be advised prior to the start of the course and be advised they have the right to exempt their child from the course; that parent information nights be set up and that schools provide alternative courses for those students exempt from the course by parent approval.

Superintendent Dr. George

Bevan of the Twin Rivers school division, said the new policy will only affect Breton elementary where there is no sex education course offered. All other schools under Twin Rivers school board in the area have courses already implemented.

Breton elementary will have to implement the course by this coming September to keep within the ministry's guidelines.

Dorman elects trial by jury

Andrew J. Dorman, former executive director of the Beehive Workshop appeared in Drayton Valley Provincial Court last Thursday and elected to be tried by a judge and jury in Court of Queen's Bench.

Dorman is charged with seven counts of theft under $1,000, five counts of uttering forged documents, five counts of theft over $1,000, and two counts of fraud-public market.

A preliminary inquiry has been set for Oct. 16 to 20 in Drayton Valley.

Highway tough on vehicles

By Frank Ryan

Windshields are breaking and headlights popping.

That's the reaction from one Tomahawk area resident about the gravel conditions on Highway 624.

"It's kind of a mess," says Frank Gilbert.

Just last month Gilbert, armed with two 210-name petitions, went to a county of Parkland meeting to protest the condition of highways 624 and 759.

"They told me they weren't going to gravel," Gilbert says in reference to Highway 624.

But, Gilbert says that's exactly what was happening last week.

According to county spokesman John Twack, the gravel is only a temporary situation. He says plans call for an oil surface road.

When contacted by The Western Review last Wednesday about several new gravel sections along Highway 624, Twack said he didn't realize the work had already started.

It was his opinion that trucks were hauling gravel across the highway from a pit down by the river.

After seeing what the county was doing on Highway 624 last week Gilbert remarked, "I don't know what they are doing."

Gilbert has equal concerns about Highway 759.

He says 30 semi-trailer trucks are hauling peat moss on the highway seven days a week. But because it's so rough from Seba Beach down through the Berrymoor bridge to Highway 39, they've had to find an alternate route.

When Gilbert met with the county, he asked them to stabilize the road surface. He wanted to know what happened to the base coat.

This is the second straight year Tomahawk area residents have signed a petition in an attempt to get some improvements on the highway.

Rodeo spirits remained high despite weather

The weatherman dealt the Drayton Valley Lions club another blow on their Evergreen rodeo weekend.

Rain, the same kind of wet stuff that forced cancellation of most of the '88 show, saw the Lions cancel the heavy horse pull.

The parade went ahead as scheduled, although the number of entries was down due to the unsettled weather conditions.

Even the first night of the pony chuckwagons and chariot races had to be cancelled due to track conditions.

But in the end, the weather was great for the final day of the rodeo and wagons.

Despite the rain, there were some signs during the four-day event that indicated interest in the June classic may be on the way back. Just when it seemed that the weatherman was going to win out.

Attendance at the hot dog lunch at the Dodson Plaza and the pancake breakfast at the Derrick Mall were well attended. And more importantly, the atmosphere amongst the participants was excellent.

A 'tip of the hat' to those who organized the two events. Keep it up.

The people who rode in the parade are also to be commended. Spirits were high despite the rain.

And, once again, local and area residents showed their support by lining the parade route.

We can only hope for some nice weather in 1990.

Don't be surprised if there's more board vacancies

There's been some strange happenings in town council chambers lately.

There was a time when such things as environment issues and the establishment of an FCSS program were rarely discussed.

But, we've seen both of these on recent council agendas.

Let's hope it's a sign of things to come, and has nothing to do with the upcoming municipal election.

The town has been experiencing its share of problems in filling positions on the tourist action plan committee and recreation board.

Frankly Speaking

By Frank Ryan

Now, they've decided to set up a four-member board that will conduct interviews with everyone who volunteers their time to sit on a town-related committee.

Volunteers, who give of their time to do something for their community, will have to discuss their sincerity with the mayor, two councillors and the town manager.

Council shouldn't be too surprised if they find more vacancies on their boards.

This latest move just seems like a lot of unnecessary red tape.

New school a concern

An open letter to the Wetaskiwin board of education:

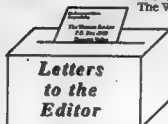

Re: schools in Alder Flats/Buck Lake areas.

I note you have advised a group of residents from our area that you support another attempt to get approval and funding from the provincial government to build a 'new' centralized high school at Buck Lake similar to the previous request to build one at Pendry.

No one would argue against providing better accommodations for the teachers and students from Winfield west who are using schools that have seen from 25 to 45 years of service with almost no major renovations. However, many who supported the request for immediate modernization of our schools which was delivered to you by way of a petition, have concerns about the 'new school' approach.

The government has a program by which the province pays for 80 per cent of the cost of modernization of an existing school building. They will loan the other 20 per cent to the county on reasonable terms. This program has been available for many years (since our high school students were in kindergarten) and has been used to modernize all of the older schools in the county east of Winfield. Money that could have been used for Alder Flats, Buck Lake and Winfield has gone unused in recent years.

The government has a policy of building new schools only when it is proven there is not enough classroom space for the number of students in the system. We all know our problem is not lack of space but rather the quality and location of space. The government assumes the restoration program will be used where quality is a problem and they have told many school boards (particularly in large cities) they cannot spend millions on a new school when a good older school building lies under-occupied just a few miles away.

The request to build a 'new' school at Pendry met a variety of obstacles at the provincial level when it had almost unanimous support from our communities and your board. How will changing to a less central location make the chances of approval any better this time?

Many of the 300 people who asked you to modernize our schools and maintain our (Cont'd on page 6)

Moving post office 'waste of money'

Dear Editor,

I was disappointed to see such a one-sided article in The Review concerning the recent meeting between officials of Canada Post Corporation and the Town of Drayton Valley (Council wants post office moved, May 30).

Had the reporter contacted Canada Post for comment a very different picture might have emerged. It is also regrettable that personalities were drawn into the issue, instead of sticking to the question at hand.

The post office in Drayton Valley is one of the best equipped in rural Alberta. It is spacious, and has new counters and new mail handling equipment. A walk-in vault is installed in the building for the protection of stamps and other postal values after hours. It would literally cost hundreds of thousands of dollars to replace this facility.

Like any other business, Canada Post is not required to provide parking. Nevertheless the present post office has four public parking stalls. Additionally, there are two spaces on the street in front of the building, and a large public parking lot across the street. This is much better than many other businesses in Drayton Valley. Many have no customer parking whatsoever, and rely exclusively on on-street parking.

Moving such an expensive facility for no benefit would be just a plain waste of money and would not do anything to improve service to the residents of Drayton Valley.

Agriculturist clarifies resignation

Dear Editor,

I am writing in response to an article that appeared in the May 30 issue of The Western Review dealing with my resignation.

It seems to me the newsworthiness of the story lies in the fact I am resigning, not in what I plan to do in my personal life after resignation.

What I decide to do in the next year is largely dependent on the decisions of others. Therefore, at this point I have no definite plans and am entertaining several possibilities. These possibilities include a change in employment, return to school or travel. There is little likelihood I can do all three as your story suggests.

I do not consider my resignation a prelude to the fulfilment of a "lifetime of wanderlust dreams." Nor do I consider my lifestyle "carefree." Rather, my departure from Alberta Agriculture is common and quite ordinary. I do not anticipate a future quite as glamorous or sensational as the article suggests.

I am pleased I chose Drayton Valley as my place of employment and my home. My leaving is entirely for personal reasons. I prefer to be remembered for my contribution to agriculture in the Drayton Valley district, rather than for my as yet uncertain and personal future.

My resignation date is July 20, not June 14 and I am employed by Alberta Agriculture, not the MD of Brazeau.

school attendance areas by signing the petition which was delivered to you, did not intend that you request a 'new' school. They would appreciate getting one but realize our requests must be realistic and we must make our desires coincide with what is available.

Similarly, we would welcome the students from the Winfield school attendance area to the Alder Flats/Buck Lake schools but we would like that decision to be made by the people from Winfield. They do not need to be coerced to send their students to make our 'new' school proposal viable. Both the tax base and the number of students are more than enough to justify first class schools from kindergarten to Grade 12 in the Alder Flats/Buck Lake areas so long as our school board is capable of administering the resources available to them.

At some point in time the provincial government may decide all school boards who needed the restoration program have used it and this program will be discontinued. We will then be in a position of funding the entire restoration with local tax dollars. By your indecision our children will not enjoy the facilities other Albertans take for granted.

We understand you are delaying your decision on our schools pending the results of an application to annex our area to the Twin Rivers school division and MD of Braseau. Our request to you stated we want the school attendance areas for Alder Flats and Buck Lake to remain as it is, even if a part of the area is annexed. This can be done by a tuition agreement similar to the one you use for high school students from the east party of the county who attend Wetaskiwin composite high school. This petition was also addressed to Twin Rivers school board.

In conclusion I ask that you immediately place an application with the proper authorities to modernize our schools while the opportunity is still available. It will take several months for plans to be drawn and tenders awarded.

If government policy changes on 'new' schools the renovations can be altered before work starts. The excuse that the boundary issue is not settled should not affect the administration of the affairs of our children. They will be here and will need an education regardless of where the office of the superintendent is located.

The boundary issue had no influence on your decision to spend millions of tax dollars (without grants) on a new administration building when 10 to 20 per cent of your area was under consideration for annexation into a new municipality. As our elected leaders it is your responsibility to define what our realistic options are and get on with managing the affairs of our school system.

You might be surprised to find a responsible, sincere approach more acceptable to us than the threat of 'no schools in your community unless you stay in the county.'

Making it happen...new civic centre officially opens

By Sue Kenyon

The grand opening of the civic centre last Saturday was a huge success with congratulations from local dignitaries.

"I can remember Drayton Valley with no paved roads, no mills, no pavement anywhere. Tourists would drive here just to see where Drayton Valley was but they wouldn't stay or come back. Things are really advancing," MLA Tom Thurber said. Thurber congratulated town council for their innovation and ability to make such a facility out of limited resources.

"I am sure when Mayor Bob said, 'make it happen,' he meant make it happen with as little money as possible. I congratulate town council but also all the staff who worked hard to make this happen," Thurber said.

Former MLA Shirley Cripps also said a few words. Remembering Drayton Valley in a financial burden, she commended those who were responsible for getting things done that were needed.

Mayor Bob Mayhew cuts the ribbon to officially open the Drayton Valley Civic Centre last week.

"I look back to 1979-1980 when the oil industry was suffering. Drayton Valley suffered right along with it. I then considered how they would make ends meet," Cripps said.

She said at that time there were many needs, but no way of financing these needs.

"We needed a new hospital, new paved streets, new water and sewer facilities, a swimming pool; all these needs had to be met by a town everyone was saying was broke. You have to give the town credit for all they've accomplished," she said.

She said the new civic centre projected the image of Drayton Valley as it is today.

"This building is modern, spacious, comfortable, and proud. Drayton Valley is proud and confident," she said.

Mayhew said $600,000 was saved by turning the old sports arena into the new civic centre.

"It is the first phase of the the revitalization of the downtown core. The appearance both inside and out projects confidence," he said.

Howard Olsen was master of ceremonies during the opening, RCMP members were on hand in their red serge.

"It is a tremendous facility. It is very economical and will meet the needs of the community for many years to come. Seeing as I am leaving in 10 days, I am proud to be a resident of this community," Corp. Tim Vatamaniuk said.

After the formal opening, speeches and ribbon cutting, guests were treated to a buffet lunch and entertainment.

Time for making resolutions

By Pastor Glen Lonie
DV Alliance Church

At our New Year's dinner this year I overheard someone saying, "I'd better have a second helping of turkey today, because tomorrow my diet begins."

The new year is a time for making resolutions and setting goals. Like a blank canvas, the year ahead beckons us to paint a masterpiece. We know from the experiences of last year that change will be necessary. So we take inventory, clarify our goals and set out measurable objectives.

Goalsetting is work. It is the work we do to establish a target or direction for activity. It is so easy to operate under the tyranny of the urgent; to come to the end of another year and think: "Have I really accomplished anything. I've used up a lot of energy and done a lot of things but have I accomplished anything worthwhile?"

Meaningful goals established in advance keep us from spinning circles or ending in a cul-de-sac.

Sometimes we delude ourselves by thinking that it is best to drift. We live one day at a time, go with the flow, and see where we end up. This pattern of living is somewhat like an artist who paints with his eyes closed. How much better to live with purpose and confidence. This is only possible when we have clear goals.

Why not do some goalsetting today? And while you're at it, make sure those goals are far-reaching. Jesus tells of one man who set a goal to retire early with prosperity but gave no consideration to his accountability before God. God called that man a fool. (Luke 12:14-21). We must be careful that our goals reflect farsighted planning. May your 1989 be a masterpiece!

Rural electrification annual meeting Feb. 2

Members of the Drayton Valley Rural Electrification Association are looking at a possible increase.

That will be one of the major issues discussed at the association's annual meeting on Feb. 2 at 7:30 p.m. in the Rocky Rapids hall.

President William Dusterhoft would like to see the hall full for this very important meeting.

The membership will be asked to look at the increased power demand and to see how it will affect their bill.

Another issue the 462 members will have to consider is a request from the Alberta Federation to collect dues from the members. The Alberta body also want the local REA to join their ranks.

At the present time about 60 REAs belong to the provincial body while another 250, similar to the local group, operate independently.

The past turnout the REA ever had was several years ago when the members got a $100 rebate. Dusterhoft is hoping the members will come out next month, due to the possibility of a rate increase.

Committee head would like to see government run airport

By Sue Kenyon
Drayton Valley's airport had a deficit last year of $23,900, and Howard Olsen, chairman of the transportation committee feels it should be handed over to the government.

"We are making no income out of the airport and as long as it is run by the town and MD it will be run at a deficit at the cost of the taxpayers' money," Olsen said.

Beside selling fuel, the airport has no way of drawing income. Olsen says there is a tie-down fee for private planes of $125 a year but no one pays it.

"We've had lawsuits over it, all for a mere $125."

Olsen says there was a government grant received to build a terminal building, which the airport needs badly, but it wasn't enough.

"Four years ago we received a grant of $20,000; you can't build anything for $20,000," he said.

Architects who were

Howard Olsen

involved in planning the new town office are examining the present terminal building to see if renovations could be made.

"The terminal building is in a real sad state of affairs. It was an old school built for the flying club and it is in really bad shape," he said.

Architects will decide whether it is worth renovating the building.

"I would personally like to see the whole thing handed over to Alberta Transportation. They run all the other airports; why the MD and town run this one I don't know," he said.

There is no possibility the airport will close in Olsen's eyes.

"Even if the government isn't interested in taking it over, we will continue running it, even at a deficit."

Consortium picking up pieces

By Susan Mosciaki

Employees of the Pembina Educational Consortium are now picking up the pieces in the aftermath of the recent explosion in the garage attached to their building.

More than 30 people were in the building at the time of the blast, but all escaped without serious injury.

The catastrophe was a result of a torch flame igniting vapors from sour water residue in a tank truck parked in one of the garage bays.

The consortium is now without adequate space to accommodate students.

"It's just a minor inconvenience," said Joe MacLellan, executive director of the consortium. "We could have been going to 20 funerals this week."

"We hope that this terrifying experience — the narrow escape for so many students and workers — will generate some good. If it causes people to work in a safe manner and avoid these events, it (the explosion) will have produced some good."

MacLellan said electrical, water, and gas service has been reconnected, and the consortium is able to use the office area and two small classrooms.

However, there isn't enough space at the consortium to meet necessary requirements. Extra space has been obtained at Frank Maddock high.

"Any other demands for space will have to be over," MacLellan says.

arranged outside of the schools after the end of June because of school closure (summer holidays)," said MacLellan.

Meanwhile, renovations at the consortium's new quarters in the old town office are well underway.

The $127,000-renovation project has been scheduled to be complete Aug. 25.

"We're looking forward to our new home more than ever," MacLellan says.

The many faces of a rodeo clown ...

from plain and simple ...

to full war paint.

'Nobody can outrun a bull, you have to out-guess them'

By Susan Mosicki

One man at every rodeo who is often underestimated and overlooked is the rodeo clown/bullfighter.

Cowboys(girls) seem to get most of the glory, but they rely on a single man to help them out of potentially deadly situations.

Cal Block, 26, of Rosalind, is one such man.

There are not too many clown/bullfighters left, he says. "I'm one of the exceptions." He says most now specialize in one or the other.

"As a bullfighter, I have two jobs. I have to help the bull buck to the best of his ability, and after the first eight seconds, my job is to protect the cowboy."

"Nobody can outrun a bull," he says. "You have to basically out-guess them and out-manoeuvre them."

With his dual position as a clown, he must also entertain the crowd with jokes and comical antics.

Cal says he started bullfighting six years ago because he has been in rodeos all his life. "It gets in your blood."

He learned through trial and error, and helping other bullfighters. "You learn every day," he emphasizes.

Over the past six years, Cal has had several injuries, but none of them serious. "I've had pulled muscles, I've been run over and bunted, but I've never had any broken bones."

"Before the rodeo, I get nervous and butterflies," he admits. "But when I'm out there, I don't have time to really get scared."

"I'm actually quite a wimp when it comes to pain," he laughs. "I never try to put myself in the position of being hurt."

But watching Cal perform in front of a disgruntled bull, everyone knows he wouldn't hesitate to do just that to save a cowboy in distress.

That is of utmost importance to the cowboys. "They're going out there putting their trust in me."

"I feel confident in rodeo circles that I have the trust of the cowboys."

And that he does. "Cal is an underrated bullfighter," says Rimbey cowboy Kelly Giesbrecht. "He does his job and doesn't get a lot of credit."

Cal doesn't hesitate to give credit where credit is due. "If I get in trouble out there, a lot of the cowboys will jump in to help me. It's like a big family."

Bullfighting is a short-term profession according to Cal. "As long as I'm healthy and in good physical shape, I'll keep doing it, but I would say within four years I'll probably retire. When you get older, your chances of getting seriously hurt increase."

For now though, Cal says, "I like the thrill and excitement, and I get the self-satisfaction of knowing I performed well."

The finished product.

The battle against the bull.

Cal jumps in without hesitation to help the bull buck for the cowboy. The more the bull bucks, the better score the cowboy will get.

Martial Arts Club hands out awards

By Paul Cudla

The Drayton Valley Martial Arts Club ended the 1988-89 season with a kick, handing out year-end awards and promotions.

Present at the ceremonies and receiving awards were: Debbie Ellard, best forms; Norton Tucker, best overall work ethic; Linda Nero, assisting instructor; and Dan Nero, best fighter.

Dan Lyver, head instructor and black belt, was generally pleased with the performance of all 20 members of the club this year.

"We've won quite a few trophies through the year. Everybody has won first, second and third place trophies. We've put in a good show," Lyver said.

Lyver added his club was at a slight disadvantage in competitions as it practices

Loggers fest this weekend

The 10th annual edition of the Easyford Loggers Festival will take on a new look this Saturday.

In conjunction with the day's activities, Husqvarna will conduct a skill contest. One name will be selected from the field of competitors and entered in a draw for a trip to Sweden.

There's only room in the competition for 15. Entries are being taken at Frank's Saw Service in Drayton Valley or at the Easyford grounds on Saturday.

All 15 competitors will use the same chainsaw. Entrants must be 18 years of age or older and safety equipment that will be supplied, is required.

The skill contest will see each competitor make a number of specified cuts from a 12-inch log. They will be competing against each other and the clock.

Events at the Loggers Festival get underway at 11 a.m. on the grounds adjacent to the hall.

The grounds are located four miles north of Drayton Valley on Highway 22, seven miles west on the Cynthia Highway and then one mile north. Watch for signs.

Despite this, the Drayton Valley club managed to win the Western Canadian Martial Arts Championships held in Red Deer in May.

This was Lyver's first year as head instructor, and his fifth year with the club.

The club will take the summer off, and will begin competition in October at a tournament to be held in Calgary.

The Drayton Valley Martial Arts Club displays some of the awards they fought hard to win. The club will be back in action next October at a competition in Calgary.

IDA Oilers win tourney

The Drayton Valley Beaver AA IDA Oilers batted their way to victory at the recent Aurora baseball tournament in Edmonton.

The Oilers (ages 11 and 12) won in the B event, losing only one game against the Morinville team and winning two games against Leduc and Stony Plain.

Strong pitching was a major contributing factor in the event, with Nathan Bartlett allowing only four runs in six innings, and Chris Davis allowing only one in the same number of innings.

Coaches need recognition

Local coaches should be properly recognized.

Councillor Alex Salfi told a recent council meeting local coaches should be honored.

Salfi's comments came up during a discussion on the Year of the Coach, a national program.

A report from the recreation board indicated very little interest in the program.

As a result, recreation chairman Tom McGee suggested the program be dropped.

Miner learns freestyle quickly

By Paul Cudla

It would be safe to say that Drayton Valley native April Miner is a fast learner.

Miner, 16, a Grade 10 student at Frank Maddock high school, competed in freestyle skiing for the first time this year. She did well for her first year in competition; so well in fact, that she captured the overall Alberta Freestyle juvenile ladies' division.

"I started freestyle at 15 which might be kind of late. I've basically caught up to their (other freestyle competitors) abilities. I've put a lot of work into it this year to try and catch up," Miner said, adding she has been skiing recreationally since she was seven.

Miner competes in all three freestyle skiing events which include moguls, ballet and aerials. She admits though, to enjoying ballet the most.

"I was quite flabbergasted when I saw all the things you could do on skis in ballet.

"Ballet is where I want to concentrate most of my work."

One of Miner's 1988-89 highlights came in a ballet competition held at Lake Eden in February where she captured first place in all three ballet events.

Miner was introduced to the aerial aspect of freestyle in a hurried fashion before her very first competition at the Alberta Winter Games in Red Deer.

"I took a crash course on the hill and learned in 10 minutes. And then I knew aerial."

For the summer, Miner plans to stay active in skiing by attending two camps. One will be at Mt. Blackcombe in B.C., and the other will take place at Mt. Hood in Oregon.

"I'm going to be training with the Canadian and U.S. national teams at the two summer camps. I'm really excited about it, and I can't wait to get started."

The value of working with other skiers Miner says, is in picking up tips and pointers from more experienced freestylers.

"We help each other out. I would have never guessed that skiers who are competing against each other would help each other. But we're all freestylers."

Freestyle skiing was one of the 1988 Winter Olympic demonstration sports, and moguls has now been accepted as an accredited event.

Miner calls competing in the Olympics "one of my goals."

For now though, she is enthusiastically looking forward to the upcoming freestyle year in which she will move up a class to the junior, and experience increased competitiveness.

At times this year, Miner found herself competing against only two or three other skiers in events. By moving up into a larger division this occurrence will most likely not be repeated.

Miner though, continues to be an ambassador for her sport.

"I'd like to see more people get involved in freestyle. I've been bugging people from Drayton Valley to get involved but no one has been interested enough.

"I can't wait 'til it snows."

April Miner, 16, won juvenile freestyle ladies' division

Shimbashi victorious at men's golf tourney

Blair Shimbashi returned home on the weekend to win the Drayton Valley men's open golf championship.

Shimbashi, who worked at the course last summer, led the field with rounds of 76 on Saturday and 73 Sunday for a 36-hole score of 149.

It was the first men's open title for Shimbashi who now lives in Edmonton.

Brian Babcock, who also lives in Edmonton, was a distant second, 10 strokes off the pace.

Roger Ganake of Drayton Valley needed an extra hole to get by club mate Jerry Wilkes in the first event.

Ganake had a little bad luck on the 18th hole, when he lost his ball, forfeiting the hole to Wilkes and tying the match.

Paul Simard of Edmonton defeated Grant McGinn in the final of the second event.

Keith Jamieson of Drayton Valley won the third flight after defeating Louis Balen.

Wade Thomas won the fourth flight over Hack Hamdon.

Two other local golfers won the fifth and sixth flights. Eric Erickson defeated Butch Wilkes in the fifth and Alan Dick got by Dale Joly in the sixth.

Dale Swandund of Penitence, B.C. and formerly of Drayton Valley, notched a hole-in-one on the eighth hole.

Nobody cashed in on the $5,000 prize for a hole-in-one on the 17th hole.

The ladies take over the course this Saturday for their annual tourney.

Soccer squad earns split

Drayton Valley's 12-and-under soccer squad turned in an impressive performance on the weekend.

They earned a split in two games during a five-team tourney.

Murray Litke scored three goals and Greg Hewlett recorded the shutout as the hosts blanked Edison 5-0.

In their second outing, the local side came out on the short end of a 3-2 loss to Hinton.

Hinton proved to be the class of the tournament as they blanked Spruce Grove 8-0.

Other games saw Whitecourt down Spruce Grove 6-1 and blank Edison 5-0.

This weekend the Drayton Valley soccer is off to Jasper and the provincial qualification tournament.

Monsour considering council

Grant Monsour is giving some serious thought about running for town council in the October municipal elections.

Monsour, who is president of the chamber and is employed by Esso Chemicals in Drayton Valley, says he will likely make a decision in September.

Monsour lost out by a mere seven votes to Tom Thurber

Lawyers will now decide future of business's hoarding structure

A town council decision to have a temporary hoarding at Valley Concrete removed has ended up in the lawyer's hands.

Council wanted the structure removed by June 18. And, if the town was forced to remove the hoarding, which consisted of plywood around a hopper, the cost would be recovered through taxes.

However, town manager Manny Deol says the matter is now in the hands of the lawyers.

Town council heard at its last meeting a temporary building permit had been issued to Valley Concrete for six months which included an expiry date of May 31.

The town sent a letter to Valley Concrete on May 12 advising them of the expiry date.

It wasn't until June 6 the town got a reply, which included a request for an extension of the permit until July. Council was told the Drayton Valley business asked to leave the structure in place until then as they were planning to move their operation.

After a lengthy and often heated debate on the issue, council moved to give Valley Concrete until June 18 to remove the structure.

The next move is up to the lawyers for the respective parties.

Impaired driving charge draws heavy fine

Walter McAmmond, 45, of Warburg, will have to pay $2,000, or in default will spend six months in jail after pleading guilty to driving over .08 last week.

McAmmond had previous related offences, and in addition to the fine/sentence received a driving prohibition for three years.

Twin River school board meetings will not be held through the summer break, however, they will meet once in July.

Circus spoke, people listened

The sports centre was packed for two sold-out performances of the Shrine circus when it rolled into town last Thursday.

The circus had everything from animal acts, clowns, aerial acts — not to mention popcorn, balloons and memorabilia.

The show also offered something special you wouldn't get in Edmonton or Calgary. Many children before the show and during intermission enjoyed their first ride on an elephant.

It has also been reported to The Western Review that Mayor Bob Mayhew made a memorable entrance at the 2 p.m. show, as he entered the arena on top of an elephant.

The tiger act was among the favorites in the first hour.

Tiger trainer Brunon Blasak coordinated eight tigers in one ring, jumping through fire hoops and sitting up on chairs.

The clown with the unpredictable car was also a favorite.

In the second act, many enjoyed the motorcycles' globe of death.

It was the 24th straight week on the road for the circus performers, who are travelling throughout North America.

Boundaries are okayed

At the MD council meeting last week it was announced the Battle River Tourist Association unanimously agreed to have all MD boundaries included in the association.

The boundary issue is still being investigated by the Battle River Tourist Association.

Cool cat travels North America training tigers

By Sue Kenyon
Not too many people can claim that by 24 they've travelled to every corner of North America and trained tigers along the way.

But Brunon Blazak can claim just that. He's a tiger trainer and many saw him in the ring with eight tigers during the Shrine Circus's visit to Drayton Valley last week.

Blazak lives in Florida and is currently on a North American tour. As a young married man, his wife understands circus life perhaps better than most people. She is the aerial acrobat.

"I think it would be pretty hard to marry out side the circus. Most people just wouldn't understand the life," Blazak says.

Blazak began training tigers when he was 16. His mother and father influenced him more than any to be part of their life with the circus.

While Blazak is in the ring with the beasts, mom is close by outside the cage with a big stick, watching and making sure nothing happens.

There have been some close calls.

"That is from one of their claws," Blazak says, holding up his hand, producing a large scar.

He says he has also been charged by them.

"You just pick up a chair and if they are getting really mean, just throw it at them. It's difficult to say what you do, you just do it when it occurs."

Blazak works with tigers and prefers them over lions.

"Lions can be very cocky. Tigers will shy away, but lions will give it right back."

The life span of tigers is anywhere between 20 to 30 years of age. The oldest Blazak works with is 15.

"We usually retire them at 20 and give them to a zoo."

As for the future, Blazak intends to continue doing just as he always has: travel from town to town, training tigers.

Registration limit to be reset

The Pembina Educational Consortium will set new registration statistics this year.

Joe MacLellan, consortium executive director, expects registrations to top the 2,500 mark by the end of June.

It will be the best-ever standard set by the consortium.

And, MacLellan is a firm believer that once the consortium relocates in the old town office, registrations will continue to soar.

Blazak gets an affectionate hug by potentially dangerous kitty.

Institute rounds up dangerous products

By Sue Kenyon

You no longer have to wonder how to get rid of that paint thinner you don't want.

Take it to the toxic drop-off June 21 at the MD of Brazeau yard between 9 a.m. and 6 p.m.

Donn Baker, director of Environment Montis for the Pembina Institute says that the toxic round-up is concerned with household items and not items from industry.

The items will be categorized at the drop-off and transported out of Drayton Valley the same night. They will be eventually taken to Swan Hills where they will be treated.

"In the interim they will be held in Niisku," Baker said.

Items dropped off after 6 p.m. will be held in the MD yard overnight and transported out the following day.

"That is one of the reasons why we chose that yard, it has a fence around it and it will be locked up. Products will be categorized so flammables will not be kept with explosives," she said.

The main concern with disposing of these products the right way is to cut down on household poisonings, Baker said.

If you aren't certain which items should be simply thrown out or taken to the drop-off, take them anyway. Baker says there will be a garbage bin for those items not needing treatment.

"It's better to bring it down rather than taking a chance on throwing it away," she says.

NOTICE TO PARENTS OF STUDENTS RESIDENT IN THAT PORTION OF TWIN RIVERS SCHOOL DIVISION NO. 65 LYING EAST OF THE NORTH SASKATCHEWAN RIVER.

The Board of Education of Twin Rivers School Division No. 65, on January 1, 1988, took over the administration of the schools in Lindale and Breton, formerly part of the County of Ladue.

It is the policy of the Board to maintain and enhance the educational programs and facilities of those schools. In view of this, it is essential that the student enrollment of the schools be maintained.

The County of Ladue, prior to the transfer of the above schools to the Twin Rivers School Division, also recognized the need to preserve the enrollments of the schools. That jurisdiction had a long standing policy of the retention of school attendance areas. Unfortunately that policy was relaxed when the establishment of the Twin Rivers School Division was about to take place.

The Board of Education of Twin Rivers School Division is now faced with the problem of regaining the enrollments that had existed in the Lindale and Breton schools prior to the relaxation of the Ladue County policy.

Therefore, it is the intention of the Board to reinstitute full support of a policy that will direct pupils within certain areas to attend specific schools. This policy will be basically the same as the one formerly followed by the County of Ladue.

To this end, a notice of motion was placed before the Board of Education of the Twin Rivers School Division No. 65 at its meeting held June 14, 1989 as follows:

That the Board of Education agrees with the retention of School Attendance Areas and the following School Attendance Policy be approved:

SCHOOL ATTENDANCE AREA POLICY

Whereas there is a concern regarding the loss of pupil enrollment in the Lindale and Breton Schools, the Board enacts the following policy:

1. That the following School Attendance Areas be established:

Attendance Area 1 - Drayton Valley Schools - ECS-Grade 12-

All Twin Rivers School Division lying west of the following line:

Buck Lake Creek from its intersection with the Division boundary (Sec. 21, Twp. 47, Rge. 6, WSM) northerly to Highway 39, thence westerly along Highway 39 to the middle of Section 9, Twp. 48, Rge. 6, WSM, thence northerly along the center line of Sections 9, 16, 21, 28, and 33 in Township 49, Range 6, WSM, thence northerly along the center line of sections 4, 9, and 16, Township 50, Range 6, WSM to the North Saskatchewan River, thence along the downstream right bank of the said river to the north boundary of the School Division.

Attendance Area 2 - Breton Schools - ECS to Grade 12-

That portion of the Twin Rivers School Division lying generally west and south of the following line:

Buck Lake Creek from its entrance into the Division, northerly to Highway 39, thence easterly along Highway 39 to the west boundary of Township 49, Range 5, WSM thence southerly along the said boundary to the northern boundary of Section 19, Twp. 48, Rge. 5, WSM, thence easterly along the north boundaries of Sections 19, 20, 21, 22, 23 and 24 of Twp. 48, Rge. 5, WSM, thence northerly along the west boundaries of Section 30, and the south half of Section 31, Twp. 48, Rge. 4, WSM to Highway 39, thence easterly along the said Highway one mile, thence northerly along the west boundary of the N 1/2 of Sec. 32, Twp. 48, Rge. 4, WSM, and Sections 5 and 8, Twp. 49, Rge. 4, WSM, thence easterly along the north boundary of said section 8 to the boundary of the School Division.

Attendance Area 3 - Lindale - ECS-Grade 9 - Breton - Grades 10 to 12

That area of the School Division lying within the following boundaries:

Tricky teacher fertilizes boss's office

When teacher Murray Arnold takes his leave from Frank Maddock high this year to go to Japan, he will be remembered — at least by principal Al Day.

It is not too many teachers who along with the students, pile horse manure on their boss's desk and then plant a horse in the man's office.

Last week, Arnold says his English 33 class was upset Breton school got Farmer's Day off and they didn't.

"I have nothing to do with those decisions, take it up with the principal," Arnold told his class.

"You're not farmers," was principal Day's response when questioned by the students.

Just to prove they could in fact be farmers, especially if it meant a day off, the following morning, Day was faced with 21 bags of horse manure sitting on his desk.

Taking the joke in good stride, Day sent a memo stating he wasn't sure where the horse was, but that it had to be somewhere as there was plenty of evidence facing him.

The class, along with, of course, none other than Arnold, smuggled in a horse the following morning at 8

"You should have seen his face; we were all in his office, all of us, including the horse."

While Arnold, along with students Barb Cameron and Frank Nash, stood in the office with the great beast, student Rhonda Kennedy got the entire episode on film.

Of course, then Arnold relayed the story to The Review, just to make sure everyone now knows that Frank Maddock students can be farmers too.

A little advice for Mr. Day — give them Farmer's Day off next year?

Evergreen/Eldorado close early

There will be no school for Eldorado or Evergreen students June 28 and 29.

Eldorado school will be using those two days as "reorganization days" and Evergreen students will get the time off, simply because Eldorado students will be out.

"It is really an issue of fairness," Dr. George Bevan, superintendent of the Twin Rivers school board told trustees.

"The last day of classes for Breton and Lindale is June 28 and if Evergreen students were not excused from school that day, they would be the only students in the district receiving instruction.

Due to the new early childhood education course planned for Eldorado, some classrooms have to be moved around and the school will need at least two days to do this.

"Four Grade 1 classrooms, one Grade 2 classroom, five Grade 3 classrooms and one special needs classroom will have to be relocated and two early childhood education classes set up to be ready for the fall," Howard Pearson, principal of the school, said in a letter to Bevan.

Eldorado school also plans to hire four high school students to help with the reorganization and pay them out of the school's milk fund money.

School trustee Colleen Davie is against the school using their milk fund money for this purpose.

"I think we should help them with this. Let them spend their money on purchasing new library books or something," she said.

Bevan will take up the issue with Pearson.

Ron Manwaring made a citizen's arrest on the RCMP tournament trophy.

RCMP tournament arresting experience

By Paul Cudla
The seventh annual RCMP golf tournament held at the Drayton Valley golf course last Wednesday was an arresting affair.

But you didn't need handcuffs and a badge to participate.

"It is a community-oriented event. We receive sponsorships from the business community, and participation from community members," Const. Al Kaufmann who helped organize the tournament said.

A contingent of 115 golfers hit the links in what started out to be unfavorable conditions, but turned into ideal golfing weather.

"The tournament went extremely well. Mother nature co-operated and the course was in excellent condition."

"We had very favorable comments about the course from out-of-town golfers," Kaufmann said.

Ron Manwaring made a citizen's arrest on the championship flight trophy by shooting an impressive 18-hole round of 74. Chris Kelepouris was runner-up with a 76.

Kaufmann was pleased with the turnout of golfers which included 12 RCMP officers from other detachments.

The only area of concern Kaufmann had about participation was the fact the tournament only drew one lady golfer.

"We're hoping in future years the ladies will come out and golf. We'd like to have a ladies' championship trophy," Kaufmann said.

Sereidiak proudly displays the W.L. Boddy Pharmacy of the Year award.

Breton pharmacy receives award

Breton IDA Pharmacy was recently chosen to receive the prestigious 1988-89 W.L. Boddy Pharmacy of the Year award.

The award is presented annually to an Alberta pharmacy demonstrating exemplary professional standards in the practice of pharmacy.

The presentation was made to pharmacist/owner Larry Sereidiak in Jasper June 3, by the president of the Alberta Pharmaceutical Association, Greg E. Eberhart.

"We're very proud and honored," said Sereidiak. "It took a while to sink in."

"I didn't do it myself," he said modestly. "It was the staff and my wife Elsie, and the tremendous support of the community."

Pleads guilty to 4 charges

A 23-year-old Drayton Valley man pleaded guilty to several offences recently in Drayton Valley Provincial court.

Albert Horvath entered a guilty plea to driving while his blood alcohol level exceeded .08, operating a vehicle while disqualified, failing to provide a breath sample, and a further charge of operating a vehicle while disqualified.

Horvath received two six-month jail sentences and two six-month concurrent sentences.

He also has been prohibited from driving for at least nine years.

Town parking poses problem

The town plans to take a close look at the parking situation around the Royal Bank.

In conjunction with the parking study, turning at the Royal Bank/Sean intersection will also be looked at.

Councillor Charlie Miner wants the study to go a step further, and identify some of the other busy corners in town. Especially, the corners where there's a lot of turning traffic.

His major concerns are vehicles that are parking right up to the corner.

Line painting budget over by 25 per cent

The cost of painting traffic lines in town this year was about 25 per cent over budget.

Council heard last Thursday that Brian Cuthertson, who was originally hired to do the line painting completed approximately $1,600 worth of work. But because only 50 per cent of the work was deemed satisfactory by the town, he was only paid $897.

The line painting was then completed by Lafrenz Road Services at a cost of $10,607.

The bid price submitted to the town was $8,038.

The increase was due to the quantities of line painting.

'The stuff makes your life a living hell'

The following is a true story, however, John is a fictitious name at the request of the party involved.

By Sue Kenyon

By 18 years of age John has quit school, spent a year hiding from drug dealers and police, taken a lethal dose of cocaine and has experienced everything from intense hallucinations to death.

"All I can remember is seeing a dark tunnel with a light at the end of it," John says, explaining his experience after "popping myself so full of cocaine it stopped my heart and I was dead for 15 seconds."

It was that overdose that finally scared John so much he sought help and committed himself to a drug rehabilitation program. John had been using cocaine for one year. The reason for doing anything in life was to "get another hit."

"The only reason I ever got a job was to support my habit," he says.

Because of his love affair with the drug, he is now $20,000 in debt, and has destroyed two vehicles in accidents.

"I spent about $200 a week on cocaine," he admits.

Bizarre side effects

John wasn't simply addicted to cocaine. "He was addicted to 'getting high.' Some of his experiments had bizarre side-effects."

He recalls the time on the "advice" of a friend he took 24 Gravit pills to get the ultimate high.

"I ran around the room for about six hours with a human being chasing me."

He recalls his friend sitting on the couch watching him trying to avoid this hand, and laughing. "Some friend he was!" says John.

Due to his lifestyle the RCMP knew of him and on at least one occasion phoned his parents' house looking for him.

"The police didn't know where I was, my mother didn't know where I was and half the time I didn't know where I was."

He remembers a time when he took four-and-a-half grams of magic mushrooms and was only five miles from home, a home he had lived in all his life.

"I had no idea where I was and when I sat in my truck with the headlights on I saw four lights instead of two."

His ~~last~~ overdose occurred ~~only~~ one month ago. He had been snorting cocaine and didn't want to come down off the high. "I wanted to get as high as I could."

A light at the end of the tunnel

While driving his pick-up he injected the lethal dose.

"I remember I was driving my truck and I pulled over. I felt sick to my stomach and then it felt like my eyes would fall out of my head."

It was then that he lay down in his truck and recalls seeing only the dark tunnel with the light at the end.

Overdose was a blessing

By 10 p.m. the same night his parents had taken him to hospital where he was treated.

"The overdose was a blessing. I was dead. If that didn't happen I wouldn't have stopped and I wouldn't be sitting here now," he says.

John sits, drinking coffee and laughs when he admits he would snort cocaine first thing in the morning. He says he lost 50 pounds while on cocaine and suffered a lot of health problems, not to mention psychological problems.

"I would never say hello to anyone. I was so anti-social." He says he lost all his friends he went to school with, lost his girlfriend due to a temper he couldn't control while he was straight.

Curing life's problems

Getting high cured all of life's problems — or so he thought. He would "have to get high" and get to know the dealers so well they would "front" drugs to him.

"It never occurred to me where I would get the money to pay them later, all that mattered was getting high."

He says he would run around hiding from the dealers he owed money.

Living with regret

John now has a lot of regrets ... regrets hurting people he loves and regrets that he can't change what has been.

"I really wish I could go back and be 15 again. I would never quit school and never touch drugs."

He says it will take a lot of time before he earns the respect and trust from his parents and others, but he is willing to try to earn it back.

"My parents are 110 per cent supportive of me now. They always tried to help me but I wouldn't let them."

What really bothers me about the whole thing is the amount of people I hurt in the process."

Presently, one of his major concerns is to stay off drugs. "Stay off drugs. That is my biggest concern...for everybody. You don't need drugs or alcohol to have a good time. The stuff just makes your life a living hell."

John has agreed to allow The Western Review to do a series of articles following his progress, on a monthly basis. We thank him for his honesty with us and salute his courage.

Cocaine, marijuana, speed, crack and other common drugs are passed around in plastic bags, small vials or just hand to hand.

Some facts about cocaine

Cocaine and crack are two of the more addicting drugs available illegally. There is not only a physical addiction but some experts say the psychological addiction can be more intense. Here are some facts on both drugs.

Cocaine is a stimulant which affects the central nervous system. It causes an increase in heart rate, blood pressure and the respiratory rate. Smoking cocaine, commonly known as freeshooting, is more dangerous than snorting the drug as it travels to the brain more quickly and is more concentrated.

Some short-term effects of cocaine use include agitation, anxiety, decreased need for sleep, decreased appetite, pupil dilation and exaggerated reflexes. Long-term use can cause mood swings, hallucinations and sexual dysfunction. If it is snorted or sniffed over a long period of time, respiratory problems may occur; it can destroy nasal tissue, and if injected, may cause infections such as hepatitis and AIDS.

Cocaine is known to be addicting because of the euphoric high which is experienced followed by depression.

Crack is cocaine which can be smoked. It is also known as rock. Cocaine powder is treated with common household products so it forms chunks — thus getting its name.

Crack is considered to be more dangerous as it is smoked, resulting in higher concentrations of the drug hitting the brain more rapidly than snorting or injecting cocaine. The short- and long-term effects of crack are similar to those of cocaine.

Seatbelts are primary defense against injury

By Samia Vallevand
Seatbelts should be worn properly to be effective.

Your car's safety belt is your primary defense in an accident. To be effective, however, a seat belt must rest over the hip bones, the ribs and the collar bone. These are 'hard' areas of your body that will withstand the great force applied when you are thrown forward during a head-on collision.

The skeletal 'cage' softens the blow against internal organs by distributing the impact of the crash. The wide web of the seat belt similarly distributes the effects of the crash.

If the belt has not been placed over those hard areas — or is so loose it slides out of place during the collision — you risk injury. To avoid such a mishap, the belt should be pulled snugly against the hips and chest.

A common mistake is to pull the lap belt up over the soft tissues of the abdomen. In an accident, a belt in that position could rupture such internal organs as the small intestine and colon.

Apart from placing the belt over the wrong areas of your body, you could be in trouble if you are not sitting in the proper position. Never ride with the front seat fully reclined — you could slide under the lap belt. Try not to slump.

Of course, you have no protection in an accident if you do not attach the seat belt at all. Besides saving you from impact, the belt will restrain you from flying through the windshield and perhaps striking a tree or car.

School fees to increase

Instructional materials charges for Twin Rivers school students will be going up next year.

The school board recently ratified a four-per-cent increase. That means elementary students will be required to pay $36 while junior high students pay $50 and it will cost seniors $80.

These are the same rates as the County of Parkland. "The four per cent is peanuts in regards to the textbook costs," Twin Rivers superintendent Dr. George Bevan says.

HATS OFF TO OUR HEROS

Lorrie Hansen likes a challenge, and that is the reason he says he likes his job.

The 29-year-old emergency medical technician has been in Drayton Valley for about one year now, and says it is a nice change. "It's a lot bigger town than I've been used to."

Basically a small-town boy at heart though, Hansen says he wouldn't mind going back to a small town again, some day.

He is a seasoned world traveler after spending three and a half years in the navy. "I've seen a lot of the world. It was a good way to travel — I got paid for doing it."

In his spare time, which he doesn't have much of with his responsibilities as an EMT, Hansen says he enjoys tinkering with his vehicle and being a backyard mechanic.

Ian Berger is considered dangerous.

Canada-wide warrant for murder suspect

RCMP Pincher Creek detachment, currently holds Canada-wide warrants for Ian Murray Berger, in connection with charges of murder and attempted murder. These stem from a shooting incident which occurred near Pincher Creek in southern Alberta on Aug. 10, 1988.

Description: Berger dresses the part of a Hasidic-Jew and frequents synagogues. He is known to wear a black hat and yarmulke (skull cap).

Berger is a caucasian male, 36, 180 centimetres (5 feet 11 inches) tall, 68 kilograms (151 pounds), greying brown hair and green eyes. He also has a scar across his throat and when last seen, had a scruffy, untrimmed greying beard.

Berger speaks English, French and Hebrew and is a native of Montreal. He is considered dangerous.

A Canada-wide warrant is held by the Pincher Creek RCMP for murder and attempted murder. Should you have any information on the above subject, contact your local police.

Parking lot would serve dual purpose

The Twin Rivers school division wants to build a new parking lot at the Eldorado school.

And, they want the town to be part of the development.

The proposed parking lot would be built along 60th Ave. west from the school up to the existing Elks Hall parking lot.

Both Mayor Bob Mayhew, who has a business adjacent to the proposed parking lot and Councillor Dave Lundberg, who is affiliated with the Elks, left the council chambers while the matter was being discussed during last Thursday's council meeting.

Councillor Charlie Miner doesn't quarrel with the need, but he strongly disagrees the town should be involved.

He suggests it's Twin Rivers' responsibility as the parking lot will be for the benefit of the school.

Miner says the lot would serve two purposes: as a drop-off and pick-up point for parents and an overflow for the Elks Hall.

"I don't see it as helping with the downtown parking situation," Miner added.

Manny Deol, the town manager, said it was an excellent opportunity for a partnership. He told council talks about such a parking lot had been going on for years.

Before they proceed, council wants to investigate the costs of the proposal.

Teacher charged with indecent assault voluntarily resigns position

By Rhonda Gwin
Whitecourt Star

A Whitecourt school teacher has tendered his resignation after being charged with seven sex-related offences.

The 38-year-old man was charged May 20 by Edmonton police with two counts of gross indecency, two counts of sexual assault, having sexual intercourse with a female under the age of 14, having sexual intercourse with a female between 14 and 18 and indecent assault.

The charges arose from incidents in Edmonton that occurred over a five-year period from 1981 to 1986.

Superintendent of Separate Schools Victor Dikaitis, said the teacher submitted his resignation May 22.

"The teacher in question has been a good teacher in good standing with the community," said Dikaitis.

"He chose to resign voluntarily due to the emotional strain these allegations have caused," he added.

Christianity is about relationships

By Father Martin Carroll
St. Anthony
Catholic Church

At the Last Supper, Jesus tried to make His friends aware death was not terminal but a transition.

He did it so by speaking of the love He had for them that would last beyond death. He told them He must go, but He would return in a deeper way.

"There are many rooms in My Father's house, and I am going to prepare a place for you. I would not tell you this if it were not so. And after I go and prepare a place for you, I shall come back and take you to Myself, so that you will be where I am." (John 14:2-3)

Jesus told them that love and life would last through the gift of Himself, a promise they didn't understand until after His death and rising.

We all fear separation from those we love. Jesus says

Breton Plots field day July 7

"Forage crops and sustainable agriculture" is the theme for this year's Breton Plots field day to be held at the Breton Plots July 7.

This year the department of soil science at the University of Alberta, is celebrating 60 years of experimental work at that site. The Breton Plots are situated on grey-wooded (luvisolic) soils which are low in sulphur, nitrogen and organic matter. These plots are some of the oldest long-term research plots in the world.

Speakers from the U of A will discuss the use of grey-wooded soils for forage production, the role of livestock in a forage production system, and the economics of producing forage.

Plot tours, a soil-crop clinic, demonstrations of a net wrap baler and the application of preservatives for high moisture hay will also be featured. The field day begins at 10 a.m. Lunch will be served.

From the Pastor's Pen

this will not happen if we enter into an abiding union with Him over which death has no power.

Christianity is about relationships; not those which are temporary, but those that last. Christ pioneered death, not by denial but by admitting its existence and passing through it.

Death is a transition. Just as a baby within the mother must die to that existence, literally be cut off from it, in order to see his/her mother and grow in freedom and love — so with us. This is what Christ is teaching.

We shall not be cut loose from this life as He was in order to see and grow to perfection in our love for God and one another. In death we are not terminated. That is the message of the Resurrection. Like Jesus, we shall pass through death to life without end, a life characterized by what God is . Love.

Death touches us all through the death of family and friends; at such times we need the support of others, but the greatest support comes from our faith and the belief in the love of God.

How to conduct an interview

By Tracy Vatter
Hire A Student

Tip for your interview:
Dress neatly. Go to the interview alone. Arrive a few minutes early. Speak clearly. Do not wear any type of jewellery you might fidget with. Politeness, enthusiasm and confidence pay off. Tell the interviewer your goals and qualifications. Thank the interviewer for his/her time. Check back with the employer to see if you have the job.

Common questions

Tell us about yourself. To answer this question a person could briefly summarize their past education and work experience. Also, tell what may have stood out in your opinion as a great experience, as compared to others you have had.

What qualifications and experiences do you have that makes you feel you can do this job successfully?

Briefly tell about the experiences you have had and how they have given you the qualifications you need for the job. Only tell about related job experiences, not the ones that have no common job experience.

What are your strong and weak points?

Explain your strong points but remember not to overdo it; no one wants to hear you go on about yourself for hours. Do not be afraid to tell a weak point but always remember to also explain how you are doing things to change the weakness.

Remember: Summer is almost here and if you do not have a job, come down and register at the Hire A Student office in the chamber of commerce building in Drayton Valley.

Last year this cross was found in the corn patch.

Couples' garden sprayed with unknown chemical

By Frank Ryan
Anges and Bert Laiss are avid gardeners.

Every fall they look forward to planting their garden near the Berrymoor bridge.

However, their interest in gardening was tainted somewhat recently when they discovered that some of their pass and raspberry plants had been sprayed with an unknown chemical.

If that wasn't enough, a chemical was used to spray the grass in front of their old home. Within a span of a week, the portion of the grass that had been sprayed, was rapidly turning brown.

It was just another unexplained development in their lives.

Last year, several dead chickens were discovered on the roof of their house and a cross was planted in their corn patch.

RCMP were called out but no arrests were made.

This time, the RCMP were called but were waiting for clarification of the actual chemical before investigating.

"Somebody's sick," said Bert Laiss, former operator of the Berrymoor ferry.

When Bert first noticed something on the raspberry plants, he thought they were frozen. But he quickly discovered they had been sprayed with some unknown chemical.

Read coverall labels carefully

By Bev Brooks
District Home Economist

Many Alberta farmers have decided to "take cover." They are wearing disposable coveralls over their regular clothing when spraying pesticides.

This is necessary to ensure against possible health risks. Disposable coveralls provide the extra layer of protection needed, and are discarded after their use. This avoids the problem of trying to remove pesticide from regular coveralls in the laundry.

When purchasing disposable coveralls, be sure to read the label carefully. Not all disposable coveralls are recommended by the manufacturer for pesticide use, while others have restricted use.

For example, Kimberly Clark's coverall called KleenGuard Extra Protection has been given a finish to repel only a light spray of liquid pesticide. This coverall is breathable to allow perspiration from the body to evaporate. Any major spill or splash, especially those under pressure will pass through the coverall to the clothing underneath. If this happens, immediately remove the coverall and the clothing underneath. Shower and put on clean clothes.

Tyvek coveralls, by Dupont, are only recommended for use with granular, dust or powdered pesticides. The more expensive polyethylene-coated or saran-coated Tyvek coveralls have better liquid repellency. This, however, makes them less breathable and if worn in hot, humid conditions could be uncomfortable.

Disposable coveralls can be worn several times as long as they haven't been exposed to a major spill of pesticide. As well, they should not have any rips, tears, holes or thin spots. To store the coverall, hang it in a well-ventilated area away from other clothing.

When it's time to throw away your disposable coverall, put it in a plastic bag and take it to a landfill site. Don't burn it.

For more information call your district home economist at Alberta Agriculture at 543-5368.

Protecting our environment

By Donn Baker
Pembina Institute

Concern for the environment is increasing and people are making a greater effort to act responsibly toward environmental issues.

The shortage of space for landfill sites and dwindling resources have brought many problems into the limelight. The environment can no longer absorb our waste and now we have to find safer, cleaner ways to dispose of our garbage and extract resources.

Energy

Conservation is the key issue.

Using less will have the most positive impact on the environment.

A first step is to conserve energy in our homes. Fluorescent lighting is considered to be three times as efficient as incandescent lighting and fluorescent bulbs last 10 times longer.

Dimmer switches and three-way lights conserve power and bulb life with softer lights, but stronger light is still available if needed.

Keeping your home properly insulated and sealed conserves world energy and your money. Good car maintenance and driving habits also reduce the demands on resources.

Moderate speed uses less fuel and a well-tuned vehicle is more energy-efficient. Fuel consumption is reduced by practicing smooth starts, not carrying unnecessary weight, and remembering to turn the engine off when the vehicle is parked. Installing a timer cord so the block heater is only on a few hours before you start your car saves several hours of electricity use.

Water

Growing concern about the depletion of fresh ground water reservoirs has renewed public awareness of water conservation. Industry has responded to this concern by introducing several products to help conserve the limited clean water supplies.

Flow restricting attachments for faucets, faucet aerators and toilet dams are but a few of the devices available.

There are many simple checks you can do in your home to help reduce water consumption and save energy.

Check the toilet for continuous flow due to slow leaks or valves that are not sealing properly. Not using the toilet for garbage disposal (such as flushing tissues), and remembering not to leave water running while brushing teeth, shaving, washing vegetables or to answer the phone will also cut back on water use. Water gardens and lawns on calm days in the morning or evening when temperatures are cooler.

The first step to protecting our environment is to conserve our valuable resources.

Horsemen take swim while prize hunting

Alder Flats News

By Joan Elmont

Sixty people attended the pancake breakfast at Em-T Town June 11.

A highlight of the horseback day organized by a group of local people was the Father's Day race when 18 horsemen frantically chased clues all over town, giving tourists a thrill, and concluding with Brian Thronson and Doug Groves taking a swim after the prize — a sack of refreshments hidden in the creek.

Victory went to Sandi Stewart in the javelin throw when she competed in Calgary at the Southern Alberta finals of the Central Alberta Schools Athletic Association's competition.

Caldwell hat trick at fish derby

The Minnihil Ladies Friendly Circle hosted 287 people at the old timers reunion Sunday, June 4.

Guests came from as far away as Vancouver, Prince George, Ontario and Texas. The oldest members in attendance were Hedrine Kramer, Jens Baakus and Harold Hallerik.

Buck Lake

By Joan Elmont

The old school bell came out of retirement and games of hopscotch, snakes and ladders, cat's cradle and yo-yos were enjoyed.

A few found themselves standing in the corners for their 'misdeeds'.

Ben Cardinal fed the entire school delicious homemade bannock.

More than $2,400 in prizes were awarded at the 20th annual Buck Mountain fish derby held at Buck Lake June 9.

Olivia Caldwell of Strone took first place in junior perch with a 10-pound 3/4 ounce catch.

A nine-pound nine-ounce pike won first place for Lisa West of Leduc.

Froy Caldwell's one-pound 7 1/2-ounce perch won a trophy for him, as did his four-pound 31/4-ounce walleye.

Wade Caldwell won the daily draw for Friday — a hat trick for the Caldwell family.

Saturday's draw prize went to Roy Matson of Mayerthorpe and Sunday's was won by Brian Sharrett of Alder Flats.

Counties receive grant

The provincial government will provide a one-time transitional grant of $3.75 million to the County of Parkland and $1.25 million to the County of Leduc.

"These grants will give the counties of Parkland and Leduc the financial flexibility they need to meet the challenge and the changes that will occur with the creation of the new Twin Rivers school district," says Education Minister Jim Dinning.

"I expect their major impact be to reduce the rate of school tax increases in both communities," Dinning added.

By providing these funds now, Parkland and Leduc county boards of education can prepare an effective five-year transitional plan. The one-time-only grants will benefit them immediately in adjusting to a lower tax assessment level.

This was the scene recently when clerks were busy preparing tax notices at the town office.

Seniors log more than 700 miles in marathon

West Pine Lodge celebrated its 13th anniversary Friday, June 9.

Les Bunney, first board chairman, told how the lodge got its name and gave tribute to those people whose efforts culminated in the establishment—the late Bill Thomas, Orton Hanna and Brian Taylor.

He listed all the problems they had with the water and heating systems and the fresh air makeup system. "I still don't have too much praise for the heating system," he said.

However, the heating system will be upgraded in the near future along with an extensive facility. Over a period of six months each wing of the lodge will shut down for two months while renovations are done.

Residents of the lodge visited Em-T Town along with seniors from Warburg, Drayton Valley, Leduc and Rimbey June 13.

The residents walked a total of 728 1/2 miles in their Elderobie Moonwalk marathon.

CALL 542-5380 TO PLACE YOUR CLASSIFIED AD

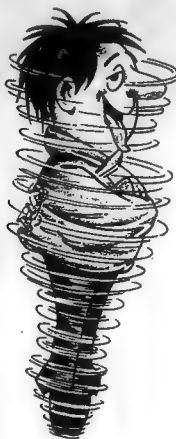

Tips on how to run an effective Classified Ad:

- * Be specific.
Yes, put in your asking price. Mention the facts that pertain to the item. The more useful information you give the reader, the more serious buyers you'll talk to...and the less you'll be annoyed by people calling to ask you the questions you should have answered in your ad.
- * Stay away from abbreviations.
Unless they're universally known, abbreviations of words or phrases can be confusing, or worse, misconstrued. Talk to our classified ad-visor when composing your ad to be sure the abbreviations you use are acceptable.
- * Specify hours with your phone number.

Make it easy for the caller to connect with you (they may not call again), and easy for you to live your life without a barrage of disruptive phone calls. When potential customers know when and where to reach you...they will!

- * Place your ad in the right spot.
Depending upon what you have to sell, it may do to 'target' your ad toward a certain buyer. Say you have a car that's old, oversized and ugly, but still runs well. You could place it under 'Autos', but think about what else it can do. Try placing it under the column Recreation Vehicles and try selling it as a good car to pull vacation vehicles. (Today's smaller cars aren't built for this type of work). You might end up selling it fast for the price you want!

A mobile home fire last Wednesday morning at the home of Glen Nash, located about 10 miles southwest of Drayton Valley, caused an estimated $45,000 damage. No one in the family of five was home at the time of the fire that destroyed more than half of the structure. Cause of the fire is still being investigated.

Bevan warns new school may be needed

By Sue Kenyon

Drayton Valley schools are near capacity and superintendent, Dr. George Bevan says the board should be building a new school to accommodate the overflow of students.

"Do you know there are 163 students enrolled in the early childhood education program already? I can see us going over 170 by September," Bevan said.

The board's original goal when implementing the ECS program in Eldorado school was for 100 students.

"We thought it might be somewhere around 150 if the community kindergarten closed," says Bevan.

He says the board's concern should now be for the future seeing that Evergreen, and HW Pickup and other schools are close to capacity now. Eldorado has a capacity of 475 and the enrollment is already 440.

Bevan believes the board should be looking at restructuring some of the schools and building a brand new school.

"The building should start in three years to be open in five," he says.

One possibility of restructuring is making Evergreen and Eldorado schools kindergarten to Grade six.

"We have one of the largest kindergarten enrollments in the province," he says.

Annexation question still under debate

By Susan Mosciaki

The question of whether or not several communities will be annexed into the MD Brzeau still remains unanswered as hearings go into the second week.

Representatives of the south Moose Hill area, Alder Flats, Buck Lake, Moon Lake, the northern tip of the MD Clearwater, and two owners from Leduc, are presenting their case before the Local Authorities Board.

"It's almost a miracle the MD Brzeau exists today," Bob Booth, MD Brzeau councillor, said at the hearings. "Unfortunately, the miracle wasn't quite complete in that it did leave out people who desperately wanted to be part of the MD."

These people, as well as those who disagree with annexation into the MD, were invited to state their case before the board.

Clint Schwalbe, a landowner from the Moon Lake area, was among those wishing to be part of the MD. Schwalbe said he would suggest the majority of Moon Lake residents commute to the MD Brzeau for their source of income, and do most of their shopping, banking, and recreational activities here.

Schwalbe was concerned about schooling as well. If Moon Lake were annexed into the MD, he said, "the school board can extend the school district into the area, ensuring that my children will have access to schools in Drayton Valley."

Another Moon Lake resident, however, was not as eager to join the MD. Jo-Anne Riou said her daughter attends school in Entwistle.

"I'm very pleased with the services and the teaching instruction she gets there. It doesn't seem to be an issue of the services the County of Parkland is giving to us, it seems to be more of an issue of schools. This seems to have snowballed over the issue of schooling."

Consortium investigation to be ready by mid-July

The investigation report on the recent explosion at the Pembina Educational Consortium is not yet complete according to Joe Miller, acting director of Alberta Occupational Health and Safety.

He said the report should be complete in mid-July. "We should have it wrapped up by then."

Meanwhile, work on that report continues, as two representatives of Occupational Health and Safety were in Drayton Valley last Thursday.

In his presentation, Paul Poudrier stated, "Most of our (residents of Alder Flats) personal activity is centred around Drayton Valley."

Brian Clark, member of the Local Authorities Board, addressed Poudrier soon after this comment and said,

"It would appear that Drayton Valley and the municipality of Brzeau are synonymous...when in actual fact, they are two separate entities."

All areas are being given the opportunity to address the board in regard to their concerns and reasons for wanting to be part of the MD Brzeau.

The board and people from the areas involved will continue meeting to determine which areas will be annexed. Hearings could last as long as three weeks.

MD manager John Erikson said he feels the hearings are going very well, but does not expect to know the decision on this matter for "quite a while."

Actually, it was three members of the senior class who made up the grad bash committee.

Day wants it known, that the school does not sanction this annual bash. The $500 came from grad bash ticket sales.

Community living favored by association

By Susan Moscicki
Bruce Nichols, executive director of the Drayton Valley Association for the Developmentally Handicapped, is excited over a decision made at the annual meeting last week.

A vote taken at the meeting showed the majority in favor of changing the association name to Drayton Valley Association for Community Living. "What we're really trying to do is emphasize community living — emphasize abilities, not disabilities," he said.

Individualized funding versus block funding and assured income for the severely handicapped (AISH) were subjects of intense discussion.

Garry Lorenz, president, said individualized funding "becomes like a social allowance. I go along with it in really special cases, but like one man said here tonight, if what you have works, don't fix it."

Ron Wagener, vice-president and Garry Lorenz, president.

With block funding, he said, the association gets money (from the government) and provides whatever services possible to the client.

Nichols explained that with individual fundings, individual needs are looked at, and parents or guardians draw up a budget. The basic philosophy is good. The only problem with it is most families don't have the expertise.

"We could provide the services more cost-effectively (through block funding)," Nichols assured members.

The statement of operations-residential for 1989 showed a net income of $7,456, up from $755 in 1988.

The 1989 statement of operations-vocational showed a net loss of $17,725, up from $8,138 last year.

Lorenz said the association had 18 clients four years ago. They now have 31, but Lorenz said they still receive the same amount of money for 31 as they did for 18. "This puts a lot of pressure on us."

Elected by acclamation, Lorenz will spend another year as president. Ron Wagener was elected vice-president; Cathy Polsfut, treasurer; Jack McLean, secretary; and Marilyn Boles, recording secretary.

Sexual assault on 6-year-old nets months in jail

A 61-year-old Alder Flats resident has been sentenced in Leduc Provincial Court to six months in jail after pleading guilty to sexually assaulting a six-year-old girl.

The child was staying with her grandparents at their Buck Lake residence during the summer of 1988 when the incidents occurred. The accused was a friend of the child's grandparents.

The child later told her mother the accused fondled her and penetrated her with his finger. The man admitted the acts when confronted by RCMP officers and said he was "trying to discover if the child was all girl."

He claimed he did not intend to hurt her but also said he held her partially to blame.

Judge M.G. Tomyn said the offender made no admission of self-indulgence. "This is not a single incident of succumbing to temptation," he noted.

"Whatever we have is an individual who really doesn't realize there is a problem with himself," Judge Tomyn continued.

A psychiatric evaluation of the man indicated he was of low average intelligence. No further psychiatric treatment was recommended.

The toxic round-up was successful with products brought in, but needed more people showing up. Left is customer Sheryl Wright and Andrew Bachelider from Pembina Institute.

DDT collected in toxic roundup

The toxic round-up held last week was not very successful but was worthwhile having, Donna Baker of the Pembina Institute said.

She admits she was disappointed with the 30-some people who came out. She feels it should have been much better, but what they collected from those that did show up, shows a need for a toxic round-up once a year, Baker says.

"We collected DDT which has been taken off the market, soil sterilant which also has been taken off the market; we collected sulfuric acid and a lot of corrosive household detergents," she says.

Review apologizes

The Western Review regrets its error and apologizes for any embarrassment or inconvenience caused to Andy Dornan.

The charges listed in a front page article June 6 were incorrect.

Dornan appeared in Drayton Valley Provincial Court June 15 and elected to be tried by a judge and jury in Court of Queen's Bench.

He is charged with seven counts of theft over $1,000; five counts of uttering forged documents; five counts of theft over $1,000 and two counts of fraud.

A preliminary inquiry has been set for Oct. 16 to 20 in Drayton Valley.

Mae Chow: "Happily ever after."

Hometown dream for young lawyer

By Susan Moscicki

The dream of a local girl who wanted to pursue a law career in her home town is about to come true.

Mae Chow graduated from Frank Maddock high school and spent seven years studying at the University of Alberta in order to fulfil her dream.

She has a bachelor of science degree, in addition to her LLB (bachelor of laws).

Chow will be apprenticing as a student-at-law with Thomas & Company for the next year.

"It's my first job," she says. "It's going to be an adjustment (after spending seven years in school)."

Drayton Valley is the ideal place to live, according to Chow. "This is home, it's always been home. This is a place to settle down."

Settling down was one of the first things Chow did when she returned home. She got married to a local man June 10, after which they took a cruise in the Bahamas.

She will be starting work July 5, after getting her articles of clerkship applications done.

"My plan is to live happily ever after in Drayton Valley working for Thomas & Company."

Superintendent nears end of term

By Sue Kenyon
Dr. George Bevan, superintendent of Twin Rivers, says he is retiring because the job calls for a person who can commit to a few years to it and he doesn't want to do that.

"You know, they use words like challenge, and great experience and then they say you are the only one who could do the job," he says, laughing, explaining how he was talked into the position.

Bevan, who took up the position of superintendent in January to help get the school district off the ground, accepted the position on a temporary basis and is now looking forward to retiring.

He says he was retired when he received the phone call asking him if he would consider taking on the up Aug. 31.

His home is in Edmonton and he has been driving home two nights a week and staying in hotels three nights a week since January and will continue this until his term is up Aug. 31.

"I also strongly believe the superintendent of schools should be living in the community and become a part of it," he said.

In September Bevan and his wife, Peggy, will take a six-week vacation travelling Australia and New Zealand and will then return home to settle in Edmonton.

When working with electrical equipment outdoors, use only a CSA approved outdoor extension cord. For safety, it should have a three-prong grounded plug and a flexible, yet durable, neoprene covering — like the cord you see plugged in. Next time you're reaching for an extension cord about the yard, remember that indoor cords are definitely out. Explosion should serve as warning to other facilities

A recent explosion in town that saw 30 people escape serious injury shouldn't go unnoticed. Hopefully, there's a lesson for others as a result of the incident.

It's not known at this time if Alberta Occupational Health and Safety will take any drastic action.

But even if they don't, the explosion will at least alarm others who operate similar shops to the potential dangers.

It should also serve as a warning to those who might be in the same situation as the Pembina Educational Consortium. What is going on in the building you occupy?

That very question was discussed at a recent consortium board of directors meeting. They expressed concern about the tenants in other buildings around the province the consortiums occupied.

Our school authorities might also look at their own facilities. Do they have the necessary safety factors in place?

The explosion that rocked the consortium building, could have quite easily been a lot worse.

About six feet separated the shop where the explosion originated from and a classroom containing 20 women.

Joe MacLellan, the consortium's executive director, credits a fire wall from turning what could have been a disastrous situation into a scare.

That should be concern enough for others to check their own situations.

Highway turnoff a reason for serious concern

A lot of concerns have been expressed about traffic turning off and on to Highway 22 just north of town.

The strip causing most of the concern, is located between the airport turnoff and the Rocky Rapids/Cynthia corner.

That could be narrowed down to the golf course/Drayton Valley campground.

So far, concerns that have been relayed to Alberta Transportation have fallen on deaf ears.

It's their belief, that while Highway 22 north is busy, it's not busy enough to make the suggested changes.

But before making such a decision, Alberta Transportation should experience

Frankly Speaking

By Frank Ryan

driving that section.

Because, there is reason for concern.

It's especially bad for the traffic travelling toward town on Highway 22, when someone, at the last minute comes off the golf course road. It isn't long before that highway traveller is right on their bumper.

It's also especially dangerous for the motorist who exits from the golf course and finds themselves behind a vehicle that decides to turn into the campground. Quite often, it results in one or two vehicles slowing down, only to be faced with the possibility of a rear end collision by another vehicle barreling down Highway 22.

If Alberta Transportation didn't want to spend a lot of money, and that's quite evident, they might consider extending the location of the campground signs, so motorists turning in there, have more warning.

It's only a temporary solution. Not the answer to a serious traffic problem.

Letter urges Parkland to tighten belt instead of taxing

Dear Editor,
To county of Parkland school board members:

After listening and reading about your tax problems, I felt I had to let you know how I feel about it. I am only one person but I don't think for one second I am the only one who feels like this.

I will start off by telling you I am a former member of your county. I live in Drayton Valley.

Can you still hear the echoes of our crys from the west end? We begged, we yelled and we even threatened to leave the county if you didn't start listening to us.

You didn't — and so we did. And now you are living with the results of years of neglect to this end of the county.

One of our biggest points, while we were begging you, was the huge amount of tax dollars you realized from this end of the county and the small amount you put back into the west end of the county. You disagreed then, but I see you have since changed your mind because you are crying about the large tax base you are missing from your revenues now that we are no longer there.

About 10 years back (incidentally, some of you on the board now were on it then also), there was a teacher who taught in our schools here. He moved to teach within your schools. About a year after the move, I met him. His comment was: "That if we had any idea of what the schools in your end enjoyed, we would not pay one more dollar into a system that was, and is, as top heavy as yours."

You see, at the time our students were enjoying the advantages a very tight budget gives you: like two classes to a room separated by a plastic folding door, and two or three students to each textbook.

The teachers and principals were reduced to begging to deaf people to get anything even close to the necessities for the students. In the end, they took the flack you should have.

All I can say to you now is, maybe it's time you sold that cruise liner and bought a more manageable boat which requires less staff. The rest of Alberta's school boards have been using them for years.

Fawn story moves reader to tears

Dear Editor,

As I read the front page story of the injured fawn (June 20), tears welled up in my eyes.

Maybe it was because someone had enough gall to hack the meat from the cow and to leave the little animal behind without even bothering to give assistance to the poor animal.

Or maybe it was because some man was kind enough to report the incident to wildlife so that fawn might have a chance.

Or maybe it was because of that little sparrow resting on the injured fawn during its trauma, that made me realize just how beautiful life really is, and how blessed we are to experience the joy of such things.

I thank you for your story and for making the public more aware of what to do if such a situation arises again. Shauna Riske

Canada proud of RCMP

Should Canadians continue to accommodate foreign religions, customs and cultures at the risk of obliterating their own culture?

Recently, a topic of much controversy has been whether or not Sikh RCMP officers should be allowed to wear turbans while on duty?

I cannot think of anything Canadians can take more pride in than their own Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

Sikhs are required because of their religion to wear turbans, and therefore claim they will be unable to become RCMP officers.

As I understand it, most religions tend to have restrictions or rules of some kind.

I do have sympathy for these men, however, they are asking us to change part of a uniform that not only represents the RCMP, but has come to represent Canada.

Canada allows people of many different cultures, religions, colors, etc. to immigrate here, and offers them the freedom we all enjoy, but I believe our own culture should be a top priority.

Could we really expect to go to any other country and tell them we would like to change the uniform of their police to suit our religion?

Christians do not believe in working on Sundays which restricts them from certain occupations that involve working on their Sabbath.

A Christian doctor or RCMP officer, however, must work on Sundays when needed if he expects to keep his job.

Can we therefore cater to one religion, and not another?

In my opinion, the RCMP have an image to uphold, one that commands attention and respect, and I feel the uniform and hat are an important part of that image.

Every Canadian is protected by the Charter of Rights. Where are the rights for our Canadian culture?

Newsroom Comment

Turbans no black mark on RCMP uniform

a turban worn correspondingly with an RCMP uniform is a bastardization of a Canadian cultural symbol, this begs the question of what is Canadian?

Is a Sikh born in Canada, who wants to preserve the religious beliefs of his parents, less a Canadian?

By stating we will not allow RCMP officers to wear turbans is a seclusion of a fraction of the Canadian population from becoming an RCMP officer. Turbans are worn by Sikhs in public at all times, as part of their religious belief system.

If the RCMP stand as a symbol of Canada, the true north strong and free, all Canadians including Sikhs should be allowed the opportunity to be members of the force.

Turbans are symbols of the Sikh religion, a symbol which is tolerated and accepted in Canadian society.

Canada may not make claim to be the all encompassing melting pot the U.S. does, but nevertheless it does proclaim to be a cultural mosaic, as multiculturalism is a theme instilled into this nation.

Isn't it about time multiculturalism ceases being a pleasant sounding platitude and becomes a truly visible action-plan?

Land swap in the works

Negotiations for a land swap between the town and Pelican Spruce Mills is underway.

According to a mill spokesman, they are giving up some land in return for a smaller piece of property and an unspecified amount of money.

The land in question is located north of the existing mill and south of the old Woods' property in West Valley Park.

The land swap is being arranged to assist the town in its plans for a new road connecting West Valley Park and 50th Street near Woodland Chrysler.

Jaime's doing well

By Susan Moeckel
Jane Robinson just can't say enough about the generosity and love the people of Drayton Valley and area showed her daughter Jaime Gilbert during months of worry whether or not she would be able to get treatment for Arterio Venous Malformation.

"Thanks from Jaime and me. If it wasn't for the people who donated time and money, Jaime wouldn't have been able to get treatment."

Jaime is doing well after receiving treatment in the United States, but she is not entirely out of danger yet.

"The treatment breaks AVM down, and if the tissue breaks away from the AVM, it could cause death," said Robinson.

She was positive, however, that Jaime will do well as a result of the treatment. "I'm sure that it's going to help."

Robinson said Jaime's short-term memory is very poor. "Over the years it should improve, but it may take years."

Jaime is back in school after spending more than five months at home, unable to read, watch television, or do anything that could put pressure on her brain and cause her to collapse in severe agony.

Her mother said Jaime will be passing, and going into a special needs Grade 7 class next year in H.W. Pickup junior high school.

Over $20,000. is still available from funds donated to the Jaime Gilbert fund, but Robinson said no bills have yet come in from Alberta Health Care, or the hospitals in the U.S.

The good news, according to Robinson, is that Jaime has not had a major headache since December, and is doing well except for her short-term memory.

Petition sparks change

A 45-name petition from concerned Easyford Park area residents has resulted in some major changes.

Mike Anderson, a special constable with the municipal district, says a part-time janitor has been hired to clean up the park and adjoining campsite on a daily basis.

In reply to the petition, which raised concerns about parties at the campsite, Anderson says he has been patrolling the area evenings and weekends. RCMP will also be patrolling the area.

Locals meet assessors

About 50 property owners attended a two-day assessment and taxation open house last week.

The sessions, which provided residents the opportunity to talk one-on-one with five government assessors, were arranged by the town.

Manny Deol, town manager, says some of the concerns came from residents of Celebrity Heights and others (commercial/industrial businesses) who are looking at a 25 per cent tax hike.

"It gave people a chance to talk to the assessors on an informal basis," Deol says.

Several appointments have been made between property owners and government assessors as a result of the open house.

Staff, management are proud of award-winning section

The family violence prevention special section featured in The Western Review last September has won a major award.

It was selected as the best special section (circulation class 5,000 and over) during the recent Canadian Community Newspaper Association better newspaper competition.

The special section ran in Lynard Publication papers.

"The publication took almost six months to prepare. Staff and management were proud of the product and appreciated the generous support of section page sponsors, who also recognize education is vital to the prevention of family violence," said Pat Bell, associate publisher of the Leduc Representative.

The quality of the editorial package impressed other newspaper publishers, that they have reprinted the material.

"The section educated thousands of readers and proved once again the community press can produce quality publications beyond the normal mission of the newspaper. We can be more than just news...we can be an informative friend, providing a service to our community," Bell said.

It is the second year in a row Lynard Publishers won the award for the best section. A "Lead on Life," the substance abuse special section printed in September of 1987, won the award last year.

Drayton Valley man injured in collision

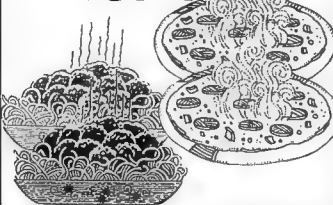

Two men are in Misericordia Hospital in Edmonton following a collision between a car and a motorcycle on Highway 16 at Wildwood last Saturday evening.

The two vehicles were westbound on Highway 16 when one of the vehicles apparently sideswiped the other.

Donald Yuhass, 31, of Drayton Valley, a passenger in the car, is listed in critical but stable condition, and Ricky Block, 23, driver of the motorcycle, is in satisfactory condition. The driver of the car, Michael Monty, 26, of Wildwood, and another passenger were not injured. Evansburg RCMP said charges are pending.

Wow, hang in there, Darby!

Action-packed Lindale rodeo weekend

Taking the plunge.

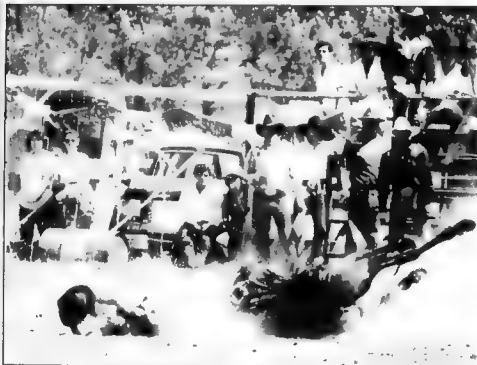

Darren Breithwaite of Grande Prairie was just a little shocked when his horse decided to take a rest rather than trying to buck him off.

Flip, flop and they're just flying. Ken Pinyon of Breton scored 66 points for this wild ride during Lindale rodeo last week.

Ouch — Darby Morrison (left) of Eckville wasn't seriously injured after his horse dumped him and proceeded to step on Darby's leg. Ambulance attendants standing by transported him to hospital.

Tumbling in the dust, Shane Pimm of Mayerthorpe and horse were just fine after their roll in the dust.

High school track team has 'fairly good finish'

The Frank Maddock high school track and field team finished its season with three members competing in the provincials June 10-11 in Calgary.

Lisa Vowk placed fifth in long jump, Martin Stoklossa seventh in hurdles, and Terri Kwiatkowski finished eighth in discus.

"It was a fairly good finish for them. They put a lot of effort into training. If you can get to the provincials it's a accomplishment," Rick Watrich, FMHS track and field coach, said.

Watrich added weather conditions were "fairly cold and windy" for the meet which may have hindered the results of the threesome.

Frank Maddock's track team may have an added disadvantage when competing against athletes from Calgary and Edmonton which have access to year-round indoor training facilities.

"We're never going to have an indoor track; that's just reality," Watrich said.

Despite delay, curling rink doing okay

By Paul Cudla

Construction of the new Drayton Valley curling rink is going well despite being three weeks behind schedule according to club president Bruce Clemmer.

Clemmer said most of the concrete work had been completed on the new building and attributed some setbacks to "a few in-house things" like communication gaps.

"Our mechanical should be completed in the next 20 days."

The entire staff of 33 executives on the building committee are volunteers and this has played a role in the delay.

Phase 1 of the curling rink is set to be completed by Sept. 1. This will include the recreation area, lounge and offices but does not include the rink area itself.

Clemmer said the rink is receiving community support but has not been sponsored by any form of government.

"We've had a good response from the town, but we haven't got one single donation or grant from any level of municipal, provincial or federal government."

Clemmer added the amount of time the club has spent talking to government representatives without acquiring a funding commitment was "most disappointing."

"The paperwork that is required would choke a horse. For every piece of paper you give them, they give you back three."

So far the curling rink has obtained $50,000 worth of commitments from major corporations and the community.

"All we need is a commitment and then we can go to the bank and arrange a loan."

Clemmer is optimistic about the new curling rink.

"Hopefully all the work that we've done is going to pay off, and in the end I think it will."

Thorsen aiming for spot on Alberta rowing team at Games

By Paul Cudla

Drayton Valley is not exactly a rowing hotbed, but Kurt Thorsen is making a name for himself in the sport.

Thorsen, 16, a Grade 10 student at Frank Maddock high school has been a member of the Edmonton Rowing club for the past three years, and has a good chance at qualifying for the Canada Summer Games Aug. 13-18 in Saskatoon.

So how does someone from Drayton Valley get into rowing? For Thorsen it started when he saw an ad in the paper encouraging prospective rowers to come out and try out for the 1987 Alberta Summer Games. Thorsen tried out and ended up winning a bronze medal at the Games.

"I really started enjoying it. The whole feeling of sitting so close to the water, and the feeling you get when the boat moves forward. When the boat actually lifts and moves," Thorsen said.

While he participates in other sports like Tae Kwon Do, Thorsen enjoys rowing the most.

"It's a hard sport. You can't get tired because you have to keep up with the rest of the crew.

"The whole crew has to work together. You have to be able to anticipate what each person is doing. You have to work like a machine."

Thorsen tries to participate in as many regattas as possible; there is usually one every weekend during the summer. To date, he has travelled to competitions in Regina, Lloydminster, Spokane and Banff.

"I like the travelling, some of the places you race at, especially Banff."

At the Regina Sprints held June 17, Thorsen won a first place in the doubles and placed second with a crew in the eights.

He is optimistic about his chances to qualify for the Alberta team at the Canada Summer Games because he has tested well, generally in the top three, in strength and stamina tests held at the U of A to assess provincial rowers.

Thorsen would some day like to make it to the Olympic Games, but for now will concentrate on making it to the Canada Summer Games.

And if he makes it to the Summer Games and does well, he hopes to attract attention to him and his crew and possibly gain consideration for a scholarship at a school renowned for its rowing.

For the next two weeks, until he hears for sure if he has made the Alberta team, Thorsen will continue his dryland training which includes working with a rowing machine, running and weight lifting.

Shelley Margaret, daughter of Raymond and Margaret Stevenson of Breton recently graduated from the University of Alberta with a Bachelor of Education Degree.

Locals excel in tourney

By Susan Moscicki

Local women excelled in the weekend women's open at the Drayton Valley Golf Club.

Teresa Baumann carded a 91 to win the overall low gross and Barb Matheson, also of Drayton Valley, shot 69 and won the overall low net.

Winners of the championship flight included Peggy Newbury with a 93 to win the low gross (LG) title while Darcie Thompson captured the low net (LN) with a 75.

First flight winners included Baumann with Gayle Wager taking the low net with a 73.

Cecile Gregory, 102 LG; and Susan Long, 75 LN took the top spots in the second flight. Third flight winners were Carolyn Ness, 104 LG; and Matheson.

Ann Carl, 109 LG; and Shirley Wolbaum, 72 LN, won the fourth flight.

The fifth flight winners were Julie Bergen, 112 LG; and Cathy Joyce, 83 LN.

Darcie Thompson was disappointed in the Drayton Valley club member turnout.

"It was a great tournament but a poor showing of ladies from town. Out of 159 members, only about 29 showed up from Drayton Valley."

CJ's disguise isn't enough to convince 24 Hour Video manager Maureen Hutchinson that he's 18 years old.

Pornography off-limits to town's youth - stores

By Belinda Atkinson

Pornography is firmly out of the hands of Drayton Valley's youth, according to four local video store spokesmen.

The accumulated selection of 747 adult videos — categorized as soft and hard pornography, X-rated and XXX-rated — is off limits to anyone under 18.

"(Children) are not allowed in the adult room and we can't even have anyone working for us who is under 18," says Nancy Samia, half owner of Terr Bear Video.

Sales clerks at Movie Madness, Video Lane and 24-Hour Video have also been given verbal instructions by their superiors not to allow anyone in the adult video section unless they can produce identification.

"We have a sign right on the door," says Carolyn French of Video Lane.

According to Sharon McCann, chairman of Edmonton's Board of Censors, this rule is self-imposed by the industry in order to maintain good relations with communities and not governed by the judicial system or any level of government.

"Common sense actually predominates," she said. "(Stores) usually know they are dealing with a sensitive issue."

She said the onus is on the parent to accompany a child and help him select an appropriate video rather than a store or government.

"Any parent who gives a child a video card is not really in any position to complain," she said.

Because of the wide-spread nature of the video industry with movies available in most corner stores, she says anything other than self-regulation would be impossible.

"To even imagine this can be policed is ridiculous," she said.

However, she explained part 5, section 163 of the Criminal Code may apply if a parent can prove the material is obscene and has corrupted a viewer's morals.

According to the code, a viewer's age is not a factor, as no such references are made, only the contents of the film.

McCann said the attorney general currently handles all such complaints and determines whether there are grounds to press charges under this section of the Criminal Code.

Travel scams like 'locusts' every season

By Steve Fletcher

Had an attractive holiday package thrown your way lately?

If you're like many other Canadians, chances are you have.

Officials are warning residents to be extremely leery of mailed postcards promising vacations in exotic locales at bargain prices.

Western Review employee Lori Clark had an opportunity to join a cruise to the Caribbean last week.

A Tennessee-based company named Southeastern Travel Corporation had mailed her a postcard facsimile that said she'd been "selected by Contest Awards Clearinghouse" for a trip to the Bahamas and Florida.

A further stay in Mexico was promised if she phoned on the day she was asked to "claim" her vacation.

Clark phoned and was told the trip would cost $300 (U.S.) per couple, payable immediately. She was also asked for her credit-card number.

Companies like Southeastern "come out like locusts" every travel season, said Ross Bradford, president of the Better Business Bureau in Edmonton.

"Often they offer less than what they promise over the telephone," he said.

Bradford added this type of misrepresentation results in numerous complaints to the Better Business Bureau, which has a written report

They offer less than what they promise on Southeastern.

The type of accommodation these companies' book for clients is often less than ideal, Bradford said.

He pointed out there is often a difference in interpretation over what constitutes first-class lodgings.

Getting a reimbursement on a deposit is another typical problem, noted Bradford.

Meier Travel agent Chris Kreiser says "there are a lot of these things going around."

She added that trade magazines regularly carry stories about travel scams.

"They always try to somehow wiggle your credit card out of you," said Kreiser.

Arlene Stables, an agent with Terra Travel Ltd., warns residents to be "very cautious — don't ever send money first."

She added "There's a lot of seniors who get taken" by travel deals that appear too good to be true.

"If they're too good to be true, they probably are," maintained Bradford. His advice to the sun-starved northerner who receives such a dreamy deal:

"Get them to send you something in writing. Read it very carefully and evaluate it. And don't give out your credit-card number."

Lookin' good

The weather will get warmer as the week progresses.

Expect a high of -6 C today (Tuesday) with the temperature expected to drop to -24 C overnight.

The Edmonton weather office is calling for a high of 0 C on Wednesday with an overnight low of -12 C. It will be mostly sunny throughout the day.

On Thursday it will stay about the same with a high of 0 C and a low of -16 C.

There will be a slight change Friday with a daytime high of -5 C and a low overnight of -10 C.

Bill Badgerow, 18, of Breton will be competing in the high school finals in Pueblo, Colorado in the saddle bronc event.

Breton cowboy earns way to finals

By Paul Cudla
William Badgerow, 18, a Grade 12 student in Breton has won the right to go to the biggest rodeo in the world by being the third best high school saddle bronc rider in Alberta.

Badgerow finished in the top four in the saddle bronc event thus qualifying for the high school finals rodeo in Pueblo, Colorado July 23 to Aug. 1. High school cowboys from 33 states, Alberta and B.C. will be competing at the final.

"It's going to be a fun trip. I'll be competing against all the up and coming pros," Badgerow said.

The high school finals will feature hundreds of cowboys in each event as all 35 provincial and state teams are allowed to have four cowboys in each event. That means in saddle bronc Badgerow will be up against about 140 competitors.

Nevertheless, he is pleased that he is guaranteed two rides on horses that are National Finals calibre.

"Hopefully, I will get a big high, kicking and bucking horse. An NFR horse will buck hard."

While Badgerow finished third overall after the rodeo season he did have a good shot at second.

"I didn't qualify the way I would have liked to. I went into the final rodeo of the season second and came out third."

Despite this, Badgerow still qualified and he realizes that is most important.

"I'm looking forward to going down and hopefully I can make the short-go."

The top-20 in the high school finals events will be able to advance.

After the finals, Badgerow plans to go to Olds College where he hopes to be on the Olds rodeo team. He wants to take heavy-duty mechanics.

Badgerow does aspire to joining the pro circuit and becoming a professional cowboy.

He has an interesting answer for those who might ask 'why?'

"A lot of people ask what it is that possesses a person to make them get in that chute. Honestly, I don't know. 'It's fun, I guess.'"

Thefts mire fish derby

Buck Lake

By Joan Elmont

On Saturday, about noon, during the Buck Lake fish derby, a gas tank, gas, booster cables, two oars, two down-riggers, yellow life jacket and fishing tackle were taken from Gary Mastre's boat while parked on the southeast corner of the lake.

Between June 11 and 12 at almost the same location, a 23-foot holiday trailer was broken into on the Willewhaven Estates and $2,000 worth of fishing equipment belonging to Dale Fraser of Westeros was stolen.

Anyone having any information on these incidents is asked to contact the Breton RCMP.

Neptune club swims to out-of-town win

The Neptune Swim club won its first out-of-town swim meet in eight years when they finished in top spot on June 17 in Stony Plain.

Debbie Regnier, a director on the Neptune Swim club, said the team was very excited about the victory.

"Winning a meet away from home is different from winning a meet at home where you have all your swimmers," Regnier said.

The Neptune club took 55 swimmers with them to Stony Plain where they captured a 65 1/2 aggregate point victory over the host Stony Plain team.

Besides Stony Plain, Hinton, Spruce Grove, Westlock, Devon and Whitecourt all competed in the weekend meet. St. Albert, a usually strong swimming team was absent.

"The teams that were there gave us a pretty good indication of what we can expect at the regionals.

"Our zone (zone 5) is pretty tough, so for us to do well is excellent," Regnier said, adding that the zone 5 champions won the regionals last year.

Individuals from Neptune capturing aggregate golds were Kevin Oscar in boys 11 and 12 years old, and Andrea Groulx in girls 17 and over.

No fish story, it's a nine-pound pike

Lisa West of Leduc hooked the biggest fish during the recent 20th annual Buck Mountain fishing derby at Buck Lake.

West hooked a nine-pound nine-ounce pike to capture first place in that category.

Not far behind was Melvin Spengler of Millet with a catch tipping the scales at nine pounds three-and-a-quarter ounces. Grant Caldwell of Onoway was third with a pike weighing in at eight pounds 13 and three-quarter ounces.

Lodgepole's Jim Lowen had to settle for fourth place in the pike division with a catch of eight pounds 12 and three-quarter ounces.

In the walleye event, Troy Caldwell of Wetaskiwin placed first with a catch of four pounds three-quarter ounces. Ken Fulford of Red Deer was next with a walleye weighing three pounds 11 and one-quarter ounces. Third place went to Leduc's Darryl Morrell with a weight of three pounds nine and a half ounces.

Dan Nichols of Alder Flats claimed fourth spot with a catch weighing three-and-a-half pounds.

Catholic school board approves home schooling policy

Home schooling program

The Catholic school board accepted a policy dealing with the issue of home schooling which states the board will approve any home-schooling program which meets the standards of Alberta education.

The new School Act makes it mandatory for school boards to have a policy position on home-schooling programs. The act has put an emphasis on the right to home-schooling.

St. Anthony's has not yet been approached by a member of the community wishing to establish a home-schooling program. Rocky Mountain House on the other hand, has a home-schooling program contingent that consists of 17 private schools.

Award presentations

Ron Williams, principal of St. Anthony school, announced the school awards presentations would take place the morning of June 28.

Williams made the announcement at the general Catholic school board meeting held June 22.

Mission statement

The Catholic school board carried a motion to adopt a mission statement for St. Anthony school which will eventually be inscribed on the front of the school, and written into handbooks and report cards.

"We were quite pleased with what we came up with in the end," Marilyn Buchan, vice-chairperson, said at the general meeting held June 22.

Buchan added the mission statement was a culmination of work done by the policies committee.

The mission statement shall read: "The Drayton Valley Roman Catholic Separate School District exists as a Gospel-centered bridge between school, home, and parish in a climate of openness, trust, and cooperation.

"Recognizing God as the source of life and within a Christian environment of security and hope, each child will have the opportunity to develop holistically, fulfill baptismal commitments and achieve educational potential."

Joint superintendency

The Catholic school board discussed at length a proposal put forward by Rocky Mountain House that asks for a joint superintendency.

The Rocky Mountain House Catholic school board would like to join with Wetaskiwin, Drayton Valley, and Ponoka under a joint superintendency plan effective before the next school year.

The Drayton Valley board discussed the possibility of hiring a part-time assistant superintendent, part-time psychologist to assist with the work-load of the existing superintendent. The cost would be shared amongst the four boards.

The board came to a stalemate of sorts when they concluded that while they were not steadfastly against or for the proposal from Rocky Mountain House, they would like to have more research done on the cost-efficiency of the joint superintendency.

Poets hob-knob with superstars

By Paul Cadia

How does an ordinary civilian of a rural town get the opportunity to hob-knob with illustrious superstars like Bob Hope, Tony Randall, Helen Hayes and yes, even Willard Scott.

Gwen Hooks and Cheryl Cox have found a way via their membership in the World of Poetry organization.

Hooks and Cox have both won poetry awards through the World of Poetry, and have been invited to attend the fifth annual convention in Washington, D.C. Sept. 1-4. The aforementioned celebrities will be present along with 3,000 other established poets, publishers and editors.

"It is the first award that I've ever won and I was excited about it," Cox said about winning the 1989

Silver Poet award. "Right now I'm concentrating on getting a good job so I can get enough money to go down."

Cox, 17, a Grade 11 student at Breton high school will be presented the Silver Poet award Sept. 2 at the convention.

Hooks, born and raised in Breton, won her Golden Poet award in 1988 for a poem entitled Things I Remember.

"I just happened to be going through a paper and saw the ad, and sent in the poem," Hooks said reminiscing about her first affiliation with the World of Poetry.

Hooks, a retired school teacher, has had poetry published in the Ladder of Time, an historical introspective of Breton. The World of Poetry wants to publish her poem, A New Life, in a book of poetry.

The World of Poetry convention is offering a $15,000 first prize for the best poem.

As the quarterly newsletter states, "not surprisingly, anyone who's anyone will be there."

Gwen Hooks (left) and Cheryl Cox (right) are recipients of the World of Poetry's prestigious awards. Both hope to be in attendance from Sept. 1-4 for the fifth annual convention in Washington.

Rob MacIntosh, who has been at H.W. for the past 10 years, is working with the Pembina Institute.

Calvin Monty is going to Leduc City after five years at the junior high school.

Darlene Hill is off to Red Deer for a new teaching position after one year at H.W.

Two other teachers, Susan Schwindt and Julie Johnson, are going on maternity leave.

Principal Colin Cavanagh, who will be returning for his 10th year, says recruiting has already started to fill the vacant positions.

This is the biggest changeover in staff that H.W. has seen in nine years.

Council has been trying for several years without much success, to get Alberta Transportation to take over the airport operation.

Howard Olson, chairman of the town's transportation committee says the local terminal building is 'pretty sick' when compared to other towns in the area.

MLA Tom Thurber sat in on recent discussions regarding possible government control of the facility.

The annual inspection of the airport was carried out in April and a number of deficiencies were identified.

On the runway, taxiway and apron, crack filling was recommended, especially at the north end of the runway.

In regards to runway lighting, two lenses were either damaged or not the correct type, several bulbs were not lighting up and the windsock had faded.

Prize-winning drinking water available here

If you want prize-winning drinking water from your kitchen tap, you should be living in Hinton or Ponoka where Alberta Environment found the water the best.

Based on color, taste, odor and clarity, communities including Drayton Valley were judged on their water.

The overall winners in our area were Bowden and Camrose. Drayton Valley did not place at all.

The province of Alberta has excellent drinking water, so even if someone didn't place, just because they were taking part in the contest means their water had to be excellent," Susan MacKenzie of Alberta Environment said.

Stony Plain, Spruce Grove study new school districts

By Phil Melnychuk

Stony Plain Reporter

Stony Plain could be jumping on Spruce Grove's bandwagon in an effort to find a cheaper school system.

Town council met last Monday in the wake of school tax increases to consider participating in Spruce Grove's study on forming a new school district.

Parkland school board raised its take from Stony Plain taxpayers by 84.5 per cent this year after the split of the west end lopped off a wealthy power and pipeline assessment base.

Only an increase in residential growth and an overlevy from last year spared Stony Plain a school tax increase higher than 16 per cent.

The separation of the county's west end and the formation of the Twin Rivers school district came with government assurances of a minimal adverse impact for Parkland and area. But Stony Plain doesn't want to be stung again.

"When they first decided to split, we were simply being assured by the county of Parkland, that it would have no impact on the urban areas," Stony Plain Mayor Reg Kotch says.

"There were a couple of reports and everyone seemed to be drawing the same thing...that there would be no adverse effect."

"It's totally flabbergasting to be told at the eleventh hour this is the way," he added.

Kotch said town administration will do its own number crunching to try and anticipate its fate should Spruce Grove leave the Parkland school district to set up its own structure.

Junior Wardens fold due to lack of support

The Junior Forest Wardens, who have been active in Drayton Valley for five years, have folded.

Noreen Ewert, one of the original members, says the decision was made at the group's annual meeting June 14.

Ewert, who is leaving Drayton Valley after living here 14 years, says a lack of parent support and a leader for 1989-90 were the reasons for folding.

All the records will be forwarded to the Junior Forest Wardens' office in Edmonton.

Ewert indicated the decision to fold was obvious during the year with the number of parents who came out. At the end of the year, only 10 youngsters were participating in the program.

The Sarnia Police Force currently holds a Canada-wide warrant for the arrest of Gerald Robert St. Jean on a charge of first degree murder.

The charge stems from a shooting incident which occurred April 2 in Sarnia, Ont., resulting in the death of one man and the wounding of a second.

St. Jean is a caucasian male of medium build, 41 years of age. He stands five foot nine inches tall, 180 pounds, blue eyes and brown, greying hair with a receding hairline. He has numerous tattoos described as:

Back of left hand: the head of the devil; back of left fingers: L-O-V-E; back of right fingers: H-A-T-E; right upper arm: 'Mom & Dad' on a heart; right forearm: a ghost.

St. Jean is considered desperate and dangerous. Should you have any information on the above subject, contact your local RCMP.

Pointed lawn darts are banned but what about horseshoes?

A proposed ban of pointed-tip lawn darts isn't having any great effect in Drayton Valley.

"We don't carry them," says Hudson Bay manager Tom Woodward.

Alex Blais, owner/manager of Home Hardware, says his store sells a lot of lawn darts, but as of last week he was out.

When contacted by The Western Review, Blais wasn't actually sure if he carried the pointed-tip lawn darts or the rounded-tip model which is not included in the proposed ban.

While Blais admitted that any injuries caused by the lawn darts was unfortunate, he wondered where to draw the line.

Blais and Woodward were concerned about the use of horseshoes.

"We've been playing lawn darts for years," Blais stated.

The proposed ban was announced May 31 by Bernard Valcourt, minister of Consumer and Corporate Affairs, after he had received numerous report of injuries from the Canadian Pediatric Association. He did not say when the ban would take effect.

In the United States, where the model is already banned, three deaths and more than 5,000 injuries have been reported in the past 10 years.

At the recent MD meeting...

'Best bang for buck'

A recent MD accounts payable cheque list showed a substantial amount of money being spent in local businesses.

John Eriksson, manager, said the MD tries to support local businesses as much as possible.

There is a flip-side, though, he said. "We have a duty to ratepayers to act responsibly and do the best we can. It doesn't mean you use local businesses regardless of cost. Our duty is to get the best bang for the buck."

CRC grants lowered

MD manager John Eriksson said recently that CRC grants to the MD have been lowered from $12 per capita to $10 per capita.

"We (the MD) will reduce all our grants in the same ratio," he said.

Fire protection agreement

The MD Brazeau council motioned to proceed with a fire protection and mutual aid agreement between the MD and the county of Parkland recently.

"We're going to proceed and negotiate that with our neighbors," said John Eriksson, MD manager.

The agreement would see the two areas providing firefighting assistance to each other when required by the fire chief or his designate.

The only sub-office located in town is at Value Drug Mart.

RCMP report they have two suspects in connection with last January's sexual assault on a 19-year-old Drayton Valley woman.

However, they still want to talk to anyone who might have any information.

The Local Authorities Board is not expected to hold any public meetings to regards to the Alder Flats/municipal district annexation until the end of March.

Apparently, the board is too busy to handle the current annexation issue.

Powerhouse Further Education Council will be moving to the old town office when the consortium moves later this year.

In exhibition basketball last week Grade 6 students from Evergreen downed their teachers 17-13.

The senior boys basketball squad from H. W. Pickup split a pair of games last week.

They returned from Breton with a 48-12 win and then last Friday, dropped a home court 66-19 decision to Broxton Park.

Five now seeking Conservative nod

The number of people seeking the Progressive Conservative nomination in the Drayton Valley constituency has grown to five.

Erwin Zotzman of Warburg, Wayne Gent from Tomahawk, Grant Monsour of Drayton Valley and Calmar's Louise Rumbles have joined Tom Thurber of Winfield in the nomination race.

The nomination meeting to fill the vacancy will be held Feb. 10.

The vacancy was created when Shirley Cripps, Drayton Valley MLA for the past 10 years, said she wouldn't be seeking reelection.

Zotzman, former mayor of Warburg, has lived in that area for 51 years, the last 20

Gent has made his share of headlines in the past year as president of the Tomahawk Ratepayers Association.

Grant Monsour

He farms near Tomahawk. Monsour is starting his second year as president of the Drayton Valley Chamber of commerce and is also vice-Chairman of the United Church board of directors.

Hitchhikers pocket $2,200 in cash

A motorist making his way across northern Alberta just before Christmas had $2,200 stolen from him by two hitchhikers he befriended.

RCMP Const. Doug Hill said the motorist, a resident of Hay River, NWT, ended up in Drayton Valley where he reported the theft.

Hill said the man was travelling to Edmonton on Dec. 22 when he picked up the hitchhikers near Whitecourt.

The hitchhikers claimed they were travelling to Rocky Mountain House.

Park way through their journey, the motorist allowed one of the hitchhikers to drive while he caught up on his sleep.

He wakes up in the Derrick Mall parking lot," said Hill. "He's never been to Drayton Valley before in his life and he's missing $2,200." The money was stolen from his wallet.

Hill said the motorist provided RCMP with a brief description of the two hitchhikers.

One is described as a male in his mid-twenties between 6'8" and 5'10" and weighing about 150 pounds. His hair is reddish-brown in color.

The other is described as a male also in his mid-twenties about 6' in height and weighing about 175 pounds. His hair is dirty-blond in color.

Police are seeking the public's assistance.

District fees near the top

Members of the municipal district lead the way in fees paid for attending meetings.

A survey conducted by The Western Review shows Reeve Henry Rondeau is paid $250 per day for attending meetings while councillors get $200 per day.

Members at large, who sit on MD committees, are eligible for $150 per day.

However, there is one stipulation.

If the meeting is less than four hours, the reeve, councillors and members at large would only get half the amount.

Mayor Bob Mayhew and the elected councillors receive $150 for attending council meetings and $50 for other meetings. The mayor also receives $700 per month and the councillors get $175.

The County of Parkland pays $150 per day to councillors and school board trustees, based on a four-hour day.

The Yellowhead Regional Planning Commission pays their members $100 for a meeting that extends past the three-hour mark. The rate for a meeting less than three hours is $75.

Love of sport inspires 'crazy' man to create own trout pond

By Susan Moscicki

People thought he was crazy, but Tony kept right on digging, ...and digging, ...and digging!

And the end result was a body of water covering approximately three-and-a-half acres of land, and is now known as Mirlach's Pond.

It took Tony Mirlach one and a half years to dig out the pond, and another couple of years before he could put any fish in it.

The pond is now stocked with about 800 rainbow trout, as well as an unknown number of perch.

Tony loves the sport of fishing and says he started digging the pond seven years ago because he "just started running out of time to go anywhere (to fish)."

His love of the sport started with childhood fishing trips with his father. "My father was a great fisherman. He would crawl a mile on broken glass to go fishing."

Another 100 rainbow trout will be stocked in the pond this year and Tony says, "Next year I may try some arctic char. They're becoming available for fish farmers."

What should a person feed their fish if they have over 800 to feed? Tony's advice is dog food. He says commercial fish food is more expensive, and seems to make the fish taste different. When he is alone by the pond, Tony says he can almost get the fish to eat the dog food right out of his hand.

Tony wants to level off the ground near his flat-bed trailer dock to allow easier access by wheelchair. He feels local senior citizens unable to make a long trip to go fishing would be able to travel the short distance (one-and-a-half miles south of Drayton Valley) to fish in his pond.

"If they called me, I would let them fish here."

No story such as this would be complete without the traditional 'it-was-that-long' fish tale. Tony says he caught a fish in his pond last year that weighed nine-and-a-half pounds and measured 28 inches in length.

"That's the biggest one that I've caught," he says. But he believes there are larger ones he has not yet been able to catch.

Tony believes he is preserving a sport that will soon be next to impossible to do. "The way I see it, in 10 years there will be no place to fish."

Although many thought he was crazy to dig the pond when he started, Tony says, "It's actually becoming popular. A lot of my neighbors are digging their own now."

Tony Mirlach

The fish are 'crazy' over the dog food.

A paradise get-away.

Red tape holds up mill deal

Government red tape is holding up a deal between Pelican Spruce Mills and the Japanese.

Late last year, the Japanese conducted a series of 10 tests at the Edson and Drayton Valley plants.

If and when the deal is completed, Pelican will be the first non-plywood mill in the world to get JAS (Japan's official stamp).

Pelican has been sending some of their oriented strandboard into Japan, but it has been a non-certified product. That could change once the red tape clears.

Pelican had expected the deal to be completed in March.

"We're hearing more favorable things," says Pelican spokesman Bob Olson.

Olson is keeping his fingers crossed the deal will be completed this month.

HATS OFF TO OUR HEROS

Kelly Nuysen likes his position as Emergency Medical Technician (EMT) and supervisor for Entwistle, but says he looks forward to going to school for nursing training in the future.

Nuysen has been an EMT for about six years, the last two in and around Entwistle/Drayton Valley.

He enjoys the friendliness of the people in this area. "It's easy to get to know people."

The 25-year-old Kelowna-born man says his favorite pastime is going back to the Okanagan on holiday.

Nuysen spends his spare time participating in sports such as water-skiing, downhill skiing, swimming and fishing. He is engaged to be married, but he and his lucky bride-to-be have not yet set a wedding date.

Parkland wants to keep constables

County of Parkland council is applying to the solicitor general to keep its patrol force employed.

Authorization from the solicitor general to employ special constables is required under the new Police Act.

The application from the county also requests authorization for the patrol to enforce some additional provincial acts like the Animal Protection Act and the Petty Trespass Act along with the Highway Traffic Act and the Liquor Control Act. All current constable appointments expire July 21. Employers of special constables must have their employees reappointed in order for them to continue working as special constables.

Animal officer named

The town has a new animal control officer.

Doreen Clark, owner of Grandee Kennels has been hired to replace Dwane Elliot who resigned.

Clark, who lives four miles south on Highway 22, previously boarded animals for the town when Jim Baines was the animal control officer and also for a short time when Elliot was hired.

Dave Turner, the town's bylaw enforcement officer, has toured Clark's facilities and found them to be very clean. An inspection of the facilities was also carried out by the SPCA at the request of Clark.

What do you think?

Canada Post claims Canadians in rural Canada are overwhelmingly satisfied with the new retail postal services offered in their community, according to a recent Gallup market survey conducted in May of this year.

What's your opinion?

Music-loving teacher retiring

After working in the school district for 25 years, Lil Ross is retiring.

Although Ross has taught many subjects throughout the years, her favorite has always remained music.

"I remember years ago when I was working at another school and I had to carry around a box of odd instruments and my own guitar. When I came to Eldorado and saw all these instruments, I was in my glory," Ross says.

Ross has always been music minded and comes from a large musical family. She says they used to gather around the piano and sing.

She prefers the guitar over any other instrument.

"When teaching you can become part of the group with a guitar; when you are at the piano you are sort of outside the circle."

Ross intends to do a little travelling and just do the things she has not had time to do while working.

"My garden has been neglected, my house has been neglected," she says.

She loves Drayton Valley and doesn't have any plans of leaving.

"We may take off on short trips but we will always come back."

Lil Ross

"...intends to travel, but will always come back to Drayton Valley..."

Volunteers, participation vital

Pastor Steven Eaton and wife Becky announce the arrival of their second son, Aaron Daniel, June 5.

The Tomahawk and District Sports Agra Association reminds everyone they meet the third Monday of every month at the Agra/Plex at 8 p.m.

Volunteers and community participation is vital to the growth of the organization. Anyone having ideas regarding community projects or activities is asked to attend the meetings. Your support is greatly appreciated.

The Tomahawk Silver Tops meet Thursdays at 1 p.m. at the Agra/Plex. Their recent garage sale was successful and they are now busy planning for the Canada Day celebrations.

There will be a pioneer display presenting antiques and old-time tools and labor-saving items.

The seniors are also planning a craft and art display with items provided by members of the community. It would be appreciated if anyone having items for either of the above displays, could loan them to the seniors for the exhibits. Contact Bina Berryhill, Dorothy Domke or Alma Schadeck for further information.

The Capra Valley Chapter of the Alberta Goat Breeders Association hosts their third annual goat show at the Agra/Plex July 1. This year the show will be a Canadian Goat Society-sanctioned show with a change of format to include bucks and permanent champions. Sara Emond (Northwind Alpines) will be judging and the show should attract some of the

It's nice to be going, knowing I'm coming back, says teacher

'Oil will be well' with Frank Maddock high school teacher George Matheson when he heads for Texas later this summer on a one-year teacher exchange program.

Matheson says he is one of two teachers in Alberta going to the United States on exchange.

Matheson and his family will be leaving Drayton Valley in mid-August, and will be residing in Decatur, Texas in the home of the exchange teacher (Jan Atkins) for the next school year.

Atkins will be coming to Drayton Valley and residing in the Matheson home.

"I'm looking forward to the change," says Matheson. "And getting away from winter."

"I'm really excited about it. A change is like a rest. It's like taking a year off."

The Grade 11 and 12 English teacher will be teaching Grade 12 English literature in Decatur.

Matheson intends to "say

George Matheson

yes to everything." He says he will be willing to try new things and do things the way Texans do, not expect them to do things the way Albertans do.

But home is still where his heart is, and Matheson says, "Drayton Valley has everything that I want. It's nice to be going, knowing that I'm coming back."

Videodisc an alternative

By Samia Vallemand

Since its beginning, home video has been dominated by the videocassette in its various forms. But, almost from the start there has been an alternative medium — the videodisc.

Except for a small number of enthusiasts who have recognized its technical superiority all along, the videodisc has failed to catch the interest of consumers or manufacturers. This may change.

The LaserDisc uses the same optical technology as the familiar compact disc and offers many of the same advantages. The picture quality is comparable to Super VHS. One drawback is the inability to record.

So far, relatively few discs have shown up in Canadian stores, but more and more are being released abroad. These are generally available by mail order to consumers in this country. The machines themselves are relatively scarce as well. Only a handful of manufacturers are currently offering players, which range in price from about $1,200 to $5,000.

Few observers would argue with the contention the LaserDisc currently represents the 'Rolls Royce' of home video equipment.

Bike helmet standard due this summer

CSA's new bicycle helmet standard is expected to be published this summer.

Following publication of this standard, CSA will be offering a testing and certification program to bicycle helmet manufacturers who wish to apply the CSA mark to their products.

The new standard will detail test requirements and test methods for certification purposes. Some of these requirements will entail impact and stability tests on the helmet, and a retention test on the chin strap.

PCBs, acid rain and the greenhouse effect were practically unheard of a decade ago. Yet today they are a concern to us.

Efforts to collect paper, bottles and cans for recycling have been rewarded by community support. Governments are more responsive to the concerns of environmental groups as they formulate policy on resource management.

Certainly this renewed concern is good if it motivates us to curb careless abuse of the physical world.

Why should we be responsible in our management of the environment? The answer in a word is — stewardship. Three thousand years ago a wise king wrote these words: "The earth and everything in it is the Lord's."

From the Pastor's Pen

This world is our home but it does not belong to us. It belongs to God. Just as we would respect the furnishings of another person's home when we visit, so we respect the streams and rivers, the woods and wildlife of this world in which we live as God's guests.

The Creator is the Owner. Ours is only a temporary lease. We live 70 or 80 years and then our tenancy is terminated. The next generation is left behind to accept the environmental legacy we leave. Certainly they will evaluate our stewardship.

Even more awesome is the fact that God will ask an account of our stewardship. In view of this fact, we ought to pay careful attention to the management of the environment.

Summer school may be offered locally

If enrollment permits, Drayton Valley will have a summer school program for elementary and junior high school students. If there is enough to begin, depending on an enrollment, Bevan says there are locations available for summer school at Breton noon, elementary, Evergreen and

Dr. George Bevan, H.W. Pickup, superintendent of the Twin Rivers school board, says presently there are only four students who have enrolled from Evergreen. Subjects offered are language arts and mathematics.

Arnold to teach in Japan

Murray Arnold will be missed by students of Frank Maddock high next term when he takes a one-year leave of absence to go to Japan.

Arnold is not yet sure where in Japan he will be sent but he will be leaving Drayton Valley sometime in late August.

Arnold volunteered to go to Japan when he heard through his church they were looking for teachers.

"I was actually offered a position teaching junior and senior high in an American missionary school, but I turned it down. I want to throw myself into the culture and teach Japanese people," Arnold said.

Arnold will be teaching English to adult students.

As to where he will be living, he is not sure.

"The church is organizing that. I don't know if I'll be living with families or what."

Arnold has been teaching English and theatre at Frank Maddock for the past three years. Before that he came to Drayton Valley after completing his degree at the University of Alberta.

"I really like Drayton Valley, and I like the kids here," he says explaining that in one year he will Arnold is single and will be going to Japan alone. His girlfriend, who grew up in Japan, is attending university here and will not be accompanying him.

In Memoriam

LINGARD - In loving memory of Don Lingard who died two years ago, June 22, 1987.

No one heard the footsteps of angels drawing near. Who took from earth to heaven, the one we loved so dear.

Though your smile is gone forever, And your hand we cannot touch, We have so many memories of you. The one we loved so much.

But who we learn to lose you, But you did not go alone. For part of you went with you. The day God called you home.

Sadly missed by Hazel, Lon and Wade.

LINGARD
 In memory of Donald Grant, who passed away June 22, 1987.
 Those whom we love go out of sight, But never out of mind.
 You are remembered in the hearts of those you left behind.
 God saw the road was getting rough, And he closed your weary eyes.
 And whispered "Peace be Thine".
 Those whom we love go out of sight, But never out of mind.
 You are remembered in the hearts of those you left behind.
 God saw the road was getting rough, And he closed your weary eyes.
 And whispered "Peace be Thine".

Lions a busy club

It's a well known fact in many communities that service clubs and organizations play a major role. It's no different in Drayton Valley.

One of these service clubs is the Lions.

Recently they sponsored a Christmas tree burn. And despite -25 C degree temperatures, the event was a success.

It was very encouraging to see the community support this event, despite the elements.

The response the Christmas tree burn generated has to be encouraging for the Lions.

The Lions have also been busy since last July with their paper recycling project.

This is another project which seems to have attracted community support, as the bin behind the Beehive Workshop always seems full. In fact, in recent weeks, paper has been stacked on the ground.

The Lions are to be commended for these two projects.

Not a new problem

The turnout at the polls for the recent Twin Rivers school division election was poor.

According to the official figures, only 399 voters turned out in Drayton Valley compared to 548 in Euton.

While some people have expressed their concerns, it's not a new problem.

For proof of this, you don't have to look any further than the last municipal election. It seemed at that time, that without a mayor's race, there was little interest.

And since that time, we've seen poor turnouts at various polls.

It has been said that a lot of people didn't know where to vote on the recent school issue. Let that be a lesson for anyone planning any public election in the future.

If arena allowed vending machines, why not Park Valley pool?

Town council has opened an old can of worms.

They have decided to allow vending machines at the Drayton Sports Centre. But at the same time, they will not allow vending machines at the Park Valley indoor swimming pool.

Councillor Jean Saunders was the only one to oppose council's Jan. 12 decision allowing the vending machines in the sports centre.

She feels, and rightly so, that if council is going to allow them in the sports centre they should also be allowed in the pool.

It was in May of '85 that council in their wisdom, decided against allowing a chocolate bar vending machine at the pool. Instead, they cleared the way for rental groups to allow liquor.

Frankly Speaking

The ALCB shortly thereafter, said they wouldn't issue a permit for the pool. And that was the end of that issue.

Recreation director Dennis Woolsey felt very strongly about installing the vending machine.

It was shortly after that, Woolsey was dismissed.

Back to the present.

Paul Nielsen, the current recreation director, says the arena deserves a vending machine because it is more of a spectator facility than the pool.

Hasn't our recreation director, and council for that matter, that acted on his recommendation, ever heard of pool users enjoying a soda pop after a swim or a session in the hot tub?

It should be pointed out the vending machine in the sports centre was installed free of charge by the same company that donated the score clock. Do they have another clock and soda pop dispenser for the pool?

Election should have priority over tree burn

Dear Editor,

I am writing in regards to your coverage of the Twin River school board election.

First of all, the Jan. 10 issue of your paper featured a picture of the Christmas tree burn. This was just one day before the first-ever Twin Rivers school district election. Would it not have been more appropriate to have had a feature on the election and a list of where the polling stations were in each ward?

I would also like to comment on the coverage given to one of the candidates — Mr. Henry Rondeau.

All but two of the candidates had a small profile in the Jan. 4 paper. The two candidates that were not in the Jan. 4 issue had space in the Jan. 10 issue. That was fine. However, for some reason Mr. Rondeau was given a long column "MP reeve eager to tackle position on new board."

The wording in the headline would have one believe he had already won the election.

Then, in the Jan. 17 editorial: "Election marred by lack of voters," you stated "one of the biggest upsets occurred in Ward 2 where Brazeau MD Reeve Henry Rondeau came in fourth behind winner Colene Davie."

Then Mr. Rondeau went on to say why he felt he had lost the election. I have two beefs with this. First, why was it an upset? No one in Ward 2 thought so. The people voted for the person they felt would take the time to do the best job. That person was Colene Davie.

Secondly, please tell me why it was necessary to have Mr. Rondeau explain why he felt he lost the election. There were 12 other candidates, including myself, who lost the election and we weren't asked why we felt we had lost. (Not that I would have wanted to be asked.)

When it comes to any kind of an election shouldn't your paper try to be impartial to all the candidates?

Instead of pondering over why Mr. Rondeau lost, why not give a big bouquet to the six people who won? I would like to extend my congratulations to the newly-elected trustees and I wish them good luck!

Dear Editor,

Re: Jan. 11 election of school trustees.

I address this letter first to the editor of The Western Review.

The Jan. 10 issue of the paper was published one day prior to a very important election in this area. On the front page of the paper was Shirley Cripps' announcement not to run again in the next election.

I do not disagree that this is news, but the election of new school trustees should have had, some mention. The education of the future generations of this area should have been a priority.

There was also no reminder at all to get out and vote, where to vote, who could vote, etc. The second page of the paper mentions the election, but still no reminders to the voters of the area.

I secondly address this letter to the voters and taxpayers in the new MD and the town of Drayton Valley.

The few people who voted should take pride in the fact they cared enough to vote on a very important issue — our children. To those of you, and there are lots of you who never voted, I hope you have the decency to not criticize who was elected, or the decisions they make for the next three years and nine months, about the education of your children.

Third and last, I congratulate those people who ran in the election and were successfully elected. The future of our children rests in your hands, and I sincerely trust all your decisions will be of benefit to each and every child in the school system.

Abortion law kills weak

Dear Editor,

Jan. 23, 1989 — one year since the Supreme Court of Canada declared our abortion law to be unconstitutional. Since that time, the unborn have been left without legal protection.

A country passes laws to try to regulate human activities which are deemed to be detrimental either to individuals or to the peaceful functioning of society.

It is one of the primary duties of a state to protect its weakest members from its stronger ones. Supreme Court judges recognized this last Jan. 23 when they reiterated "the state has an interest in the protection of the fetus." It is therefore the duty of Canada to pass a law prohibiting abortion in order to protect the most defenceless members for the human family, our unborn children.

Besides maintaining order, the law is also a teacher, sometimes the only one, of what actions are good and bad. Absence of a law on abortion teaches as well: it teaches that there's nothing wrong with killing tiny babies, that they're not important, not worth protecting.

Is that what we want to say?

New Twin Rivers school board sworn in

By Steve Fletcher

A crowd of about 60 people filed into a cool Evergreen gymnasium last Tuesday night to witness the swearing-in of the first-ever Twin Rivers school board.

Elected chairman of the board was trustee Vi Helm. Jim Reid was elected vice-chairman.

The evening meeting was highlighted by a series of glowing tributes from public officials.

Rene Marriner, the school district's out-going official trustee, described the session as an "historic occasion."

He said the establishment of new divisions have been "few and far between" over the last 50 years — presenting area residents with a rare opportunity.

Superintendent of schools Dr. George Bevan said the six trustees must be "somewhat awed" by the task before them.

Noting the board was elected for an extended term of three years and nine months, Bevan quipped: "We can't let them off the hook if they tell us they haven't been around long enough come the next election."

Mary Tkachuk, County of Parkland superintendent, said his board "feels a sense of pride" with the formation of Twin Rivers.

"They feel they have left behind a legacy — a legacy of fine buildings, a legacy of good staff, a legacy of sound stewardship," he added.

"If you want to focus on what is in the best interests of the students, you'll never make a mistake."

"Never underestimate the importance of your role," trustees were advised by Albert Klapstein, chairman of the County of Leduc board of education.

"If you will focus on what is in the best interests of children and students, you will never make a mistake."

Dr. Larry Ferguson, executive director of the Alberta School Association, said education "is taking on a measure of importance that I think it never had previously."

"It seems the welfare of the population is now directly related to the level of education," he added.

Ferguson then presented the new school board with a copy of the association's Code of Ethics.

The ceremony portion of the meeting concluded with the swearing-in, which was conducted by Drayton Valley MLA Shirley Cripps.

"It's an exciting opportunity," Cripps told trustees. "No job worth doing doesn't have a few tough parts, but I'm sure you'll enjoy the challenge."

Official trustee Rene Marriner hands over the gavel to newly-elected board chairperson Vi Helm.

School board to work to develop division

The Twin Rivers school board will have to "work carefully" at developing the new division, says chairman Vi Helm.

Calling the division a "child of two very good parents" — the counties of Parkland and Leduc, Helm told fellow trustees they have a "big act to follow in keeping our schools the best in the province."

Helm was speaking at the first meeting of the board, held last Tuesday night at Evergreen school.

A former chairman of Parkland's board of education, Helm ran unopposed to head the Twin Rivers board.

Ward 3 representative Jim Reid was elected vice-chairman.

The two-hour meeting, which included speeches and a swearing-in ceremony, ended with the election of members to various board committees.

The question of trustee remuneration was tabled until the next meeting on Feb. 1.

Lions club prepares to send paper

The Lions are preparing to send out their first load of paper.

Erich Wagner, chairman of the Lions recycling paper project says between 20 and 25 tons of paper have been collected.

The Lions have delayed sending out their first semi-trailer load due to the drop in recycled paper prices. They have dropped from $60 to the current $20 per ton.

"Traditionally they drop in the winter," Wagner says.

Schools, most major companies and individuals have been contributing paper to the project which started in September.

But the project, all handled by volunteers, isn't without problems.

Wagner says the biggest headache is handling paper contributions in plastic bags. It would be appreciated if people would either use brown paper bags or bundle the papers.

Several groups, such as the Pile Base Rangers pee wee hockey team, Scouts and a group from the Catholic Church have been assisting with sorting the paper.

All funds received from the sale of the paper will go toward community projects.

Area communities help Jaime's plight

Hearts in two communities have been touched by Jaime Gilbert, a local 12-year-old girl who was diagnosed last month with a rare brain malformation.

Following last week's story, The Western Review received numerous telephone calls from people in Drayton Valley and Entwistle who plan to donate money and start fund-raising efforts.

After reading Jaime will need prolonged radiation treatment in the U.S., the staff of Entwistle's Credit Union opened a trust fund.

Staff member Annabel Hoople said donations may be made at the Entwistle branch.

Donations can also be dropped off at the Bank of Montreal in Drayton Valley.

Jane Robinson, Jaime's mother, is one of the trustees over this account.

Though details have not been finalized, the Larriettes hockey team plans to stage an exhibition hockey game against local teachers, possibly from Evergreen school, to raise additional funds.

Coach Larry Nelson hopes to match or beat the $500 raised at a similar game last year for a family whose home was destroyed by fire.

A local mother is in the process of organizing a Valentine's Day dance at Evergreen, where Jaime went to school before she collapsed and was rushed to Edmonton's University Hospital for tests.

Cherie Gwin said she's never attempted such an event but was overwhelmed by Jaime's plight.

An ad hoc committee has been set up at Evergreen school to arrange various fund-raising events including the donation of all doughnut sales.

Entwistle Lions Club president Dick Balfour will also bring the issue forward at the next club meeting Jan. 24. He plans to initiate another fund-raising event in Entwistle.

School bus driver fed up with dangerous drivers

By Belinda Atkinson

A local school bus driver is fed up with drivers in town and ready to press charges against the next person who endangers a student's life.

Barbara Gabrielson has reported numerous drivers to RCMP in the last three years but always stopped short of pressing charges.

"I've gotten to the point where I could scream," she said. "I'll go through the hassle and take them to court."
